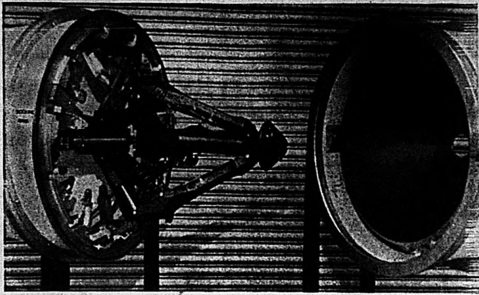
Mission in Doubt

Apollo Spacemen Baffled By Difficulty in Docking



Docking Device

The Apollo 14 lunar mission has had a problem in transportation docking. The trouble arose in the capture latches located at the tip of the probe assembly at left which failed to operate when inserted into docking collar of the lunar landing craft, right. (AP Photo)

Linking Device Now Won't Fail

HOUSTON (AP) — The Apollo 14 crew, using a flashlight and radioed do-it-your-self instructions, tried unsuccessfully today to pinpoint the cause of a malfunction that threatens to wipe out their long-sought landing on the forbidding moonscape of Fra Mauro.

Alan Shepard, the patriarch of American spacemen, and rookies Edgar Mitchell and Stuart Roosa deliberately tried for more than an hour to make a linking mechanism fail to work—as it had when they attempted to dock their command ship with the lunar lander earlier.

"It works," Roosa said finally. "Just real fine."

The apparatus must be able to work for its next use, when Shepard and Mitchell would return from the lunar surface to link again with the command ship piloted by Roosa.

"We will have to convince ourselves . . . that the thing is indeed satisfactory for docking," said Sigurd Sjoberg, director of flight operations.

Asked whether the astronauts will go through with Friday's landing attempt on the moon's craggy highlands, Sjoberg said: "I'd like not to speculate on that right now."

The astronauts worked the latches by hand on instructions from Houston without a single failure.

"In other words, what you are trying to tell me is you still haven't come up with anything that would be a problem," Mission Control said.

"That's basically it," said Roosa.

"You've exhausted our imagination for right now on trouble-shooting the probe," said Mission Control. "We'll worry about it some more overnight and be back with you in the morning."

There was no argument from the astronauts, who had been awake for more than 19 hours by that time and in the spacecraft for 16 of those. No threat to their safety was involved.

Mission Control reported all three retired by 7:50 a.m. EST for their first night en route to the moon. They roused for less than a minute to chitchat but were reported sacked in and apparently willing to stay 20 minutes later.

At that point Apollo 14 was 90,037 miles from earth and streaking toward their target at 4,366 miles an hour.

Experts who had watched their efforts via television studied the problem during the crew's 10 hours of sleep time.

Unlike Apollo 13, which was endangered by an explosion, this was a little—but frustrating—problem, Sjoberg said if the landing could not be made, the astronauts would attempt an alternate mission of orbiting the moon.

The malfunction confronted the astronauts three hours after launch Sunday when they turned their command ship for docking.

On previous flights the manoeuvre was routine. The mother ship would edge forward from its stack, turn around, and hook on to the lunar lander nose-to-nose. Then the command ship can pull the moonship out of the spent third stage of the Saturn V rocket.

This time, three small latches on the docking mechanism—shorter than a cigarette and not much wider—failed to lock into position in five move-up, back-out tries. On the sixth, using an unorthodox procedure, the ships mated.

Once past that hurdle, the as-

Palestinian Guerrillas' Base Destroyed by Israeli Raiders

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli raiding parties attacked two villages in south Lebanon during the night, and informed sources said they destroyed a Palestinian guerrilla regional headquarters.

A spokesman for the Israeli military command said an Israeli soldier was killed and three were wounded. A number of Arabs also were casualties, he said.

The sources said heavy guerrilla resistance at the headquarters caused all the Israeli casualties. This was at Al-Kyam, four miles north of the frontier.

Guerrilla sources in Beirut claimed that 15 Israelis were killed or wounded. These sources said the guerrillas in Al-Kyam were already on a "maximum alert," and the Israeli raiders "virtually walked into an ambush." The guerrillas suffered no casualties, the sources said.

The Israeli command said the other target was the village of Kafer Kela, just west of the Upper Galilee town of Metulla, and sources in Israel said two houses used as guerrilla recruiting centres were destroyed.

The sources said there was little resistance there and that the Israelis moved an Arab family out before destroying one house.

Metulla has been the target of several guerrilla attacks recently, the latest Friday night. The military spokesman said 10 Israeli settlements have been attacked from Lebanon since Jan. 10.

Yasser Arafat, leader of Al Fatah guerrilla organization and titular head of the Palestine Liberation Organization of all guerrilla groups, told Premier Saeb Salam four weeks ago that the raids from Lebanese territory would cease.

The Israelis renewed their retaliatory raids the last week in December after a three-month lull. Two weeks ago they hit two fishing villages 28 miles up the Lebanese coast.

London District Residents Still Digging Their Way Out

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Six days after last Tuesday's blizzard, the city of London was back to normal, but residents of the rural area north of it were still digging themselves out early this morning.

Some highways were still open to only one lane of traffic, and many dairy farmers were still dumping milk they were unable to ship because of clogged country roads.

Boards of education in Huron, Perth, Middlesex, Oxford and Bruce counties were leaving decisions on re-opening schools closed since Tuesday's storm, to the individual principals.

Northern Huron and Perth counties and southern Bruce County appeared to be having the most difficulty recovering from the storm.

Late Sunday, heavy drifting was making driving hazardous in the Clinton and Goderich areas in Huron county, and had blocked a Canadian National Railways line south of Clinton, 42 miles north of London.

The snow stranded two diesel engines and a caboose near Brucefield, six miles south of Clinton. Work crews were sent from London to free them Sunday night.

Two highways in the Listowel area, Highway 86 west to Wingham, and Highway 23 south to Mitchell, were open to only one lane of traffic in spots, as was Highway 21 from Kincardine south to Port Albert.

Listowel is 25 miles north of Stratford: Kincardine is 40 miles south of Owen Sound.

In Goderich, the owner of Gardiner's Dairy said many dairy farmers in his area had been forced to dump thousands of pounds of milk since Tuesday's storm.

THE WEATHER

Horsburgh Readmitted

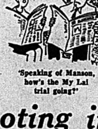
NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Rev. Russell D. Horsburgh was readmitted to the United Church of Canada Saturday as a minister in good standing and with no restrictions, by vote of the United Church General Council.

It was the first time in the 45-year history of the United Church, officials said, that the general council had overruled a presbytery.

In 1964, Russell David Horsburgh was the central figure in a sex-in-a-church-lounge court case. At that time he was minister of Park Street United Church in Chatham, Ont., 44 miles east of Windsor, Ont.

His conviction twice was upheld on appeal but, in 1967, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that a mistrial had occurred in Chatham and ordered a new trial.

This was held in 1968 and after a nine-day trial, when only three of 14 witnesses who testified against him in 1964 were called, Mr. Horsburgh was acquitted.



'Speaking of Manson, how's the My Lai trial going?'

Skier Strangles

ORILLIA (CP) — A 16-year old Toronto girl died of strangulation Sunday when her scarf caught in a tow rope at the nearby Mount St. Louis ski resort.

Police identified the girl as Alice Grosz, one of 17 young people on a school skiing tour from Toronto. She was pronounced dead at the scene by Coroner Dr. R. F Brown of Coldwater, Ont.

Belleville's Winter Carnival is coming up this weekend, but youngsters in the Station Street area were treated to a prelude Saturday when neighbors banded together to give them their own carnival on skates. One Dead in Rioting in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One person was shot to death, more than 25 were injured and 70 businesses were damaged or burned when violence exploded after a weekend demonstration against the police in a mainly Mexican-American district.

It was the third major outbreak of violence in six months in East Los Angeles, home to more than 600,000 Mexican-Americans. A sheriff's spokesman estimated property damage at $200,000.

Twice, officers fired shotguns as more than 1,500 mainly young persons rampaged through the four-square-mile area. Rioters threw rocks and bricks at officers, attacked them with boards, and threw firebombs into businesses. Officers used teargas and fought hand-to-hand. Firemen answering alarms were stoned.

At least 68 persons were arrested, mostly for investigation for assault.

Eleven of the injured were sheriff's deputies.

Many of the injured civilians were in hospital for shotgun wounds.

The outbursts Sunday began after 5,000 persons chanted anti-police slogans such as "death to the pigs" at a park rally. Part of the crowd marched to a nearby sheriff's station and threw rocks at the building and patrol cars.

The crowd moved on to the district's business section and surrounded a patrol car. Officers said the car's occupants fled on foot, and deputies arriving at the scene fired at demonstrators with shotguns when they charged the officers.

Mayor Says Operation 'A Disappointment'

American Superior Electric Phasing Out Here

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

American Superior Electric Company today announced it is suspending operations — four years after its arrival was believed to mark a turning point in a new era of industrial development in Belleville.

Plant manager Alden B. Summerville, announcing the shutdown, said failure of general economic conditions to perform as expected had forced the shutdown — now set for March.

Mr. Summerville did not reveal how many employees would be affected.

But Mayor Russell Scott called the company's operation "a disappointment" since it located in Belleville.

Ald Gerald Joyce, industrial commission chairman, said employment at the plant had never been high.

Both civic spokesmen also noted the company's substantial land holdings surrounding its plant and hoped the site could be released for alternative development.

Mayor Scott said land originally purchased from the city by American Superior "far exceeded" company requirements.

The company launched operations on a 92-acre site south of Highway 401, purchased from the city in 1967 for $155,000. It was the first industrial development in what later became the city's northeast industrial park.

Mr. Summerville said today the company would maintain its facility intact — including the surrouhding land holdings.

The company announcement said American Superior will continue warehouse and repair functions at the Belleville plant.

"This activity was centralized in Belleville when the plant was constructed in 1967, and serves Superior Electric sales operations throughout Canada. The production facilities will remain intact," said the announcement.

Mayor Scott said the company's operation "since it purchased 92 acres of our prime industrial land has been a disappointment to myself and the majority of the citizens of Belleville."

Since employment at the plant had never been high "the amount of land has far exceeded the needs of the company," he said.

"It has been obvious for some time that they have been a subagent in the real estate business without remuneration to the taxpayers of Belleville.

"It's my hope," said Mayor Scott, that they might sell the whole operation to some more aggressive and expanding company that would contribute in proportion to the land purchased from the city at a minimum cost."

Ald. Joyce said he hoped the company would phase out its warehouse-service operation, and release the facilities to another company which "would undoubtedly employ more people."

American Superior, he said was located on a "showcase site and it was "hardly necessary to have such a valuable site used for a warehouse."

"Any change in occupance could only benefit higher employment," he said.

Ald. Joyce felt an alternative operation could be found for the site which he described as "choice industrial land."

The arrival of American Superior — a Connecticutt-based manufacturer of precision motors — was first announced Feb. 8, 1967.

It was the first acquisition by the city in many years of a big-name industry and its location opened up the city's first full-scale industrial park.

It was the first major coup in city efforts to expand its industrial base. Although not foreseen at the time, American Superior's arrival in the city was a forerunner of a new era of industrial development in Belleville, spurred by later introduction of provincial government incentives.

Among developments at the northeast industrial park were Brooke Bond and Allied Chemical.

Garage Staff Strikes Elliott

Garage workers went on strike at Elliott Motors — one of Belleville's largest automotive dealers — today, seeking higher pay.

On strike were 33 mechanics, body workers, cleanup men and apprentices — all members of the Teamsters Union Local 91.

Gordon Sinclair, Teamsters representative from Kingston, said the mechanics were seeking an increase in hourly wages from $2.90 to $3.50. They also wanted a closed shop operation.

The local was certified at Elliott Motors early last year and had been seeking a settlement through conciliation since August, said Mr. Sinclair.

Rules Are Established For Drop-in Centre

A teenagers' drop-in centre will open this coming weekend on a one-month trial basis.

About 100 young people and five adult advisors attended a meeting Sunday to organize the centre, located in the old firehall building at 394 Front St.

"We want this to be a place you're proud to come to, a place that adds something to the community, a place you can enjoy, whether you are straights, greasers or heads," said Roland Belanger, who single - handedly sponsored the centre until last October.

"Show the establishment you're capable of running such a place," he urged the young people who came to discuss the activities they wanted at the centre and the rules they would enforce.

They decided on a "no booze, no drugs, no fighting" policy and agreed that every member of the centre must take the personal responsibility to enforce the rule.

"You young people object to the double standard existing outside," Mr. Belanger told the group. "You object to the laws, on the books for centuries, that can't be enforced. It's up to you to make reasonable laws for the centre that will stick."

"It's not up to the supervisors to enforce the laws," he added. "It's up to the people who care — and I presume you all care or you wouldn't be here today."

The group voted in favor of the suggestion that the use of a school gym be secured once a week for athletic activities organized by the drop-in centre's youth.

Use of a swimming pool, if time could be obtained, was also approved and the young people asked for chess, cards, a ping pong table and television at the centre.

A juke box will be the sole means of financial support for the centre. Only young people over 16 will be admitted.

Exhaust Pollution Being Curtailed

American automobile designers are winning the battle against air pollution originating from exhaust fumes.

A recent press release from notes that 1971 American-built cars will cause 70 per cent less air pollution from exhaust fumes than the pre-1969 models.

The same release says that by 1975, pollution resulting from exhaust fumes will be down to 90 per cent less than pre-1969 models.

All of this is good news to Canadians who might consider themselves lucky they don't live in industrial areas such as Japan where air pollution is a definite health hazard.

The Safety League release states that air pollution is so bad in some Japanese cities that police officers have to be relieved after four hours duty — to allow them to receive oxygen.

In those cities, machines dispense oxygen much the same as with cigarettes and bubble gum in this country.

Snowmobile In Canal

TRENTON (Staff) — A snowmobiler crashed through the ice of the Murray Canal Saturday, but managed to clamber out unharmed.

However, the 1969 model snowmobile of Keith Robert Hays of Columbus, Ont. sank to the bottom.

Mr. Hays was driving his snow machine at the east end of the canal, where it enters the Bay of Quinte, about 2.55 Saturday afternoon when it went through the ice. After a struggle, he managed to climb out and did not require medical attention. He was alone at the time.

Mr. Hays is obtaining a diver to arise the machine.

Suspects Nabbed

TRENTON (Staff) — As the result of a stake-out on an east side residence, two men were arrested Friday night in connection with the theft of about $250 worth of tools from Herb Robinson Auto Wholesale the day before.

Police Chief David A. Saunders said today Randolf Anderson, 19, of Stanley St. and Gordon Welch, 20, of Front St. had been charged with break-enter and theft at the 76 Division St. premises.

Retarded Were the Big Winners in Exhibition Hockey Game

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The following story is true; only the names haven't been changed because most of those participating were as guilty as sin.

Of all the hockey played in the Quinte area, the Saturday night game between the Ottawa Rough Riders and the OPP Highwaymen seemed doomed to failure before they really had even started.

The capacity crowd was in stitches during introductions. And looking on with knowledgable reserve, the Ottawa lineup was convincing in their pre-game practicing.

Nobody could keep a serious face when the OPP players hit the ice. . . and there's more behind that statement than one might think!

With introductions like Ed "The Beast" Ray, Jim "Spaghetti Legs" Ramsbottom, and Mike "Captain Canada" Chalmers, in suitable attire, there was no doubt in anyones mind that serious hockey was forthcoming.

In fact, the only serious hockey played during the more than two hours of ice time occurred when the puck struck the ice and the linesman beat a hasty retreat to the boards. From that point on it was placing one's life in jeopardy to be seen near centre ice.

More than $1,000 was raised for the mentally retarded at this joint team effort.

The Ottawa lineup contained such notables as Gary Doyle, Tom Deacon, Carl Foley, Greg Thompson, Belleville's Terry Wellesley, John Kruspe, John Goudie, Doug Specht, Frank Reid and Gus Revensburg.

Joining the previously mentioned Picton players the lineup were Bill "Flash" MacGregor, Bill "Human Sieve" Chard, Bill "Wee Willy" Wably, Doug "Baby Face" Goodkey, George "The Ringer" Hanna, "Battling" Bill Keileber, Bill "Wild Willie" Watson, Ron "The Hulk" Graham, Don "Wonder" Watt and Picton Police Department officer "Dasher" Guy Brown.

As well as entertainment provided by the players, Don Foster's clowns provided further laughs to the evening.

The game ended in a traditional 6-6 tie.

Fairgrounds Race Meet A Success at Picton

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County's snow queen, Wanda Rand yesterday dropped the starter's flag for a snowmobile race meet held at Picton fairgrounds track. The races, co-sponsored by the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce and the Prince Edward Snowmobile Racing Association marked the close of a four-day winter carnival which began last Thursday evening.

More than 1,000 spectators crowded the grandstand and lined the track during the meet, ignoring a heavy snowfall which continued throughout the afternoon.

"The track was in beautiful shape," remarked race committee chairman Archie Kingma, "but in the snow the drivers couldn't see each other on the corners."

He observed that he successfully flagged the first machine and perhaps the second finishing each race. "But you could get run over by the third," he added describing the snowstorm's effect during the races.

Although yesterday's visibility hampered drivers in the turns, an accident - free meet was recorded by officials. Several minor spills punctuated the race program but none of the contestants was injured.

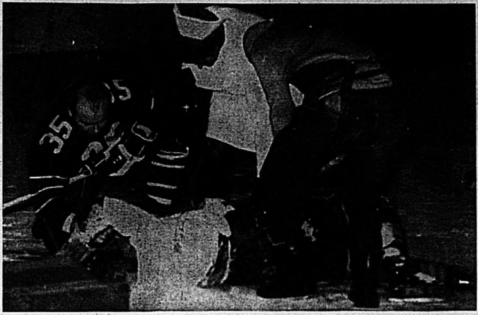
A total of 112 entries was reported for the race meet which offered cash prizes ranging from $60 for first place to $15 for fourth position. Trophies were awarded to the first three place winners of each class.

A highlight of the race meet was a draw for a snowmobile and trailer sponsored by the Picton Kinsmen Club. The machine was won by John Patterson, RR 3, Yarker. Winner of a gate draw was Peter Keogh, RR 2, Milford.

A fourth race meet is scheduled for Sunday, Feb. 28 at the fairgrounds track. Mr. Kingma said yesterday that the Prince Edward racing committee will organize a meet for the Belleville Agricultural Society in Belleville on Feb. 21.



Patient Concern

Medical attention for Don "Wonder" Watt was not lacking in quantity after his power play failure during Saturday night's Picton OPP Highwayman-Ottawa Rough Rider comedy hockey game. Ex-Ottawa Rough Rider, Frank Reid, presently with the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, is seen assisting Picton equine Dr. Karl "Cut-em-up" Mueller, medico for the game, as he and his "nurse" attempt to revive the downed player. Picton Mayor Margaret Ackerman opened the sell-out game which netted more than $1,000 for the mentally retarded.

Stolen TV Recovered

PICTON (Staff) — Picton police today reported the recovery of a color television set taken this weekend from Prince Edward TV, Main St.

A police spokesman said the television, valued at approximately $500 was removed from the shop during a bread-in which occurred between 11 p.m. Friday and 9:40 a.m. Saturday.

Two suspects, a man and woman, have been charged in connection with the theft.

Couple Robbed, Four Sought

BANCROFT (Staff) — Police have issued warrants for four men on charges of robbery with violence after a local couple were robbed on a lonely country road near here Saturday night.

Provincial police said Mr. and Mrs. Fred Godfrey were driving home along the Monk Road west of here when their car was waved down by four men.

Mr. Godfrey was roughed up and $20 taken. The men fled after disconnecting a spark plug wire in his automobile.

Police say one of the men being sought is from nearby Cardiff township and the others from Oshawa.

Too Much Winter For Carnival Crowd

PICTON (Staff) — A cross - country snowmobile race headlining Prince Edward County's first winter carnival tested the abilities of 54 drivers and their machines Saturday afternoon.

The 40-mile course, dotted with five check points, wound from West Lake to the Outlet then to Point Petre, Lake Ontario and South Bay. The race route continued through Greenbush to Picton Harbor where the finish line was marked with a scarlet and gold banner .

First driver to complete the race was Warren Ostrander, RR 4, Picton, finishing the course in one hour and 40 minutes. Mr. Ostrander was the first place winner in Group 3, C, D and E Modified.

Winner of the Group 1 A, B, C, Stock division was George Hunt, Owen Sound. Picton snowmobiler Robert MacKenzie won the Group 2, A and B modified and C stock division.

Race officials originally expected an entry of about 200 machines for the race which offered first prizes of $100. A heavy snowstorm in the Quinte area restricted weekend travel, however, and many contestants were forced to miss the event.

Because of the low entry, drivers and members of the race committee mutually agreed to cut prize monies by 50 per cent.

Chairman of the winter carnival, Archie Kingma, observed that most of the drivers entered in Saturday's cross-country race were from Prince Edward County.

A large crowd of spectators gathered at Prince Edward Yacht Club to watch snowmobilers race to the finish line. Approximately 40 of the 54 contestants completed the course. The race was started at 1 p.m., one hour later than scheduled, because of weather conditions.

Trophies donated by Proctor-Leywt Division of SCM Canada Ltd., Picton, were presented to the three first place winners of the cross country race. Each winning driver also received a cash prize of $50.

Mr. Kingma, who expressed satisfaction with the cross-country race and yesday's race meet, remarked that the idea of a winter carnival was "successful." He added that this program of special events will be repeated next year owing to public response to the recent four-day salute to winter.

Mr. Kingma felt that weather conditions during the weekend prevented many county residents from enjoying all carnival events since travel was restricted.

The winter carnival chairman offered a special word of praise for the five contestants who entered the snow queen competition, sponsored by the Picton Kinsmen Club.

He noted that snow queen Wanda Rand and her four princesses demonstrated public spirit by taking part in the competition.

Miss Rand, accompanied by Karen Nugent, Dale McKibbon, Janie Hepburn and Christine Bentley attended all feature events of Prince Edward's winter carnival '71.

Children Were Winners At Community Carnival

Take 18 dozen hot dogs, 300 soft drinks, 60 pounds of French fries and more than a hundred children and mix them all up in one grand melee.

The result is the mini-carnival staged Saturday afternoon at the skating rink behind Doctor's Hotel.

Men in the Station St. neighborhood have banded together this winter to make a rink on land owned by Barney Parsons behind the hotel. They call it Barney's Community Rink and it's open to everyone.

Saturday, Don Foster organized a party for the children who use the rink, and businessmen in the neighborhood donated all the food.

About 15 women from the area gathered in the hotel's kitchen to cook the weiners and prepare the food. Midway through the afternoon, George Muller arrived with the 60 pounds of French fries he had prepared on his Station St. premises.

Skating and candy scrambles were forgotten as the small fry dug into the food.

The community rink has been filled since its opening before Christmas, with men of the neighborhood flooding and maintaining it in the evenings after work.

No Easy Victory For Snowmobiler

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County snowmobiler Warren Ostrander declared himself "a sore winner" in Saturday's 40 - mile cross county race after rolling his machine three times on glare ice.

Mr. Ostrander, winner of the group 3 C, D, and E modified division and the first snowmobiler to cross the finish line, was driving a TNT capable of travelling 80 miles an hour.

He remarked that poor visibility hampered him throughout the race with the West Lake to Salmon Point portion of the course proving the most difficult to steer.

The race winner reported striking a dock on West Lake as he drove into Saturday's storm. His machine was moderately damaged but he upturned it to complete his race.

A number of drivers confused by bad visibility lost their bearings and turned in wrong directions. At least one of Mr. Ostrander's competitors ran out of gas while fighting for a lead.

The race winner, who tested his machine against approximately 20 others in his division, observed that it was essential for him to maintain a steady maximum speed to defeat competitors driving larger machines. Although they could slow their speeds for portions of the course Mr. Ostrander reported it was "full speed ahead" for him all the way.

As the winner in his group, the snowmobiler received a trophy donated by Proctor - Lewyt, Picton, and a cash prize of $50. He noted with a grin, the loss of his helmet and mitts, taken as he qualified to receive his prizes. Mr. Ostrander is a crew member of the Glenora ferries.

Discipline and Grace

Discipline — does it exist today, among adults and the young alike? Well we had almost forgotten there was such a quality until we read of a conversation with Karen Kresge, university graduate and solo performer with the famed Ice Follies.

The group has been appearing in Toronto and here is an extract from a Globe and Mail interview with Miss Kresge: "We are not allowed to wear slacks to rehearsals or get involved in peace demonstrations or even consider drugs. I guess you could say that in the Ice Follies, nobody is a pseudo-hippie.

"When I finish a performance, I really like to go back to the hotel room to sew. Since I have joined the Ice Follies, I would say I have grown more conservative. When I attended Ohio University, I would occasionally wear levis around the campus or be late for appointments. But now my job would be jeopardized.

"We are expected to maintain a strict self-discipline, if we want to skate with the Follies. The company is known to endorse a very clean way of life, and their policies become our way of life."

According to Miss Kresge you can always tell a Follies girl because "every one says excuse me when they pass someone in a hotel. We are never late for anything, and we are super polite. It makes us very conservative for our age. But it makes life within the company, which is nine months of group travel, a lot better."

Miss Kresge's description of the Ice Follies code is eloquent of a forgotten way of life. It is refreshing to find that people in this day and age can still be disciplined and polite.

Bringing It Home

Some months ago a Cornwall service club was shown a police film depicting the aftermath of accidents. It was all there — the trapped victims, the blood and the screams and not surprisingly the audience was shocked.

It was a salutary lesson but we wonder if it were a case of preaching to the converted. Here was a group of responsible citizens, people who tend to drive carefully. On the other hand, what about the irresponsible and the suicidal (yes, a Harvard study in the early 1950s estimated that eight per cent of traffic deaths were suicides, not to mention four per cent which were murders)? Would such a film deter them?

In any event, there is not a single driver who does not need prodding about the constant need for vigilance and defensive driving, even those who ordinarily take care. And we notice that the above thesis (the Cornwall film) has been propounded again in recent days. The public, according to Dr. W. R. Ghent, professor of surgery at Queen's University, should be shown crash films on television. They might use their seat belts, he said at an Ottawa symposium, if they see what happens to the unrestrained body at 30 mph. Even at relatively low speeds such as this your head can go through the windshield. Seventy per cent of all deaths, moreover, are due to head injuries which caused Dr. Ghent to reflect that if people had any sense they would wear crash helmets.

It is a constant battle, to be sure, to try and save some drivers from themselves, as well as promoting safe driving habits among all members of the driving public. Dr. Ghent's comments are indicative of the fact that we may not be going far enough. Helmets, for instance, would take some getting used to, but if worn in cars (as they are by motorcyclists) they could save many lives.

Rover [Girl] Scouts

Co-ed scouting has come to Canada on an experimental basis, according to Ottawa reports. J. B. Harvey, deputy chief scout, is quoted as saying that Rover crews may admit girls aged 17 to 23 into their crews as associate Rovers and the plan is reported under way in some units.

This sounds like an admirable idea which should assist young people of both sexes, belonging to what all recognize as a character-building organization, to mature still further as people; furthermore it should help break down the sort of unofficial "apartheid" which too often characterizes male-female society.

There may be one snag though, will there be any desertions from the Guides?

Meeting Challenge of Growth

Architecture: Group Effort to Supplant Individualism

UNESCO Features

An appeal for architecture to become once more the "collective creation" that it used to be in the Middle Ages is contained in a book by Joseph Belmont, a leading French architect.

"Throughout pre - Renaissance Europe", he writes, "as in many ancient civilizations, building was always carried out by anonymous master-builders, working collectively on the site: the result was a joint creation, stretching perhaps over several generations, deriving from the accumulated experience of each builder and answering the exact requirements of the community and the environment."

All this was changed by the Renaissance. Between the 16th and the 19th centuries, architecture became progressively "the creation of an elite for an elite" — a series of isolated creations, by isolated architects, for isolated users.

The Industrial Revolution gave architecture tremendous new possibilities by replacing human effort with mechanical effort: but the architects themselves remained cut off from each other and from the community. Even the most talented modern architects — Le Corbusier, Frank Lloyd Wright, Saarinen, Aalto, Mies van der Robe — though they rebelled to a man against the established academic style of architecture, failed to provide satisfactory solutions to the new problems posed by the rapid population increase and the spectacular progress of production and communication techniques. All too typical of the 20th century is the "architectural waste-land" — uniformity, lack of organization, shoddy construction — familiar to the inhabitants of most countries in the world today.

In the age of mass civilization, architecture must become a truly collective enterprise once more if it is to serve the community as it should. But to do so, says M. Belmont, who is Chief Architect of the French Government for secular buildings and national palaces, it will need new working methods ("whose language will be the drawing and whose instrument will be the computer"), a new structure for the profession, and a new approach to architectural education.

"An interesting point", he writes, "is that the computer will bring us right back to the creative process used in the past: a series of successive choices made after constantly repeated experimentation. But this experimentation will no longer be carried out by thousands of master - builders over several centuries: it will be the work of a single machine which can assess thousands of possibilities in a few seconds."

Mr. Belmont sees the architecture of the year 2000 not as the work of isolated specialists or all-round architects, but as the collective effort of several teams working together on the same project but at different levels: for example, one team would study the planning of a city, another that of a single district, while a third would be designing the actual living units and a fourth the interior organization and decoration, etc.

But by the year 2000 the world population will have risen to 6,000 million. If they are all to be housed, the same number of dwellings as now exist in the world must be built over the next 30 years. Another factor is the trend to greater mobility — people move house more often than they used to. All this is going to make architecture into an "expendable consumer product", serviced increasingly by industrial processes with rationalized and standardized production techniques.

Mr. Belmont reminds us that the idea of standaridization is far from being new — even the Greeks standardized the columns and capitals of their temples — and he quotes the example of Japan where, since the 17th century, ordinary houses have been built with three standard wall units (glazed or solid), two partition units, and one floor unit. Of the millions of houses built on the basis of these units, he writes, "no one is exactly like another, each having been assembled in a different way by the local carpenter or the owner".

And this brings us to what Mr. Blmont calls "collective participation" in building. Everyone in the future, he says, should be able, as in Japan, to participate in the architectural design process by sketching the features of his future house on squared paper — "each point and each line representing structures or panels" — and then by modifying it as he pleases by buying walls and windows at the corner store. Experiments along these lines have already been tried in various countries, by providing neutral platforms on which the future inhabitant can build using standardized elements or by delivering prefabricated houses in elements which can be put up as he wishes.

Participation also means the involvement of each individual in his environment through analysis and study at the planning level, and this in turn requires appropriate education and information. Ideally, this should begin at school: from the beginning children must be made aware of the environment they are growing up in. This "environmental education" may well turn out to be more useful in later life than many of the subjects crammed down children's throats today.

The Monarchy's Stabilizing Role

Calgary Herald

Too often criticisms of the monarchy reflect no more than Anglophobia — resentment of anything which appears to smack of Anglo-Saxon tradition.

But the value of the Crown to Canada is based on considerably more than tradition, and it is commendable that this fact was pointed out recently in a presentation before the Calgary hearing of the Commons - Senate committee on the constitution.

Dr. Frank MacKinnon is a member of the political science department at the University of Calgary and a noted constitutional authority. He emphasized several basic facts.

In the first place, the Crown, which is part of the Parliament of Canada, has been maintained for practical political reasons. It is an institution which happens to work — and work well.

Dr. MacKinnon views the monarchy from the proper perspective. It is not an affront to Twentieth Century democracy. It can ride serenely above the dust and battle of the political arena. It remains unaffected by bitter political change or upheaval, and as a result of this factor it serves as a safeguard against any anti-democrtic developments which might be precipitated by such change.

The Crown is permanent. Governments are impermanent. The essence of Dr. MacKinnon's argument is that the very existence of the monarchy serves as a reminder to elected officials that they are in office temporarily and that politicians, in his words must be "electable, responsible, criticizable and removable."

Idealists who favor the republican form of government tend to forget that many republics fail to offer the type of guarantees of freedom inherent in a constitutional monarchy.

The value of the monarchy, of course, rests on the fact that the power of the state is vested in the Crown, not in the politicians. As such, the monarchy is the defender of our democracy rather than an impediment to it.

Canada is lucky to have it.

Brandt Pursues Closer Understanding with Soviets

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany, fresh from talks with President Pompidou of France, is adopting a tougher stand towards the Communist world in view of events around isolated West Berlin.

For months, Brandt has been pressing a policy of greater friendship towards the Soviet Union and other Communist-bloc countries such as Poland.

The policy continues to embroil the Social Democratic chancellor in bitter controversy at home, even to the point where his life has been threatened by extremist opponents.

In his latest report on the stage of the federal republic, Brandt blamed small radical groups—presumably on the right—for trying to stir up trouble among Germans forced to flee the Communist-controlled area of their homeland during the last 25 years.

This verbal assault on his political enemies indicates that the chancellor plans to persevere in his attempt to bring about a new era of improved relations with the Soviet bloc.

Yet all along Brandt has emphasized that parliamentary ratification of the friendship treaty he signed last year with Moscow depends on the achievement of a better deal for West Berlin.

Now, with traffic to and from the city undergoing a new round of Eas. German harassment, Brandt is reiterating his tough-sounding condition.

He wants assurance that the close ties between West Berlin and West Germany will be allowed to continue and a promise, too, of unhampered access to the metropolis buried deep in Communist territory.

Moreover, the chancellor wants what he calls the right of free assembly there, notably for politicians from the Bonn republic who are considered by the Communists to have no business in West Berlin.

Brandt apparently is attempting to forestall criticism from opponents who will cite the present occurrences around Berlin as proof of their claims that, as an alleged appeaser of the Communists, the chancellor is bound to lose out in his dealings with the Soviet bloc.

But the West German leader's talks with Pompidou in Paris may also have had some effect on his attitude.

During their consultations, Pompidou is reported to have coupled expressions of support for Brandt's "ostpolitik" with a warning against any pattern of conduct likely to loosen Bonn's ties with the West or undermine the influence of France, Britain and the United States over the future of Berlin.

From the outset, Pompidou's Gaullist political faith ostensibly would place him in sympathy with Brandt's moves towards better relations with the Communist world.

But the French leader's reservations on this and other aspects of West German foreign policy may help make Brandt more cautious in the implementation of ideas which already have earned for the chancellor a reputation as one of democracy's most dynamic personalities.

BELLEVILLE JAYCEES
WINTER MARDI GRAS CARNIVAL
TORCHLIGHT PARADE
FRIDAY FEB. 5 7. PM

All Set to Go

Belleville Jaycees, organizers of the torchlight parade Friday to open the winter carnival here, plan a Mardi Gras theme. But they need more torch bearers and parade participants and are asking all citizens to come out at 6:45 Friday to line up along Great St. James St., just north of Church St., when they will be fitted with costumes. Jaycees will give away more than 1,500 noisemakers to get the winter festivities off to a good start. Participating in a dress rehearsal are Marty Lalonde, Terry Barratt, Glenn Wardell, Pat Gervais, Denis Doyle, Lyle Thompson and Ron Moon.

T-Men Stubborn Over Bequest

A years-long legal contest over a million-dollar bequest to Belleville General Hospital has ended another phase in the United States' courts.

The bequest is from the estate of Charlotte Sills, a one-time Bellevillian who died a millionairess in Massachusetts 10 years ago.

In the interim, it's estimated the original sum has accumulated to close to $2,0000.00

The delay has been caused by a battle in the courts waged by the U.S. internal revenue department which wants the bequest taxed.

U.S. tax officials have pinned their claims on the fact BGH is supported by municipal governments — Hastings County and the city of Belleville — and therefore doesn't qualify for exemption as a charitable institution.

The stakes are high. Donald Templemen, the Belleville barrister who has conducted the hospital's case, estimates the tax slice could be about $830,000.

The fight has worked up through the various echelons of the U.S. courts system. In all, Mr. Templeman estimates some five separate decisions have been handed down — all of them favorable to the hospital.

Yesterday, Mr. Templeman wrote the hospital's board of governors that the decision of the latest hearing had been received — again in the hospital's favor.

The remaining recourse for Washington tax agents is now the U.S. Supreme Court itself.

Mr. Templeman later said the case he is conducting has wide ramifications outside its local interest which sees it as possibly the biggest estate case ever involving a Belleville interest.

The final decision would affect all expatriate Canadians wishing to endow home country institutions, many of which — such as universities — are inevitably linked in some way to government.

There are also three beneficiaries with life annuities from the Sills estate. The bequest to BGH — if finally cleared by the courts — would not be paid until the last of the annuities have terminated.

Milk Price Up A Cent

As result of a 20 cents per cwt. increase to producers which went into effect Feb. 1, the retail price of milk went up one cent per quart in Belleville today.

The delivered price for a quart of home milk is now 36 cents with 35 cents being charged for a quart of two per cent milk.

Jug milk and pitcher-pack milk was increased three cents for the three quart package.

With the 20 cents per cwt. increase to farmers announced early in January by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, producers will now receive 16.85 per 100 pounds for fluid or "bottle" milk.

At the time of the OMMB announcement it was indicated fluid milk producers would receive a further 15 cent increase in September bringing the farmers' price to $7.00 per cwt.

Tweed Firm Gets Grant

A federal incentive grant to a Tweed company planning construction of a pallet lumber and pulp chips plant at Bird's Creek near Bancroft, was announced today.

The $148,000 incentive to the M. S. Ostman company from the regional economic expansion department, was confirmed by Lee Grills, MP Hastings.

The grant is estimated to create 20 new jobs.

"I'm sure we're all pleased to see some assistance coming to our area which will create some new jobs which are badly needed at this time," said Mr. Grills.

Construction of the new $465,000 plant already is under way.

STILL IMPORTANT

Agriculture is still Canada's most important primary industry, although less than 10 per cent of the labor force is directly employed in farming.

At least there is no falling off in the marriage mart indicated by records in the clerk's office at city hall.

Statistics for 1970 show there were 412 marriage licences issued last year in Belleville.

The number of marriages last year compares with a total of 371 licences issued at city hall in 1969.

Trenton Updating Closes Streetsville

TRENTON (Staff) — The Quaker Oats Co. announced yesterday that expansion of its Dufferein Street plant here will make possible shutdown of Quaker's Streetsville operation.

The Streetsville plant will close April 8.

A $1.5-million building program at the Trenton pet food plant will finish by May, providing additional laboratories, a tin-can manufacturing plant and extensive new cooking ovens housed in an eight-storey tower.

The Streetsville plant is being phased out because it had become "inadequate for the profitable manufacture of products in keeping with Quaker quality standards," according to a company statement.

Company officials say they will work with Canada Manpower to assist employees as they relocate or retrain for new jobs.

A Quaker personnel team will visit Streetsville shortly to discuss with workers vacancies in other Quaker plants. Some 35 new jobs become available at Trenton through the current expansion.

Former Store Has Been Sold

The former downtown Dominion Store location on Victoria Ave. has been sold, it was learned today from local realtors A. E. LePage, which handled the sale.

The name of the new owner and the nature of the business to which the store building will be put, were not divulged by the real estate firm, but covenant of the sale rules out another food store.

Dominion Stores Ltd. closed out the Victoria Ave. store two weeks ago, transferring their entire city operation to the store at the east end Belleville Plaza.

Woman Co-ordinates the Purchase Of All County Schools' Supplies

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

The next time you make a shopping list and plan to buy groceries for your family, try to visualize what a tremendous amount of organizing it must take to co-ordinate the purchasing of supplies for all the 65 schools in Hastings County. For that is, in a nutshell what Eva M. Baker, manager of the purchasing office of the Hastings County Board of Education does from day to day and few people even realize what a bewildering variety of supplies that schools need to educate their children.

The needs of all the 65 schools in this area which include eight high schools consist of a wide variety of articles ranging from pencils, paper and thumb tacks to typewriters, adding machines, milling machines and audio visual equipment, all vitally important for the exacting demands of modern education.

And what of the woman who heads the department that plays such an important role in the education of our children? Behind the soft voice and the gentle, feminine facade must exist a woman of tremendous energy, drive, intelligence and administrative capacity because she is the first woman in Canada to have become an accredited purchasing agent, which means that her qualifications as such are officially recognized by the Purchasing Management Association of Canada, Eastern Ontario District which she joined in 1967. As soon as she joined this association in 1967 she enrolled in their professional development program and two years later, became the first woman to receive their diploma in purchasing. Prior to that she had taken a course in School Business Administra- and was the second woman in Ontario to complete this course successfully.

Born and brought up in Trenton where she still lives, Eva Baker's career began shortly after she had taken a course at the Ontario Business College, Belleville. Her first job was with a clothing manufacturer and subsequent positions she held included those in a newspaper, an insurance firm and as a public stenographer.

Her work with school boards began in 1952 which means that right now she is in her 20th year in this field where her first position was as assistant to the secretary-treasurer of the Trenton Board of Education. Later, she became secretary - treasurer to the same board and in 1967 she became specifically interested in purchasing. This was when she joined the Purchasing Management Association of Canada and of course in 1959 when she was appointed manager of the purchasing department of the Hastings County Board of Education (the Trenton Board having been dissolved earlier) she could assume that office with not only experience behind her but also with her diplomas in purchasing and school business administration.

Miss Baker finds her job extremely interesting and challenging because she is constantly having to make decisions and also because school business differs from other businesses in that in the latter one generally has to be responsible only to one boss while in the former one has to be responsible to the whole board of education who are in turn, subject to many outside pressures. Miss Baker also finds it challenging to remain feminine and ladylike while shouldering so much responsibility at the same time because she feels that people in general tend to mistake gentleness for ineffectiveness. Asked why she was specifically interested in the purchasing aspect of school business, she replied that this is an area where much could be done by providing students and teachers with the right tools to aid them in the process of education.

Miss Baker's interests however, are not limited to purchasing and she is ready and willing to tackle any other branch of business with the same enthusiasm and energy she has put into purchasing. Outside her job her interests include Girl Guides of whom she is the Commissioner for the Quinte area, singing in her church choir, sewing, knitting, swimming and camping. She wishes she had more time to pursue her interests in philosophy, psychology and languages. She is also a charter member and past president of the Trenton Business and Professional Women's club.

Pregnant Students Can Continue Education

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A program for pregnant high school girls has been organized in Kingston to help them continue their studies and cope with their situation.

Ten girls were involved in the first experimental session, last February to June. Nine of them went back to school, eight of them completed their year successfully or graduated.

The program, believed to be one of few in Canada, was started by Norma Pickering, a secondary school home visiting teacher for the Frontenac County board of education. Teachers had been visiting pregnant girls individually under the home visiting program intended for students with long-term illnesses.

"The whole criterion of this program is that pregnancy is not an illness. I got very discouraged when I was visiting the girls in their homes because I found most of them were not getting out enough.

"Many of them thought they were the only ones in the world this had ever happened to. We wanted to encourage them to get out and become part of the normal world."

Under the program, the girls meet with Mrs. Pickering three mornings a week in the Y M-Y W C A. A public health nurse visits the class regularly to offer pre-natal and child-care training.

Mrs. Pickering says the program has two main aims. It is hoped the girls can keep up with their school work and re-enter school two or three weeks after their babies are born. In most cases, girls have just dropped out of school.

"From a purely economic point of view, if a girl can finish her year, she will be better able to look after herself in the future."

The second aim is to try to make the pregnancy a positive experience, and to promote a responsible attitude toward future pregnancies, family relationships, personal responsibilities. Students are told about the family-planning clinic, and any girl who wants to talk to a doctor about birth control may do so.

Mrs. Pickering says many of the girls have wanted to keep their babies. She quoted one girl as saying the baby would be the first thing she had ever known that would be hers to love.

She says that because of the shock out-of-wedlock pregnancies are to most families, the teen-agers usually put off telling their parents until it is too late to have the pregnancy terminated.

"Although I don't condone abortion as a method of birth control or abortion on demand some of the girls, particularly the very young ones, would have little trouble getting a safe, clean, legal, therapeutic abortion."

Between September and December of last year, eight girls took the classes. The girls were 13 to 17 years old, five of them in Grade 9.

Mrs. Pickering estimates the number of girls who take the course as about one-quarter to one half the number of pregnant students in the school board area.

Mrs. Pickering says families should try not to react hysterically if an unmarried daughter gets pregnant.

'We are really just beginning to move out of the Victorian era in this, when people thought these were bad girls and should be hidden.

"It happens, and it will likely continue to happen. In the meantime, it will really do society more good in the long run if these girls can be accepted and encouraged to become as self-reliant as possible under the circumstances."

Stewardess Speaks In Native Cree

VANCOUVER (CP) — An elderly Indian woman making her first flight clutched the arms of her seat as the airliner prepared to take off, but she relaxed and smiled as the stewardess spoke to her in her native Cree.

The stewardess was pretty Alice Cardinal, Canada's only native Indian stewardess, who hopes her success will be an example to others.

The 23-year-old Miss Cardinal became a stewardess after working for a time as a receptionist for the department of Indian affairs.

Miss Cardinal said she chose to fly the most northern routes after graduating from the Pacific Western Airlines training course last June. "I wanted to meet other Indians, and Eskimos, and to find out about their living conditions," she said.

Miss Cardinal said native passengers on her flights seldom say anything, "they just stare."

But there were times when the young Indian girl—from the Saddle Lake Indian reserve 131 miles northeast of Edmonton—didn't think she'd make it.

She said teachers ridiculed her "silly questions" at school on the reserve and she learned to keep her mouth shut. When she left the reserve after completing Grade 8 she went on to high school in Edmonton.

She often wondered if she'd survive as she boarded with a strange family in a large city.

But Miss Cardinal was willing to compromise and she proved she could do what she set out to do. She became a modern jet-age girl who can greet passengers in the old Cree language.

"It's time for Indians to adapt to modern society," said Miss Cardinal, "but not to give up their culture."

Ann Landers

Reason for Youngster Craving Male Affection

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was hard hit by that letter about the little seven-year-old girl who climbs on men's laps and behaves in an aggressively affectionate manner. I was that little girl 20 years ago. To this day I can hear my mother say, "Isn't it cute the way Sherry goes for the men?" She doesn't care for women at all!"

ANN LANDERS

You were right in your answer, Ann. The reason the little girl craves male affection is because her own father ignored her. I know because my dad was like that. He never once let me sit on his lap. I cannot recall that he ever kissed me.

Do you know what happens to little girls with cold fathers who reject them? They see "daddy" in every male who pays them the slightest attention. As teen-agers they are pushovers for heels, swingers and lecherous old men who like young flesh.

I lived through it all but I was luckier than most. I met a wonderful man who understood my problem and helped me get well. (Yes, it is a sickness.) We have a wonderful marriage now and I consider myself extremely fortunate. I hope the little girl in the letter is as lucky as I was. I will pray for her. — SHERRY OF BOISE.

DEAR SHERRY: Thank you for a touching letter. I hope the unaffectionate fathers out there who have little girls, will read it and do some soul-searching.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: If I am wallowing in self pity please kick me in the bloomers. If I have a right to complain, say so.

I have been married 15 years to a man who works hard, pays the bills on time, is a good father and has never been known to lose his temper. He tells me I am a fine wife and a wonderful person. Should I be satisfied? Well — here's the rest of it.

From the day we married I have been alone on Thanksgiving, New Year's, my birthday, his birthday, the children's birthdays, Mother's Day, our anniversary, and ever holiday that gives a man a day off from work. The reason I am alone so much is because my husband is a fisherman, a hunter, a bowler, a swimmer, a surfer, a skater and a card player. In other words he's interested in everything but staying home with his family.

Do I have the right to say something? — A MARRIED WIDOW IN SAIGNAW.

DEAR SAG: Of course you do, but I have a hunch it won't do any good at this late date. The time to have "said something" was 15 years ago.

You don't mention whether you enjoy any of these activities. I see in your list many things the family could do together. Is this possible? Explore the prospects and it might produce a partial solution.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 20. My fiance is 21. We are planning to be married soon and I need an answer to a question. J and I had a talk last week and he confessed he has always wanted to be married in a purple sequin jacket. I told him I'd have to think it over. The next day I discussed it with my mother. She said it was all right with her, if the minister didn't object. So I asked the minister. He said he didn't see any reason why my fiance couldn't get married in a purple sequin jacket if he wanted to, since grooms are wearing all sorts of off-beat outfits these days. (Brides, too.)

When I told J he replied, "I've changed my mind. It would take the attention away from you." This was very sweet but now I feel guilty — knowing how much it meant to him. Should I insist? — ONTARIO BRIDE.

DEAR ON: No. Let it be. If there's anything a bride doesn't need it's a groom in a purple sequin jacket.

CELEBRATED WOMEN LAWYERS — These three women are among the most celebrated women lawyers in Canada. Helen Kinnear (left) was appointed to the county court bench in Haldimand County, Ontario, in 1942, the first woman appointed to such a high judicial post. She also was the first woman to appear before the Supreme Courts of Canada and Ontario. In 1969, Rejane Laberge-Colas (centre) was sworn in as judge of the Quebec Superior Court. The best-known woman lawyer to seek political office is Judy LaMarsh (right), who was health minister and state secretary in Lester Pearson's administration. (CP Photo)

Many Women Lawyers Encounter Various Types of Discrimination

By SUSAN BECKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Many women lawyers in the legal profession encounter various types of discrimination but the major number say they do not.

The most common complaint of those who do: The first job is difficult to get, women must prove themselves to a greater extent than do men, they must accept lower pay and opportunities for advancement are fewer.

Those who don't say discrimination exists only in the minds of women who go to inordinate lengths to find or imagine it.

The views are outlined in a study published in the Manitoba Law Journal by Cameron Harvey, 31-year-old associate professor in the University of Manitoba's law faculty.

The study is based on 272 replies to a questionnaire sent to 619 lawyers throughout Canada. Those who said discrimination does not exist numbered 166; those who said it does numbered 106.

Women lawyers had a more difficult battle winning admittance to the Quebec bar than in any other province—it was not until after the Second World War that any woman was admitted there. But there were frustrating situations elsewhere as well.

Mr. Harvey cites an example from the career of Alice Jamieson, appointed a police magistrate for Calgary in 1916.

The legality of one of her convictions was questioned unsuccessfully in the courts on the grounds that a woman was not legally competent and capable of holding the position of police magistrate.

Earlier in 1916, Emily Murphy, not a lawyer by training, became the first woman appointed to a judicial post in Canada—that of Edmonton police magistrate.

"She was one of five women who in 1928-29 took a case through the Supreme Court of Canada to the judicial committee of the Privy Council, the upshot of which was that women were eligible for appointment to the Senate of Canada," Mr. Harvey writes.

Before Clara Brett Martin was called to the Ontario bar in 1897 she had to show her determination.

"The initial stumbling block for Miss Martin . . . was the traditional statutory interpretation of the word 'person,' as used in the Law Society's incorporating statute, so as not to include women," Mr. Harvey writes.

"After three years of refusals from and procrastination on the part of the Law Society of Upper Canada, Miss Martin succeeded in having the law society's statute amended and . . . in gaining admission in 1893 to the study and practice of law."

"Because the statutory amendment only provided for women to be admitted to practise as solicitors, Miss Martin had to wage another battle to obtain a call to the bar. . ."

Mabel French broke the trail in two other provinces, New Brunswick in 1906 and British Columbia in 1912. In both, she reached her goal only after unsuccessful appeals to the courts and the passage of legislation expressly providing that women be allowed to practise law.

The first women admitted to other provincial bars were: Melrose Sissons and Winnifred M. Wilton, Manitoba, 1915; Lillian Ruby Clements, Alberta, 1915; Mary Cathcart, Fish, Nova Scotia, 1918; Roma Stewart, Prince Edward Island, 1926; Louisa Maud Saunders, Newfoundland, 1933; Elizabeth C. Monk and Suzanne R. Filion, Quebec, 1942.

Mr. Harvey says the most celebrated woman judge in Canada so far is the late Helen Kinnear, appointed to the county court bench of Haldimand County, Ontario, in 1943.

Miss Kinnear was the first woman appointed to such a high judicial post and to become King's counsel in the British Commonwealth, he writes. She was also the first woman to appear before the Supreme Courts of Ontario and Canada.

"On March 6, 1969, a major milestone in the development of the administration of justice in Canada was reached with the swearing in of Rejane Laberge-Colas as a judge of the Quebec Superior Court," Mr. Harvey writes.

Of the women lawyers who have successfully sought political office, Judy LaMarsh, federal health minister and later state secretary in the Pearson administration, is one of the best known.

Claire Kirkland-Casgrain, the only woman ever elected to the Quebec national assembly, was minister of state and later of transportation in the Lesage government. She now is tourism minister in the Bourassa cabinet.

Of women lawyers in government service, Marguerite E. Ritchie, senior advisory counsel in the federal justice department, said in a letter accompanying her questionnaire that in many cases she has found that women are unwilling to admit there is discrimination.

This was either because they were trying to conceal the fact from themselves or because they "must play the role of 'Uncle Tom' and that their chances of promotion depend absolutely upon their conformity to and acceptance of the existing patterns."

She also said that she has found that women who have been subject to discrimination in the government service "and who have told me of it with considerable bitterness," take an early retirement and occupy themselves in more pleasant ways than by fighting discrimination.

In Mr. Harvey's study, a few women lawyers from each opinion group said that the woman lawyer who attempts to overcome her supposed sexual handicap by making herself masculine in appearance or manner was bound to defeat her purpose and suffer rebuffs, while the one who remained feminine and charming without flaunting her sex would find that most men would react well to her.

A sidelight was that about 60 per cent of the women who replied were married and of these about 50 per cent were married to lawyers.

Mr. Harvey writes that an overwhelming majority of those women lawyers who had been or are partners of law firms indicated that they had risen to that status in the same time as their male contemporaries.

Similarly, "although here the majority was not as substantial, salaries generally were indicated to be on a parity with contemporaries."

A Diary Will Bring Back Those Teen Years

By DORIS CLARK

"Oh Dad, you forgot what it was like when you were in your teens."

He is right, isn't he, Dad? It takes a good memory and a heap of concentrated thinking back, to put yourself in a young fellow's shoes. You tell yourself things are different now. You tell yourself that you were sensible, work-oriented, ready to be helpful and useful.

And then, shamefacedly you remember the time you walked out on a regular responsibility and got grounded for a month.

Too late to do anything but draw as deeply as you can on a sluggish memory. But to those who are now experiencing what it is like to be in your teens, here's a tip: keep a diary. Make it a tiny one with just room enough to put down each day's high spots, so that recording will not become a chore.

A few years from now you will find that its brief reminders will be priceless in getting inside the minds and feelings of your own youngsters—those precious bits of humanity who will be entrusted to your care.

Dear Doris: One night at the drive-in one of the boys offered me a beer. I got quite drunk so when Jim started getting fresh I was too drunk to stop him. He told me to come out in the grass with him. Luckily, I was not so drunk that I didn't realize what his intentions were and refused.

I went out with another boy about three times and suddenly he started ignoring me. My girl friend asked him why. He said Jim had told him about how he had made love to me so many times that I would be an old hand at it if he tried it. And he didn't want a girl who slept with every Tom, Dick and Harry.

So the story goes, for every boy friend I have had since. One boy said, "I wanted to see if you are as good as Jim says you are." I told him I was a virgin and that what Jim said was a lie. He apologized all the way home.

What can I do about Jim? I am beyond being mad; it is now turning into fear. Will every boy friend I have listen to Jim and turn against me? Should I ignore him, or should I blackmail him and threaten to tell his girl friend what kind of boy friend she has? The latter seems too elementary! — End of Line.

Dear End: Blackmail is too good for him. Boys get to know who the gossips are; especially if you persist in good behavior.

Show the boys you are no push-over and that besmirched reputation will clear up.

I am publishing your letter as a horrible example and warning to other unwitting prospects for gossip. The message? Don't let alcohol betray you — any of you!

Dear Doris: I will succeed my boss as local welfare officer. He is retiring.

He and his wife are coming to our home for dinner and I would like to present him with a gift. Could you suggest what this might be? Do I also give his wife something? — Incumbent.

Dear Incumbent: Make it something lasting, something that doesn't wear out. A set of cuff links and tie clip, or a small silver tray engraved with his name and the date; a good pen set; or a mint set of this year's Canadian coins.

No need to present a gift to his wife. She will be proud and pleased with whatever he gets.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Beat the High Cost Of Pecans with This Recipe

By MARY MOORE

To overcome the high cost of pecans for this test my secretary Betty made it worth her time and effort by buying ½ lb. of pecans in the shell and cracked them until she had the ½ cup chopped pecans required. As you know shelled pecans cost anywhere from $2.25 to $2.60 per pound. She is a worker, and tested these breads for me and the benefit of fruit loaf bakers and freezer owners of which she is one. She has to pack two school lunches for her children and as you know the fruit bread carries much more satisfactorily than a piece of frosted cake.

HOLIDAY BANANA BREAD
(1 loaf)

- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour — divided
- 2-3 cup granulated sugar
- 3 tsps. (1 tbsp.) baking powder
- ½ tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. baking soda
- 1-3 cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup chopped pecans
- ½ cup bleached sultana raisins
- 1-3 cup mixed peel
- 1-3 cup whole glace cherries
- ¼ cup chopped glace pineapple
- 1 cup mashed ripe bananas (3 medium)
- 2 eggs

Into beater bowl sift 1¾ cups of the sifted flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and baking soda. With pastry blender cut butter or margarine into flour mixture until size of small peas. Add banana and eggs and beat on "low" two minutes. Remove beaters.

In a smaller bowl measure the fruits and nuts and stir into them the remaining ¼ cup flour. FOLD the fruit-nut mixture into the batter until blended but do not overstir. Line a 9 x 5 x 3" loaf pan on bottom with greased wax paper and grease sides. Turn in batter smoothing top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 70 minutes or until when touched with fingertip no impression remains. Cool in pan on rack 10 minutes. Turn out of pan, peel off paper and cool on rack. Wrap and store in refrigerator until cold when it will slice better OR freezer-wrap and freeze.

Mother: "Tessie is fascinated by fires. I'm afraid she'll start one in the house even though I hide the matches. I spank her every time I see her touch a match, but is doesn't seem to stop her."

Call Tessie every time you need to light a candle or a fire in the fireplace. Let her light matches and watch them burn while you are near. Explain that she must not touch matches when she is alone.

Small children often are curious about fires and will play with matches and fire at every opportunity. Give them a chance to satisfy some of the curiosity, and the fascination may diminish.

Docking Like Pouring Water Into Narrow-necked Bottle

HOUSTON (AP) — Docking the Apollo 14 command ship with the lunar lander is like trying to pour water into a narrow-necked bottle.

With a funnel, the job is easy. Without a funnel, you're likely to spill some water.

Something apparently was wrong with the funnel Sunday night as Apollo 14 astronauts attempted to dock their command ship Kitty Hawk with the lunar lander Antares nestled in the spent Saturn booster stage.

Kitty Hawk has a probe with three capture latches on the tip. The probe is manoeuvred into a funnel-like device on the lunar lander called a drogue.

The system is designed so the probe pentrates a hole in the bottom of the drogue and three capture latches are engaged. This loosely joins the two spacecraft.

But before the tunnel between the command ship and the lander can be opened, the two craft must be drawn tightly together and 12 additional latches engaged. To do this, the probe next is retracted, pulling the lander and its funnel-like drogue snug against the command ship and engaging the 12 docking latches.

The problem Sunday night was failure of the probe capture latches to grab hold of the drogue.

Mission Control directed the astronauts to bypass use of the probe by retracting it and trying to engage some of the 12 docking latches directly. The Apollo 14 crew did this on the first try.

Like pouring water into the bottle without a funnel, it was tricky — but not impossible.

Here's How Conversation Went In Six Attempts at Docking

HOUSTON (AP) — Like a driver backing up his car time and again to make it fit into his garage, the Apollo 14 crew had to try six times before docking with the lunar lander.

The manoeuvre began routinely Sunday for astronauts Alan Shepard, Edgar Mitchell and Stuart Roosa, who switched on a television camera for Mission Control to view the scene. Here is how they described it:

Mitchell: Houston, we're about to dock . . . We're probably a foot—18 inches to two foot out there.

Control: Roger.

Mitchell: And we docked. (A report that proved to be erroneous).

Roosa: Okay, Houston, we did it twice and sure looks like we're closing fast enough. I'm going to back out here and try it again . . . We better back off here and think about this one, Houston.

Control: Roger.

Mitchell: We're unable to get a capture.

Roosa: Okay, Houston, we backed out a little bit. And that last time I hit it pretty good and we're just about getting the capture latches in there.

He referred to latch devices on a command ship probe used in docking.

Mitchell: Houston, we're going to try to back in now . .

Roosa: Okay, Houston, I hit it pretty good and held four seconds on contact and we did not latch.

Control: Roger. We're seeing it all on TV here . . . I guess we'll just have to tell you to stand by while we talk it over here more.

Roosa: Okay. We're nice and comfortable and I'm just going to drift around here . . . and try not to use any more fuel than I have to.

Shepard: I'm sure you're thinking about the possibility of going hard suit, bringing the probe inside and looking at it, as we are.

Control: That's affirmative .

This was a reference to the possibility of putting on space suits and pulling the probe inside to examine it.

Shepard: Okay, Houston . . . Stu's going to make the approach close at a very slow rate til' the initial contact . . .

Shepard: We got some, Houston.

Roosa: We got a hard dock, Houston!

Shepard: . . . That's a hard dock!

Control: Roger, Al. That's great! Super job, Stu!

Roosa: Thank you.

Control: Al, can you just give us a qualitative feeling of what it sounded like when those docking latches did go? Did you get a sort of a ripple bang or are you convinced you got quite a few of them?

There are 12 latch mechanisms that must be engaged to secure the command ship and the lunar module.

Shepard: Yeah, it was a ripple . . I'm convinced we got quite a few.

Control: I wouldn't be a bit surprised to see that you got them all.

Shepard: Yeah, I think we got quite a few. It was a good hard docking.

Ground communicator Eugene Cernan: Beautiful. Tell Stu that session he had this morning paid off.

Shepard: I believe it!

A mass was said for Cernan and Roosa in the crew quarters at Cape Kennedy Sunday morning.

The astronauts said after preliminary checks that it appeared all the latches were secured.

Then, a while later, Roosa reported: Okay, Houston, we got all the latches.

And docking was complete.

Apollo Mission Put in Doubt

ronauts were able to pull the troublesome mechanism inside. They found some small scratches on the polished face of the cone-shaped docking drogue into which the probe fits. They were made, Shepard said, by the capture latches on the probe.

The group radioed tests and the mechanism passed each one flawlessly. It was something like a toothache that disappears in the dentist chair.

Shepard crawled into the tunnel formed by the joining of the two ships.

"I looked in here with a flashlight and I didn't see anything out of the ordinary," he said. And later: "Right here in the very tip of the probe, it's clean. I don't see anything fishy about that."

Then he found the scratches. Mission Control had no clue on their cause.

In the midst of their docking problems, Shepard had suggested putting an astronaut outside the spacecraft to make repairs. But Mission Control said to try docking again.

"I got a hard dock," said Roosa one hour 44 minutes after the first docking attempt. It indicated the immediate problem was solved.

The launch, seen by 500,000 people at Cape Kennedy, Fla., and millions on television, was 40 minutes late because of clouds that were layered 4,000 to 10,000 feet above the Saturn V rocket.

"At least it's more comfortable than in the old spacecraft," astronaut boss Donald Slayton radioed Shepard during the hold.

"Oh, my, yes," replied the 47-year-old Shepard, whose 15-minute suborbital flight on Freedom 7 nearly 10 years ago started the U.S. on its long road to the moon.

A condition in his ear made Shepard ineligible for further space flights and he labored as chief of the astronaut office, watching other men go on to ever greater achievements.

Secretly he had an operation. Cured of his ear problem, he regained flight status and was assigned the commander's couch on Apollo 14—the 24th U.S. ship to carry men into space.

If Antares lands, Shepard and Mitchell will become the fifth and sixth humans to disturb the ancient dust of the moon.

Their challenge is to complee the mission Apollo 13 left unfinished—to bring back rocks formed 4,600 million years ago at the birth of that world and ours.

When the two ships set forth to the moon, the lunar module was nestled in a compartment atop the third stage of the rocket. The command ship led the train.

To dock nose-to-nose with the lunar lander, the command ship had to separate, move in front, turn around, and head the docking apparaus into the lander's opening.

The docking problem occurred in full view of Mission Control's television monitors. The picture showed the lunar module nestled in the now-empty third rocket-stage, the docking tunnel at its centre.

Slowly the two ships closed.

"Houston, we're about to dock," Mitchell said. "We're probably a foot-18 inches to two feet out there."

Mission Control acknowledged, and Mitchell said, "We docked."

But then it was apparent the latches hadn't engaged.

"Houston, . . . I'm going to back out here and try it again," Roosa said.

And again the attempt failed.

"We better back off here and think about this one, Houston," said Roosa. Mitchell added, "We're unable to get a capture."

For more than an hour the ships closed and moved apart.

"I'm sure you're thinking about the possibility of going hard suit, bring the probe inside and looking at it, as we are," said Shepard. By hard suit he meant a special suit to be worn in airless space.

Mission Control said it was being considered.

Then the ground told the astronauts to try once more, using the probe to guide them into the tunnel, pushing the lunar module slightly forward to activate the main docking latches.

"We got a hard dock, Houston," Roosa said. It meant the craft were locked together.

But the strain of the tricky final manoeuvre told its tale. Doctors at Mission Control reported Roosa's heart rate leaped to 144 beats a minute as he docked.

Fairways Find Junior B Going Rough with Skeleton Roster

PETERBOROUGH (Special) — The Peterborough Lions were able to find plenty of pickings on a Belleville Fairways "skeleton", ringing up an 8-1 Eastern Ontario Junior B. victory.

Belleville was forced to go with a skeleton crew of 11 players plus goalie Ron Jury and lost the services of defensive star Peter Ackerman in the second period.

Ackerman was hit on the temple with a shot and taken to hospital for observation. It is not yet known whether or not the steady rearguard will be available for the return match between the two clubs in Belleville Tuesday night.

The Fairways managed to hold the league leaders to a pair of first-period goals, but six tallies in the middle frame broke the game open for Peterborough.

The loser's lone goal came in the second period when right winger Terry Meagher finished off a play from John Mulvihill and Dave Ferguson.

Missing from the regular Belleville line-up was top scorer Danny Lupennette, nursing a charley-horse which he suffered in the first shift of Friday night's 5-4 loss to Oshawa.

Big defenceman Rick Holmes is still out of the area working and high scoring centre Brian O'Coin missed his second consecutive game for unknown reasons.

Scoring was well spread among the winners. Jim Jones tallied twice with single goals going to Doug Murray, Jim Wasson, Bob Gainey, Gord Rodin, Jim Johnston and Gord Floyd.

The winners drew five of the seven minor penalties handed out in the game.

SUNDAY'S RESULTS

Mo-Hawks Felt Worse Than Their Spectators

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

If it's any consolation to the 600 who watched Sunday's 9-4 Belleville senior hockey humiliation by Barrie Flyers, there were 15 people who felt worse than they did.

They were, of course, the players listed in Belleville Mo-Hawks' starting lineup, who experienced their worst home-ice beating of the season.

The air in the vicinity of the Belleville dressing room was a brightly - tinged blue as coach Dave Jones berated his charges for what amounted to their poorest effort of the OHA Senior A season.

And they deserved it.

Despite the fact they only trailed 3-1 after the game's first 40 minutes, the Mo-Hawks were never within a stride of the third - place Flyers, who came up with six of nine goals scored in a third period of strictly second - rate shinny.

JOHN McCONNELL
Picked Wrong Day

Key to the Barrie landslide was the potent Corby Adams Mike Dubeau - Pete Panagabko forward line. Shut off the scoresheet in their last Belleville outing won 5-2 by the Mo-Hawks, the trio more than made up for it Sunday, pumping home five goals and accounting for 14 scoring points.

Dubeau and Adams each scored twice, with Panagabko, Dave Luciuk, Connie Mandala, and defencemen Jim McCloskey and Pete Stoutenburg adding the others.

Goals by Ralph Plane, Dave Jones, Al Ferguson, and Lorne O'Donnell saved the Mo-Hawks from total embarrassment.

Part of the sluggish Mo-Hawk effort could be attributed to a 10-day layoff since the last game, a 7-1 win over Owen Sound. But there have been two ill-attended Memorial Arena practices in the interim.

Of particular concern to coach Jones was the fact the locals have now lost six home games, not encouraging for a club virtually qualified for one of the six senior playoff berths.

Belleville is still in fifth place in the eight-team standings with 30 points in 31 games. Kingston Aces, whom the Mo-Hawks visit in an important Tuesday night game, have 29 points after 33 games.

Seventh-place Owen Sound (20 points in 31 games) would have to pull off a near-miracle to overtake either eastern Ontario rival.

Picton intermediate call-up John McConnell couldn't have picked a worse day to play his fourth game for the Mo-Hawks as a replacement for centre Doug Senior, still sidelined with a side injury suffered in an Oakville goalpost collision.

McConnell picked up an assist on Al Ferguson's third-period goal and was one of the rare Mo-Hawks who offered an honest effort against Barrie, who scored on nearly one in every three shots they had on Steve Rexe.

In fairness to Rexe, Panagabko and Adams scored on clean cut breakaways, and three other Barrie goals were scored by players left uncovered by a Mo-Hawk defence corps that was at times no where to be seen.

Less obvious was the complete breakdown in the forwards' back-checking game that has proved so successful in some of the club's previous 30 games.

The winners drew seven of the game's 11 minor penalties, with Adams also drawing a misconduct from referee Walt Gardiner for taking his time going to the penalty box in the second period.

Linesman Don Hughes was taken to hospital after the middle frame to have a 16-stitch gash in his mouth closed after being struck by high sticks off a face-off. Hughes returned in the final period.

Hughes received temporary first-aid treatment from Mo-Hawk trainer Ron Fralick, one of the few club members who didn't make a mistake all afternoon.

Algonquin Teams Stampede Lancers

Loyalist Lancers ran into a buzz saw in the form of Ottawa's Algonquin College on the weekend, dropping both the hockey and basketball games against the Ontario College Association powerhouses.

Hockey-wise, it was Algonquin 11-0 over the Lancers, scoring four times in the first frame and adding five more in the second.

Defencemen Gary Goyer and Paul Dotzko and forward Al Ray managed to play well for the losers.

In basketball a towering Algonquin squad that averaged six-feet, four inches in height parlayed a tough man to-man defence into a 90-33 win.

Pete Fourney paced the winners with 15 points. For Loyalist it was Rick Webster with 16 and Dale Lingard hitting for five points.

Bill Hubbs and Tim Goheen played well for the losing Lancers.

O'Neill Cat Still Purring

Belleville rider Mary O'Neill emerged as the top woman driver at the Kitchener Waterloo Winterfest snowmobile races this weekend.

The Arctic Cat racer, who was prviously ranked as the top woman driver by the Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federation, and second in the over - all standings, won both the 292 and 399 classes at Kitchener in addition to a fifth place finish in the 340 class.

Mrs. O'Neill collected $130 and two trophies for her efforts at Kitchener.

Top dogs after the four-day Bay of Quinte Mixed Curling Bonspiel were Belleville's Cathy and Dave Brown, and Glenn and Marilyn Watson. The Brown-skipped foursome won the first event Lafferty-Smith Cup by winning all six games in the spiel's ninth edion.

Mrs. Brown Shows How

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Winning the first event of the ninth annual Bay of Quinte Mixed Bonspiel could be considered a good Consols' tune-up for the Quinte Curling Club's Dave Brown.

But he'll need to come up with, shots like wife Cathy to advance far in the Ontario Curling Association championships in Guelph.

The Browns, and Glenn and Marilyn Watson won the first event Lafferty-Smith Cup and their sixth straight game of the Quinte spiel Sunday, largely due to third Cathy's second rock in the tenth and final end of a match against a CFB Trenton rink skipped by Kay Osley.

The rock took out the opposition's shot stone, set up a guard and remained as a "stolen" winning point in an exciting 4-3 final win for Brown, who along with Watson, joins fellow Quinte Club members Nev. Burroughs and Bill Henderson in Consols play in Guelph beginning Wednesday.

The winners picked up single points in the second, fourth seventh, and tenth ends, while the losers managed singles in the first, third and eighth.

Kay Osley skipped a rink of Nev. Le Groix, and Ron and Anna Grenke that had been skipped by Carl Le Groix for the first five games of the 64-spiel event.

A more successful substitute job was done by Quinte's Bill Meagher, who filled Ralph Graham's place in the hack and guided wife Jean, Miriam Graham, and a CFB recruit to a third event win over Napanee's Glen Wagar.

The Graham rink won the Dixie Lee award, which, like the first event final, was competed at the Quinte Curling Club.

Meanwhile Trenton Country Club's Lyle Carr was taking advantage of home ice to beat the CFB Nowe rink for second event honors and the Pepsi-Cola Trophy.

Also at Trenton, Quinte's Vern Goodwin downed fellow Belleville skip Al McCullam's foursome for the fourth event's Carling Bowl.

Towers Have Luck of Irish

Moving up an age group did not bother the Towers Food City Novices as they took a 4-2 exhibition decision from the Alhambra 109 house league peewees.

Danny Duffy led the way with three goals with Gary McInroy tallying the other. McBride scored twice for the losers.

In regular OMHA action Sunday Towers again came out on top winning a 6-0 game against Kingston Lakeshore.

Mulroney's Novice B's started the weekend out with an impressive 10-3 win over Madoc Saturday, but were edged [illegible] 4 by Stirling in a Sunday bout.

[illegible] Deighton and Steve Mofina scored two goals each in Saturday's win, with others going to Mark Crawford, Brad Miller, Paul Chapman, Billy Rowe, Shawn Mulroney, and Kevin Meagher. Bob Hedge picked up five assists.

Deighton (2) Miller and Rowe were the scorers in Sunday's loss to Stirling.

In peewee play Rollins all-stars took a pair of weekend wins, with a 5-1 decision over Kingston Lakeshore and an 8-4 victory against the Lou Williams house league bantams.

Bobby Crawford counted two goals against Kingston with Paul Hayman, Peter Coates and Andy Lupenette rounding out the scoring.

Against the Lou Williams bantams, it was Tony Meagher leading the way with three goals followed by Mike Bennett with a pair. Bob Thompson, Robert Chase and Rob Richardson were the other scorers.

Tiremen Take Picton Cake

The Western Tire Juveniles proved to be last period terrors as they captured the "B" championship of a Picton Juvenile Tournament this weekend.

Western Tire counted four times in the final period to defeat Picton 4-0 in the "B" championship game.

Terry Pope scored what proved to be the winning goal, stickhandling past two Picton defencemen and tucking the puck into the low right hand corner.

Greg Scarlett, Mike Goegan and Rick Meagher scored the final Belleville goals.

Paul Muldoon was a standout in the Belleville net, while the defensive corps of Chuck Powell, John Thompson, Sonny Farrell and Bill Bunnett provided solid support.

Western Tire had lost the first game of the tournament, a 5-4 decision to Napanee, despite the fact that they held a 49-31 shots-on-goal advantage.

Terry Pope was the top performer for the losers firing a pair of goals with the others going to Bill Bunett and Mike Goegan.

Belleville's second game was a 6-2 win over Kingston Lakeshore. Mike Goegan came up with a sparkling game for the "B" champs, scoring four goals.

The defence came up with a much-improved effort over their first game with Chuck Powell and John Thompson leading the way.

Sonny Farrell and Gary Christopher added the other Western Tire tallies, while Goegan's linemate, Rick Meagher notched four assists.

No Second Chance

The Blake Kerr Imperials came out ahead on points for the first round, but were KO'd by St. Hyacinthe in their second game of the Hull Midget Tournament.

The Imperials won 3-1 over Dorset Park in their opening game after trailing 1-0 at the end of the first period.

Brian Cousins, Russ Herrington and Rob Foster were the goal-getters for Belleville.

A 4-1 loss to St. Hyacinthe in their second game dropped the Imperials from the single elimination tournament that was won by Goulding Park of Toronto.

Rob Foster, who along with Dave Flesch and Brian Cousins was a Belleville tournament standout, scored the lone Imperial goal.

Goulding Park won the tournament with a 13-0 battering of the Hull Volants.

Yanks Hospitable

An American entry in the Cornwall bantam tournament proved to be more hospitable to the Belleville Kinsmen Bantams than their Canadian counterparts.

The Kinsmen stopped Syracuse 6-3 in their second game after losing to Smiths Falls in the opener and Pembroke in their final contest.

In the opening game Belleville came out on the short end of an 8-3 decision to Smiths Falls. Jeff Brown, Steve Kirby and Peter Crawford picked up a goal apiece for the losers.

Bruce Sutherland started his team out on the right foot against Syracuse by picking up a hat trick in the opening 20 minutes. Rick Barbeau, Crawford and Kirby continued the good work with a goal each.

Sutherland was picked as first star of the game and Kirby as second star.

Belleville's final game was a 5-4 loss to Pembroke. Sutherland, Crawford, Eric Powell and Roger Chapman were the goalgetters. Steve Kirby was picked as the game's second star.

Bad Break for Habs

Montreal defenceman Serge Savard is upended by the Leafs' Bobby Baun in the first period of Saturday's Montreal-Toronto game. Bruins Open Daylight Over Rangers

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Boston Bruins opened some daylight between themselves and New York Rangers in their National Hockey League East Division race, but Montreal Canadiens saw their third-place standing jeopardized by two losses and an injury to defenceman Serge Savard in weekend action.

The Bruins blanked St. Louis Blues 6-0 Sunday as defenceman Bobby Orr scored twice and centre Phil Esposito scored his 45th of the season to close within four points of his second 100-point season after 49 games.

The Rangers, meanwhile, fell six points behind after taking a 5-2 pasting by the Flyers at Philadelphia Saturday and being held to a 2-2 tie by Los Angeles Kings in New York Sunday.

And the Canadiens, who started the weekend at home with a 5-4 loss to Toronto Maple Leafs Saturday in a heavy-hitting encounter that claimed Savard's services for an indefinite period took a 4-1 lacing from the Black Hawks in Chicago Sunday.

In other games Sunday, Philadelphia tripped Detroit Red Wings 3-1, Buffalo Sabres climbed out of the East basement with a 6-1 win over Vancouver Canucks and Minnesota North Stars bombed California Golden Seals 7-1.

The other Saturday night games saw Los Angeles and Detroit play to a 3-3 standoff and Pittsburgh Penguins upset Chicago 3-1.

Goaltender Ed Johnston turned aside 23 shots for his second shutout of the season as the Bruins extended their win streak on home ice to 17 games. Esposito's tip-in of Ted Green's blueline shot at 8:09 of the first period proved the winner and Orr's 21st and 22nd of the season started a four-goal Boston second period.

Centre Juha Widing's goal midway in the third period pulled Los Angeles into the tie at New York, but the Rangers extended their unbeaten string on home ice to 26 regular season games, two-short of the record held by Montreal.

The Rangers, who have won only once in their last eight starts, pulled out all stops to win but were stymied by Kings' goalie Dennis DeJordy who faced 33 shots, 30 in the final two periods.

Dennis Hull scored twice against Montreal as the Black Hawks opened a 17-point lead over St. Louis atop the West Division Referee Bill Friday called 59 minutes in penalties, 43 of them in the second period when Chicago's Lou Angotti and Yvan Cournoyer of the Canadiens and Cliff Koroll of the Hawks and Frank Mahovlich of Montreal engaged in separate battles.

Gordon Labossiere, playing before hometown Minnesota fans for the first time since he was acquired in a trade from Los Angeles via Montreal, scored three goals and assisted on a fourth. Labossiere scored once in each period while teammate Bill Goldsworthy extended his goal-scoring string to six games.

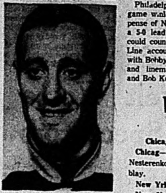
Gilbert Perreault, Buffalo's high-scoring rookie, had another big night with his 25th and 26th goals against Vancouver. Paul Andrea also turned in two goals for the Sabres, who moved into fifth place in the East, one point ahead of Vancouver and Detroit and 13 behind Toronto.

Gary Dornhoefer's two third-period goals carried the Flyers to their home-ice win over Detroit.

Savard refractured the left leg that kept him on the sidelines for the latter part of the 1969-70 season when he was given a stiff check by Toronto defenceman Bob Baun.

Unlike the earlier injury that caused five separate fractures, Saturday's break did not require surgery. But the young rushing defenceman will be lost to the Canadiens for an indefinite period.

"It was one of those things, an accident," said Savard from his hospital bed where the leg was placed in a leg-length cast



PHIL ESPOSITO

Sunday. "I thought he (Baun) was going to miss me. I don't know now. I just don't know how bad this is."

The six-foot, 200-pounder, winner of the Conn Smythe Trophy as the outstanding player in the Stanley Cup championships in 1968-69, rejoined the club last Nov. 7 but only recently has he appeared to regain some of his old form

Leafs Paul Henderson had one goal and set up three others for his linemates, two by Norm Ullman and another by Dave Ellis. The game was in doubt until the final whistle as Montreal stormed around the Toronto goal but were unable to beat veteran goaltender Jacques Plante in the closing seconds.

Philadelphia ended a six-game winless slump at the expense of New York, opening up a 5-0 lead before the Rangers could counter. Their Gold Mine Line accounted for four scores with Bobby Clarke scoring twice and linemates Cliff Schmautz and Bob Kelly once each.

Penalty-killer Val Fonteyne's first two goals of the season sank the Black Hawks at Pittsburgh. Fonteyne opened and closed the game's scoring, his second goal coming with the Penguins playing a man short in the last period.

Los Angeles opened a 2-0 lead at Detroit before the Red Wings could get untracked to take the lead on two goals by rookie Guy Charron and one by veteran Gordie Howe, all-time scoring leader in the NHL, who was playing defence. Doug Robinson tied the score with less than four minutes to go.

Walton Gets to Bruins Via Philly

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs accomplished Sunday what they said they had been striving to do for the last month by trading Mike Walton.

The controversial 26-year-old centre moved to Boston Bruins in a three-team National Hockey League trade that saw goaltender Bernie Parent trade his Philadelphia Flyers' uniform for the Leafs' livery.

Toronto sent Walton, goaltender Bruce Gamble and its No. 1 amateur draft choice in 1971 to Philadelphia for Parent and the Flyers' No. 2 amateur selection.

The Flyers then dealt Walton to Boston and thereby completed a trade started several days ago when the Bruins sent winger Dan Schock to Philadelphia for "future considerations."

The future considerations turned out to be Walton for Schock and rookie winger Rick McLeish, last year with Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A

Walton, who scored 73 goals in three full seasons with Toronto, will give the East Division-leading Bruins added security up front in their pennant drive and quest of their second straight Stanley Cup. The Kirkland Lake, Ont., player had been used primarily as a centre by Toronto but was used effectively on occasion at all forward positions.

MIKE WALTON

Parent, 25, of Montreal, already is a five-year veteran of the big leagues with Boston and Philadelphia and gives Toronto ample backstopping support for several seasons. He is expected to arrive Tuesday and dress for Wednesday's game here against St. Louis Blues.

Gamble, 32, was the Leafs' goalie in most of their games during the two seasons previous to the current campaign, due primarily to injuries to other goaltending personnel, particularly veteran Johnny Bower.

Walton, in the Leaf doghouse on several occasions since joining the club four years ago, left the team for good last Dec. 2 and went into seclusion. His ailment was later diagnosed as a depressive illness.

The Leafs suspended him, but Clarence Campbell after a re he was later ordered reinstated on full pay by NHL president

Phil Esposito moved to within four points of another 100-point season, scoring his 45th goal and adding two assists in Boston Bruins 6-0 win over St. Louis Blues, Sunday afternoon.

Esposito, who leads the NHL's individual scoring race with 96 points on 45 goals and 51 assists, topped the scoring list in the 1968-69 season with 126 points.

Bobby Orr trails his teammate with 82 points on 22 goals and 60 assists.

Orr scored two goals and added an assist in Sunday's win.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Bep Guidolin, coach of London Knights of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, confirmed Sunday he has been approached twice this season by Tom Smythe of Toronto Marlboros to coach that team next season.

Guidolin, who said he is happy at London where his contract will expire after next season, said no firm offer was made, and that he told Smythe he would think about the job.

The Marlies coaching post is held at present by Frank Bonello.

Moore Widens Slim Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Grant Moore staked a claim in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A scoring championship Sunday afternoon when he scored five goals and picked up four assists to help Orillia Terriers humiliate last-place Woodstock Athletics 18-3.

In other weekend games, first-place Galt Hornets maintained a four-point lead over the Terriers by stopping Kingston Aces 6-3 Saturday night and Barrie Flyers whipped Belleville Mo-Hawks 9-4 Sunday afternoon in Belleville.

Snow-clogged highways prevented Owen Sound Crescents from making the trip to Oakville for Sunday's other game.

Moore held a slender one-point lead over three other players before the weekend games, in a close scoring race.

Two of his rivals had productive days as well Sunday. Barrie's Pete Panagabko had a goal and four assists and Gary Milroy, Moore's linemate, had three goals.

At Orillia, the Terriers took a 6-0 first-period lead and a 13-1 lead after the second period against the hapless A's, who have won only two of 30 starts.

Brian Chapman, recently cut by Orillia, was the bombarded goaltender in the Woodstock net as the Terriers outshot the Athletics 55-35.

Dave Nicholishen and Jim Keon each scored three Orillia goals. Al Osborne had two and Tom McCarthy and George Westfall one each.

Mac Westgate, Mark Pezzin and Gary Mitchel scored for Woodstock.

It took four goals in nine minutes of the third period to give the Hornets their win over Kingston Saturday night in Galt.

Bruce Reier, Vance Millar, John Nickerson and Billy Hway scored the comeback goals to eliminate a 3-2 Kingston lead, before a crowd of 2,211.

Ron Smith and Moe Galand gave Galt a 2-0 lead in the first period, before goals by Bob Clayton, John Mercer and Char-

Archer Feeling Better

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — "You can't play well if you're not healthy," George Archer said. "It's been a long time, but I feel fine now, just fine."

Archer, plagued with a variety of health problems since winning the 1969 Masters, had just stormed in with a final-round 65 and scored his first victory in almost two years in the Andy Williams-San Diego open golf tournament.

His 272 total was 16 under par on the oceanside Torrey Pines Golf Club course and three strokes better than second-place Dave Eichelberger, who had a final 68.

Jack Nicklaus, who led the tournament at one point, had a 66 for 277 and was tied for third with Miller Barber, Paul Harney and Bob Stone. Harney had a 69 and Barber and Stone 70s.

Ben Kern of Toronto, the lone Canadian to survive the cut-off after Friday's 18 holes, shot a 70 Sunday, finished with a 284 and earned $617. Toronto's Al Balding and George Knudson and Ken Fulton of Montreal failed to make the 36-hole cut.

Seven More For Cooperstown

NEW YORK (AP) — George Weiss, the long-time executive with New York Yankees and then with New York Mets, and six players were voted into Baseball's Hall of Fame Sunday by the veterans' committee.

The players were Jake Beckley, Rube Marquard, Harry Hooper, Joe Kelley, Chick Hafey and Dave Bancroft.

Beckley, a first baseman for 19 National League seasons, Kelley, Hooper, both outfielders, and Marquard, a left-handed pitcher who won 201 major league games, were elected as "real old timers' who completed their careers by 1925.

Hafey, an outfielder for St. Louis and Cincinnati from 1924-37, and Bancroft, a shortstop who played 16 National League seasons, were named as standouts of a later era.

Two of the seven men named —Beckley and Kelley—are dead.

Canadian Sledders Finish Third

CERVINIA, Italy (CP) — Switzerland won the world four-man world bobsled championship Sunday with a record-breaking run on Cervinia's Blue Lake Course.

The favored Italian squad finished second, followed by West Germany and Italy's No. 2 sled. Canada's No. 1 sled, driven by Bob Storey of Ottawa finished eighth and Hans Behring of Montreal drove the No. 2 sled to an 11th-place finish.

The combined times of the two Canadian sleds were good enough to give the teams third-place in the over-all team standings behind Italy and West Germany.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Mexican rocket Pedro Rodriguez buzzed past a flame-spitting Ferrari in the final 45 minutes Sunday to win a grueling 24 hours of Daytona race that his blue Porsche once commanded by 213 miles.

Rodriguez and co-driver Jackie Oliver of England sat helplessly for 93 minutes with transmission problems as Americans Ronnie Bucknum and Tony Adamowicz chipped away at the Porsche's lead.

The Ferrari finally popped into the lead 70 minutes from the finish just as the John Wyer racing team spun the Porsche from its pit with a reconstructed transmission.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Gananoque Secondary School rink, skipped by Mark McDonald, scored a 6-5 victory over North Dundas District High School Saturday night to win the Ontario Schoolboy curling championship.

The Gananoque rink will represent Ontario in the Canadian finals at Kamloops, B.C. Feb. 22-26.

DETROIT (AP) — Goalie Terry Sawchuk, whose death eight months ago ended a brilliant National Hockey League career which spanned two decades, will be inducted into the Detroit Red Wing Hall of Fame Thursday.

Sawchuk, who spent 14 years with the Wings in three separate stretches, died in a New York City hospital May 31, 1970, after he was injured in a brawl with his roomate, Ron Stewart. A subsequent series of liver and gall bladder operations failed to save his life.

Chevrolet's new Impala puts you first at least 15 new ways. Your Chevy Dealer puts you first with a great deal. Maybe you should see Impala and your Chevy Dealer today!

1971. You've changed. We've changed.
We set out to discover what you were looking for. We found you've changed. So we've changed. And here it is—new Impala—bigger and better than you probably thought it could be.

New looks
We started with a longer, 121½-inch wheelbase and went from there. New front end, new rear end, new over the top and around the sides. And just wait 'til you see the interiors.

New double-panel roof
For a start; it keeps things very quiet inside. It should, because there's a lot more to the roof than just very handsome lines. In fact, there's twice as much. There are now two roofs. A steel outer roof, with the inner one acoustically perforated and then further insulated with a perforated headliner.

New power ventilation
A blower fan goes on when you turn on the ignition. Fresh outside air is drawn in the front louvers, forcing stale air out the rear deck louvers. You can get a complete change of air in 60-seconds, even when the car is idling.

New standard disc brakes
Once a sports car special or extra-cost option on big, expensive cars, power front disc brakes are now standard on all '71 Big Chevrolets. Dual master cylinder, warning light, corrosion resistant brake lines, too!

New body sills
Our design eliminates collection of rust-causing dirt and moisture. A feature you'll appreciate in a couple of years, come trade-in time.

New instrument panel
Sit right up or sit right back. Controls are easy to reach and instruments can be read at a glance. Glare is minimized and the area is fully padded.

New slim windshield pillars
They've been slimmed down and moved back to increase the windshield area and give you better visibility.

New windshield design
The big idea: more glass and safer glass. Impala's windshield is now up to 15% bigger and the glass is lighter, smoother and easier to see through. It resists pitting better and crumbles to rounded particles on heavy impact. Remarkable stuff!

New windshield wipers
They're a full 18" long and have a new, stronger linkage design for a larger "sweep" area. Tuck away when not in use.

New front suspension
We were looking for a way to give you a smoother, quieter ride and improved handling. One drive and you'll know we found it.

New hood release
You unlock the hood from inside the car. An extra precaution against theft.

New wider wheels
Wide stance and wider wheels for improved stability.

New anti-pollution fuel evaporation system
This new system cuts down fuel evaporation into the atmosphere. To further fight pollution, all 1971 Chevrolet engines have been designed to operate efficiently, and with lower exhaust emissions, on low-lead, no-lead or regular fuels.

New steering
Impala's a big car and so the steering gets a lot of attention. Our new forward-mounted gear and linkage give more precise steering response.

New flush door handles
A one-finger "pull" opens the door. To lock from the outside simply depress inside button and slam shut.

The newest, biggest Impala, ever. And now's a great time to get one. Your Chevy Dealer's waiting to trade. And what a great deal he has for you.

Everything's GO at your Chevrolet Dealer's!
GM
He's got a lot of catching up to do!

Trumpets Greet New Anglican Primate

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — In a 45-minute service written for the occasion, Archbishop Edward Scott of Kelowna, B.C. was installed Sunday as Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada.

After his installation before the altar of St. Thomas' Church here, the new primate went down into the congregation to be greeted by a trumpet fanfare, shouts and applause in a demonstration that broke from tradition.

Edward Scott was Bishop of Kootenay diocese when elected to the primacy on the third ballot by the general synod in Niagara Falls last Monday. He succeeded Archbishop Howard Hewlett Clark, who resigned last August after 11 years.

Archbishop Scott—who prefers to be called "Ted" rather than "Your Grace"—wore around his neck Sunday a colorful beaded cross suspended from a necklace made for the new primate by Indians from Big Trout Lake in British Columbia. At 51, he is the youngest primate ever.

Earlier, the primate delivered the sermon at St. Michael and All Angels' Church in Toronto. The service was televised on the CBC national network except for the Maritimes where it will be shown next Sunday.

Mary and Martha Ballet Is Danced

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT. — (CP) — Ballet dancer Cathy Carpenter did a 15-minute performance in an off-beat church service Sunday night.

She had a packed house of churchmen and women against a wide-screen background of living color that told the Biblical story of Mary and Martha, taken from Luke.

Her act was interpretative dancing and she would have brought down the house had applause been permitted.

The service was held by the general council of the United Church of Canada. Delegates to the general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada, meeting in an adjoining hotel, also attended.

Cathy, 16, attends Notre Dame Roman Catholic high school in Toornto. A member of the United Church, she attends a Catholic school because "I like it there."

The skimpy costume she wore during her performance was a contrast to the rows of clerical collars in front of her.

The service had a title — Don't Just Do Something — Stand There. Its purpose was to show what can be done in a contemporary way to make church services more meaningful to congregations.

United Church to Take Abortion Stand Today

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The 24th general council of the United Church of Canada takes a headlong plunge today into a moral issue that troubles many Christians: abortion.

The council went on record last Friday as favoring birth-control measures, including sterilization, as a means of limiting the size of families in a period when the population explosion has put mankind into what its resolution said is a "frightening crisis."

Today, it is asked to go further—to declare that bringing unwanted children into the world is irresponsible, that abortion in certain circumstances is morally justifiable and that the practice of contraception "is often not only a legal right but a Christian duty."

The 25-page report of the board of evangelism and social service, embracing a broad sweep of issues including the church's policy on labor questions, has been in the hands of the 410 commissioners attending the biennial meeting for days. Now it's up for action.

The board's recommendations ask the council to say officially that a woman, after consultation with her doctor, has the right to declare whether or not to have an abortion "while the foetus clearly is not viable."

It called for removal from the Criminal Code of all sections relating to abortions.

The report was prepared by a joint committee of the board of evangelism and social service and the board of women. The committee said it had made an exhaustive study of existing abortion laws and of the theological and moral issues involved and reported:

"Two views are held in this committee on the value of the foetus. All agree that it is a unique, though immature, form of human life. But while some regard it as a potenial person, others feel it is indeed a human being. But even for them, abortion can be justified as a necessary sacrifice.

"Thus, we all conclude that its rights, theologically as well as in law, may reasonably be considered less than those of the actual persons involved in any conflict of interest. Abortion is always a moral issue and can therefore be justified contextually as being the lesser of two evils."

As an alternative to abortion, the committee supported contraception and voluntary sterilization, saying: "Contraception is a couple's duty unless there is positive readiness to care for a new life."

The committee also questioned the right of a hospital committee to "intervene between a woman's careful decision and her right to act accordingly."

Under the Criminal Code, a hospital committee of doctors must authorize a therapeutic abortion and the committee objected to this: "We have found that a hospital committee's decision often depends more on personal attitudes to abortion than to medical judgment."

The report also asks the council to encourage donations of vital organs for medical transplants. The Scriptures enjoin human beings to love and serve others in life "and by implication enjoin us also to love our fellow man beyond death."

The board asks the general council to reaffirm its endorsation of the principle of collective bargaining in labor disputes and to extend this principle in its negotiations with its employees.

Two Churches Vote On Joint Hymnal

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The Anglican and United churches will vote separately today on whether to accept a joint hymn book that will cost both churches $411,000 in the first printing.

It was unclear Sunday night what would happen if one church turned it down.

The plates have already gone to an engraver, University Press in Wurzberg, Germany. If the printer, Southam Murray of Toronto is given the go-ahead, the first 200,000 copies should be ready in May.

Saturday, a joint committee that has been delving into words, music and copyrights since November, 1965, presented the book to the Anglican general synod and the United general council in a hotel ballroom.

Accompanied on a trumpet and a piano the crowd of about 1,000 belted out five of the 150 new hymns in the total 507, including one by Dean Herbert O'Driscoll of Vancouver, an Anglican delegate.

The committee waded through 10,000 hymns in 150 books and came up with 150 new ones, 204 common to both the United Church hymnary and the Anglican hymn book and the rest from one or the other.

The present hymnary was published in 1930 and the present hymn book in 1938.

Jay Macpherson, a committee member, said in reviewing the old hymns, "the words we tried to cut down on were 'sweet' and tender' and my pet antipathy, 'bosom'

"We also tried to cut hymns which suggest life as this 'hopeless vale of tears' and those in which everything worthwhile is up in the sky."

He said the few hymns on marriage suggest the Christian home is a "fortress against temptation, which doesn't exactly cover the case."

Neither Side Budges In British Mail Strike

LONDON (AP) — Britain faced another week without mail today and a crisis in the automobile industry.

Talks to end a 12-day-old strike by 200,000 postal workers broke down Sunday night and Employment Minister Robert Carr said "neither side is prepared to budge an inch."

Officials of the Union of Postal Workers predicted that the strike, which has halted mail deliveries, cut operation-run telegraph and telephone services and severed telephone and cable links with parts of the world, would last at least another week.

The strikers are demanding 15-per-cent pay raises on their salaries, which range from £15 to £27 ($37.50 to $67.50) a week. The post office has offered increases of eight per cent.

Hours before the postal talks failed, workers at two Ford Motor Co. factories voted for a wildcat strike and the walkout threatened to spread to all Ford's 21 British plants.

Ford workers at other plants were to meet later to decide on whether to join the walkout.

A full strike would halt production of about 3,000 cars a day, meaning daily losses of more than £2 million ($5 million).

Ford is Britain's second biggest car manufacturer and about half its automobiles are for the vital export market.

About 15,000 Ford employees stayed off the job on weekend shifts. Workers at a Ford parts factory in Belfast, Northern Ireland, joined the strike Sunday night.

The auto workers, most of whom earn more than £30 a week, are demanding raises of up to £15—50 per cent of their pay—a week. The company has offered £2 a week, and denounced the pay demands as "commercial suicide."

The government faces another strike crisis Wednesday, when more than 275,000 railwaymen will learn the state-run railway board's reply to their demands for pay raises of up to 25 per cent.

Government policy is to keep pay raises to a maximum of 10 per cent and rejection of the railwaymen's bid appears certain.

A strike by the three rail unions would disrupt the country more effectively than the postal strike.

Commons Will Resume Organization Debate

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons is to renew its wrangle today over the government's wide-ranging bill to enlarge the cabinet and create a new environment department.

The bill underwent nearby a full week of debate last week, with opposition MPs complaining they were being forced to accept the whole package despite objections to specific proposals it contains.

The bill, at second reading, would empower the government to create five new ministries of state with designated purposes and 11 new parliamentary secretaries.

A feature of the bill is the new environment department, to be headed by Jack Davis, now fisheries minister.

Robert Andras, now minister without portfolio, would take over as minister of state for urban affairs.

Mr. Davis would take charge of marine, forest and wildlife resources as well as management of most air, water and soil quality and anti-pollution programs.

Benson Wants CDC To Be Pressure-free

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson says the proposed Canada Development Corporation should be free of government pressure on its investment decisions.

On the CTV program Question Period broadcast Sunday, Mr. Benson said its "prime motive must be to invest in Canadian enterprise which can prove profitable in the long run.

"I would hope that the board of directors is sufficiently separate from government that government will not direct them to invest in certain things."

Leeds Soccer Machine Striding Ahead

LONDON (CP) — Leeds United, Britain's unstoppable soccer machine, strode five points ahead of its English League First Division rivals Saturday with a 2-0 win over Manchester City, current holder of the European Cup Winners Cup.

Allan Clarke and Jack Charlton netted the goals and Leeds' away victory gained added significance when second-place Arsenal lost 2-0 at Liverpool.

John Toshack, Liverpool's recent $265,000 purchase from Cardiff, scored after only four minutes and captain Tommy Smith celebrated his 250th appearance for Liverpool by netting the clinching second goal.

England international team manager Sir Alf Ramsey saw centre forwards rivals Martin Chivers of Tottenham and Joe Royle of Everton score in Tottenham Hotspur's 2-1 win. But he also had the setback of seeing Everton centre-half Brian Labone carried off with a leg injury, leaving England without a recognized centre half on the squad for next Wednesday's European championship match against Malta.

The Spur's winning goal was scored by Alan Gilzean.

Temperamental Irish star George Best was back in action for Manchester United after being suspended for two weeks by the club for not appearing for workouts. United improved its lowly league status with a 2-1 away win against Huddersfield, with Scottish international star Denis Law scoring one of the goals before going off with a leg injury.

There was a major upset in the Second Division when first-place Hull City was beaten 1-0 at home by Portsmouth, Ray Hiron netting the last-minute winner. Sheffield United moved into second place with a 2-1 away victory against Oxford United.

Aberdeen remained on top in the Scottish League's First Division, winning 3-1 against Morton to stay two points ahead of Celtic, 1-0 winners over Dunfermline. Rangers remained in third place with a 2-1 away win over Motherwell.

In a rehearsal for their second-round Scottish Cup tie in two weeks time, Celtic was extended in beating Dunfermline. Willie Wallace netted Celtic's goal in the second half in a rough match.

Per Bartram put Morton ahead in the 14th minute in his game against Aberdeen but Joe Harper, Scotland's top scorer, tied the score 15 minutes later and two further goals by Ian Taylor preserved Aberdeen's league leadership.

Ottawa Upsets League Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Second-place Ottawa 67s upset first-place Peterborough Petes 8-2 Sunday, but neither that nor any of the other five weekend results changed team standings in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

In Montreal, the Junior Canadiens salvaged a 3-3 tie by scoring against Hamilton Red Wings with 48 seconds left in the game. St. Catharines twice had a two-goal margin over visiting Toronto Marlboros, but came out of their Sunday game with a 10-8 loss.

Oshawa Generals took advantage of home ice to crush Niagara Falls Flyers 9-3, while London's home ice was good for a 4-2 win over Kitchener Rangers. In Saturday's only game, Peterborough defeated their hapless visitors from St. Catharines 5-3.

Ottawa rookie Dave Lee scored his first OHA goal in the second period. The other 67s' goals came from Terry French and Peter Gaw.

Peterborough marksmen were Craig Ramsey and Doug Gibson, although the Ottawa team disputed Gibson's goal and angry Ottawa fans littered the ice. The goal judge stood by his decision, however, ruling that 67s' goalie Michel LaRocque pulled the puck into the net.

In Montreal, Canadien Jocelyn Guevremont came through under pressure with the tying goal at 19:12 of the third period. Hartland Monahan had given Canadiens a 1-0 lead, deflecting Allan Globensky's shot past Red Wings goalie Mike Veisor 18 seconds into the second period.

Hamilton's Tom Williams tied the score 10 minutes later and put Red Wings into the lead one minute eight seconds into the third period. Six seconds later, Terry Ryan made it 3-1 for Red Wings. Hartland Monahan's second goal set the stage for Guevremont's tying score.

In St. Catharines, Black Hawks suffered their third straight defeat despite two-goal efforts by Brian McKenzie, Bob Pepoler and Bob MacMillan. Marcel Dionne and Clyde Simon scored once each for Hawks.

Toronto Marlboros were favored with two hat tricks—both Dave Gardner and Steve Shutt turned in three-goal efforts. Other Marlboros scorers were Gavin Kirk and Steve Vickers, with two each.

In Oshawa, leading the way for Generals was the line of Al Avery, Don Seiling and Terry O'Reilly, which collected a total of 14 scoring points.

Avery had three goals, O'Reilly two and Seiling one. Gerry Methe, Tom Simpson and Pete Sullivan provided the other Oshawa goals.

Wayne King, Eric Vail and Don Lever made the Flyers' only tallies.

Terry West provided the spark for London Knights with a goal and two assists as they beat Kitchener Rangers 4-2.

Other Knight scorers were Randy Osburn, Bobby Wright and Dennis Ververgaert.

Bill Barber beat London goalie Mike McIntyre's reflexes with a Kitchener goal just seven seconds into the game and Jerry Byers brought the score to 4-2 in the last minute of the second period.

Jim Mahon and Doug Gibson, with two goals each, were the Peterborough Pete powerhouses Saturday night against St. Catharines.

Ron Lalonde scored the other Pete goal.

St. Catharines scorers were Clyde Simon, Mike Bloom and Brian McKenzie.

Indians Show Ski Heels to Field

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — It was called the North American Nordic cross-country and ski-jumping championships but most of the main events were won by Indians from the Northwest Territories and a Polish ski jumper.

Slavomir Kardas, who turned 26 Saturday and is coach of Canada's national team, soared 165 feet on his second jump here Sunday to edge Zdenek Mezl, 22, of Montreal.

Kardas, who came to Canada from Poland and now lives in Toronto, won his event with a point total, based on jumps and style, of 195.1.

Mezl, leader after a first-round jump of 163 feet, finished with 190.2 points. He and his parents came to Canada from Czechoslovakia when he was one.

The cross-country events, held about 20 miles north of Barrie, were dominated, as usual, by members of Canada's national team from the Northwest Territories.

Most impressive were the 17-year-old Firth twins, Shirley and Sharon from Inuvik.

Shirley won the featured five-kilometre race Saturday in a time of 20 minutes, 31 seconds faster than her sister.

Shirley, five feet, three inches and 117 pounds, grinned when her sister said:

"Maybe it's that extra pound."

Sandra is five feet, three inches and weighs 118.

The two girls have shared first-place honors in international skiing since they started the sport three years ago.

Do the judges ever get confused?

"Well, thank God we've got numbers when we race," said Sharon.

Their coach, Bjorger Pettersen, said the twins have unusual stamina and strength.

"With another girl like them we could win a bronze medal in the 1972 Olympics," he said.

"They have the confidence to win and their history has given them great physical characteristics. They are used to long distances because Indian women are known to chase dog teams and caribou for miles."

The twins, from a family of 11, are being trained with Norwegian and Finnish techniques—mainly smooth gliding motions based on quick kicks and a complete extension of the limbs.

In other cross-country events, Malcolm Hunter, 20, of Ottawa won the featured men's 15-kilometre event but was chased by three other Inuvik skiers.

Hunter covered the course in 58 minutes and 12 seconds. Roger Allen was second in 54:47, Jarl Jensen third in 54:58 and Fred Kelly fourth in 54:59.

Inuvik teams also captured the two relay events Sunday.

There were few entries for the Nordic combined.

Tom Reaper of Montreal won by placing fifth in the jump and 25th in the cross-country for a point total of 338.2. Lauri Penttinen of Thunder Bay was second with 266 points.

Kardas, who became jumping coach three months ago, said he was pleased with the 50-metre Collingwood jump which was officially opened Sunday and named after the late Pete Pettersen of Midland, Ont., who was killed in a car accident in 1964.

"And the team is getting better," he said. "The Americans have rarely invited us to their meets but now we have been going south and finishing in the top 10. It'll be the top three pretty soon."

Two Ottawa skiers finished third and fourth and will be the national team's entries at the Canada Winter Games in Saskatoon Feb. 11-22.

The two, Pat Morris, 22, and Peter Wilson, 18, had identical jumps of 154 and 156 feet but Morris scored higher on style and finished with 179.6 points while Wilson was 176.6.

The only two entries from the United States placed in the top 10. Larry Stone of Salisbury, Conn., was sixth with 167.1 points and Chuck Berghorn of Lake Placid, N.Y., tenth with 129.9.

New Look For Ontario Schoolboys

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario schoolboy curling will have a new look in 1973, at least for one year.

Maurice A. Campbell of London, Ont., chairman of the provincial school curling committee, Saturday said the 1973 provincial championship in Guelph will be a double-knockout event with eight teams competing.

The provincial schoolboy event has previously been a round-robin championship.

Campbell made it clear the switch was a one-year experiment only and would be assessed after the event.

The 1972 championship is scheduled for Welland.

Youth Bowling A 'Family Affair'

Bowling was really a "family affair" Saturday when the Youth Bowling league held its Tournament of the season.

Competition was divided into two groups with a 200 average being the dividing line and trophies were awarded to the winners in each category.

Glenn Hamilton and son Bruce won the Group One Bantam "A" Father and Son section with Orval Radford and Rory taking the Group Two torphy.

In mother and daughter bantam competition Mrs. Bernice Hunt and Patty were the winners, while Mrs. Ida Howard and Danny took the mother and son category.

In the Junior B category it was Dan Moon and Patty Forrest winning the father and daughter while Joe Baxter and Paul won the father and son section

Smooth Winter Sailing

While the majority of their countrymen were weathering severe winter storms, it was smooth sailing for Canadian yachtsmen this weekend.

Canadian designed and built yachts accounted for first place finishes in three of the Southern Ocean Racing Conference's five races held Saturday.

Sorcery, a boat designed in Port Credit and built at an Oakville shipyard, is holding first place among the 87 competitors.

The 60 - foot yacht holds a 20 - minute lead over the other contenders in the Class A section of the 103-mile race from St. Petersburg to Venice.

Canadian boats Arieto and Manitou lead the B and C classes, respectively.

Ontario Teams 'Stick'

PORT HURON, Mich. (CP) — Four Ontario teams and one each from Quebec and Michigan won championships Sunday at the North American Silver Stick bantam and peewee tournament.

Oshawa Kinsmen edged Scarborough Sabres 2-1 on a goal by Brian McCron at 3:56 of a third 10-minute overtime period to capture the bantam AA crown.

Earlier in the day Oshawa defeated Windsor Mic Macs 2-1 and Scarborough blanked Detroit Little Caesars 3-0.

In the bantam AA set Gatineau, Que., defeated Essex 4-1 in semi-finals and downed Fraser, Mich., 3-2 in the final.

The bantam A championship was won by Thornhill with a 3-1 victory over Ajax which had earlier defeated Caledonia 1-0. Thornhill gained the finals with a 2-1 win Saturday over Port Huron.

Kingston Young Nationals defeated Detroit Griffins 5-1 in the peewee AAA finals. In semi-final play Kingston blanked Minnesota 9-0 and Detroit beat Niagara Falls, Ont., 3-1.

Port Huron Flyers captured the peewee AA championship with an upset 5-4 win over Barrie.

The peewee A series went to Grimsby as Ken Tarling scored both goals in a 2-1 win over Penetanguishene, Ont.

Pierre Brassard of Gatineau was named the most valuable peewee of the tournament and another peewee, Chuck McCan was named the most valuable player of the tournament. No bantam title was awarded.

Swift Swiss

MEGEVE, France (AP) — World champion Bernhard Russi gave Switzerland its second straight victory on the fast, icy Emile Allais track Sunday, defeating an international Alpine ski elite of 69 racers from 12 nations in the Hahnenkamm World Cup downhill event.

Russi swept down the 3,367-metre track in two minutes 7.93 seconds.

West German Franz Vogler skied into a personal best second place with 2:08.49 and Michel Daetwhyler of Switzerland took third spot in 2:08.53.

But the real victors were the slalomers who are striving to win the World Cup without marking a single downhill point.

Titleholder Karl Schranz, the 32-year-old Austrian veteran trying to win the trophy for a record-breaking third time, was 10th Sunday and has almost certainly lost his last chance.

French challengers Henri Duvillard and Bernard Orcel failed to score and with only two downhill races remaining the odds are now strongly stacked in favor of slalom specialists Gustavo Thoeni of Italy, the current leader with 110 points, and the French pair of Jean-Noel Augert and Patrick Russel.

Stanfield Fearful

Whole Fabric Of Society Said in Danger

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield fired another blast Sunday in his stepped-up campaign against what he describes as government-induced unemployment and economic misery.

"Men and women who want to work but can't are losing a bit of themselves every day. That is tragic. And it is also dangerous for the whole fabric of our society."

Mr. Stanfield told the Agudath Israel's Men's Club that the greatest single cause of rising human frustration in Canada is the economic slowdown created by the federal government.

It was not enough for the government to have singled out inflation as the problem deserving most attention over the past two years, even though the effort had been fairly successful.

"We cannot tackle our problems on a one-shot basis like aiming at ducks in a shooting gallery.

"The fight for sound economic growth and the fight for human dignity and welfare must be waged simultaneously or not at all.

Mr. Stanfield repeated earlier recommendations for alleviating unemployment.

He called for elimination of the three-per-cent surcharge on corporate and personal income tax; reduction of personal income taxes, especially for low- and middle-income Canadians; and reduction or elimination of the 11 per-cent tax on building materials.

There must also be "realistic tax reform" that would not destroy personal initiative and a repegging of the Canadian dollar in terms of U.S. funds.

Unemployment insurance benefits should be extended on a temporary basis to help Canadians who had lost their jobs.

"The measures I am advocating would not turn this economy around immediately. Nothing would. But they would be a stimulating beginning to getting things rolling again."

A text of Mr. Stanfield's speech was released before delivery.

UAW Head Assails Sharp's Statistics

TORONTO (CP) — Dennis McDermott, United Auto Workers' Canadian director, Sunday accused the federal government of "using the numbers racket" in handling unemployment statistics.

In a prepared statement following the UAW Canadian Council quarterly meeting, Mr. McDermott singled out acting prime minister Mitchell Sharp for saying earlier this week the unemployment claims figure is always higher than the real unemployment total.

The statement said the comment by Mr. Sharp reduced the federal government unemployment stand to absurdity.

"In fact, the number of unemployed in Canada is nearer one million than to the 756,000 which Sharp conceded are receiving unemployment insurance claims," the statement said.

"The Canadian government, whose deliberate decision to try to cure inflation by creating unemployment is almost singlehandedly responsible for the present plight of Canadian workers, is now using the numbers racket and cabinet-level ignorance to fudge up the facts and confuse the public."

He said school dropouts and others, laid off without building up sufficient contributions for unemployment insurance eligibility, add considerably to the 756,000 figure.

The council unanimously backed a stand against the use of wage freezing as a collective-bargaining device.

The council urged the Ontario Federation of Labor and Canadian Labor Congress to "alert their affiliates against any attempt to exploit the contrived unemployment in this country to freeze wages.

Snowmobiler Dies In Montana Cold

COOKE CITY, Mont. (AP) — Banker Hugh D. Galusha died Sunday in a hastily dug snow cave after a snowmobile trip foundered due to mechanical trouble, winds at 98 miles an hour and temperatures equivalent to 80 degrees below zero.

Galusha, 51, was president of the 9th Federal Reserve District Bank of Minneapolis.

Sixteen of the snowmobile group, including Jim Marshall and Paul Dickson of the pro football Minnesota Vikings, survived the storm.

The snowmobile party set out Saturday on a trip from Red Lodge along the Beartooth Highway, a primary route which was closed to normal traffic by snow drifts of up to 20 feet.

Jom Klobuchar, a columnist for the Minneapolis Star, was a member of the tour. He said one snow machine after another developed trouble and the party broke up into groups of three and four and had to abandon some machines.

Klobuchar said Galusha died after efforts to revive him failed. A spokesman for Yellowstone National Park, a few miles from the scene, said the wind-chill factor, combining cold and wind for its effect on the human body, was 80 degrees below zero.

Hijacked Plane's Passengers Go Home by Bus

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — The 26 passengers and four crew members of an Indian airliner hijacked to Pakistan Saturday crossed back into India by bus today.

They came through the border checkpost near Ferozepore in Punjab after being driven from Lahore, 18 miles away.

Their return ended a tense 48 hours spent in a Lahore hotel after the plane, a Fokker Friendship, was hijacked over Kashmir to the West Pakistan capital by two armed men Saturday.

Indian Airlines had considered sending a plane to Pakistan to pick up the passengers and crew, officials reported, but they said it couldn't land because of threatening crowds at the Lahore airport.

Civil Aviation Minister Karan Singh of India flew to Ferozepore to meet the passengers and crew only a few hours after he had asked the Pakistan government to obtain their return to India without delay.

The appeal from Singh, who also is Maharajah of Kashmir, came shortly after Pakistan had announced it was giving political asylum to the two hijackers who seized the plane at gunpoint while it was on an internal flight between Srinagar and Jamma

The hijackers—identified in Lahore as Hashim Quershi and Mohamed Ashraf, who said they were members of the Jammu and Kashmir Plebiscite Front—threatened to blow up the plane if 36 people detained in Kashmir by the Indian authorities were not set free.

Meanwhile, the Pakistan government made no attempt to remove the hijackers from the plane.

Crowds of Pakistanis at the airport shouted "Long live two hijackers!", "Kashmir is ours!" and "Don't return the aircraft to India!"

Nixon Promises More Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon sent Congress today a pledge of more jobs and better business in 1971, plus a promise to use "all the effective and legitimate powers of government" to strengthen anti-inflation forces.

His goal: "Full prosperity without war, full prosperity without inflation."

But Nixon rejected—perhaps more emphatically than ever before—any use of price-wage controls or voluntary guideposts. He called the latter "an elaborate facade that seems to be wage and price control but is not."

His annual economic report to Congress fixed no specific goals or deadlines for recovery. But in the accompanying 300-page report of his Council of Economic Advisers, these targets were posted and presumably approved by him:

—Unemployment—now at six per cent—would decline to 4½ per cent by the middle of 1972. The official definition of "full employment" is around four per cent.

—The inflation rate, which was 5.25 per cent across the whole economy last year, should be approaching three per cent by mid-1972. This is measured by the gross national product.

—National output should total $1.065 trillion in 1971, requiring a record rise of $88,000 million—so great some economists fear it might rekindle inflation.

Nixon's report, third and last of the major presidential messages to each new session of Congress, noted "prices have begun to rise less rapidly" and added: "There are the first faint signs of a retardation in wage increases in some sectors."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Victim of Anxiety Relates Problems

Lately I have received so many letters from people suffering chronic anxiety that I have reserved this space for this problem for the next three days. Living in daily anxiety and fear causes more disruption of human values and hopes than almost any other illness.

Nervous patients have told me they have received encouragement and help by reading about similar problems in others. Here, then, are a few "messages" from people who are suffering from anxiety, or who have successfully navigated the threatening and turbulent waters.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Until three years ago the world was my oyster and I loved each day and greeted each new challenge with enthusiasm.

Suddenly all the changed when I had a very frightening experience — numbness in the feet, churning in the stomach, tightness in the chest, weakness all over. For one who had always been so healthy, this was a great shock.

I had been in the habit of taking a yearly physical, so my doctor knew me and my past history really well. Since this happened, I have been tested for everything, had three cardiograms, upper and lower GI series, spent a week in the hospital for tests, had X rays of all parts of the body, was tested for low blood sugar, etc. Result? All the tests indicated that I am in fine physical condition.

I have tried to continue to live normally but these "attacks" recur and without explanation. They can be very frightening. May I list some of my symptoms? shortness of breath — heart skips — pulsating in the chest — stiff neck and back most of the time (X rays show no arthritis — weakness — continued burping and gasiness even on arising — tightness in the chest area.

My doctor says he knows I am not a hypochondriac and that the symptoms are real. He has ruled out menopause as the cause even though I am 48 years old. He has prescribed mild tranquilizers. I do not take them often because I don't feel they are the answer.

I am writing to you in the hope that you might spot something that has escaped us. In a recent column you wrote about anxiety being the cause of so much unhappiness in the world. Can this be treated? I am so discouraged about this condition that I just function at about half my capacity. I am desperate for help. — Mrs. J.

Comment: In my recent book on "nerves" I begin this way: "We should not look down our nose with a feeling of superiority toward the neurotic. Instead, we should say to ourselves, 'There, but for the grace of God, go I.' As Dr. William Menninger has said, 'No one, no matter how calm and complacent, is immune to psychoneurosis if the emotional strains get tough enough.'"

I also quoted Dr. Charles Berg, who said, "There is constantly some degree of morbid anxiety in every normal life."

What were my reasons? Simply to bring some compassion and understanding into the minds and hearts of bystanders who were perhaps getting tired of hearing complaints from anxiety sufferers.

Members of the patient's family, friends and office associates tend to shy away from the anxious one. He feels neglected and left alone. As though he were shipwrecked, and potential rescue ships passed him by while he waved desperately for help.

Tomorrow, Mrs. J., I'll reprint a letter from a formerly anxious reader which I trust will bring some hope into the lives of people who are burdened with chronic anxiety.

Your Car

Women Get Instruction On How to Change Tire

Ladies! This column is primarily for you.

It's all about how to change a tire, and I suggest you cut the article out and keep it in your glove compartment or taped to the inside lid of your trunk.

The following is a step-by-step rundown of procedure you'll have to use:

(1) Get well off to the side of the road — right off if possible. If the flat happens on a bridge or in a tunnel, drive slowly, but get away from these spots, even at the expense of your tire. Stopped vehicles in these confined areas are an extreme hazard.

(2) If any part of you or your car protrudes over the road, put on your blinking lights, and if completely on the shoulder, but at night, do the same.

(3) Put on parking brake. If your car has an automatic transmission, put in park position. If standard transmission, put in low or reverse.

(4) Remove spare tire, jack and wrench from trunk.

(6) Install jack and raise car slightly to relieve pressure on tire, but not enough to allow wheel to rotate. This will enable you to pry off hubcap and loosen wheel fasteners at least one full turn. Note: A few fasteners are of a left-hand thread, so if they won't turn in the normal anticlockwise direction, try the other way.

(7) Jack up car so wheel is clear of the ground.

(8) Now you can easily remove each wheel-fastener. A good idea is to place them in the hub cap so they won't get lost.

(9) Remove wheel.

(10) Replace with spare.

(11) Apply fasteners manually until snug.

(12) Lower jack and remove.

(13) Tighten fasteners securely with wrench.

(14) Don't forget to replace hub cap.

(15) Have your spare repaired immediately; it's so easy to put off or forget, and you don't want to be caught with another flat and no spare! Also, have the service attendant check the fasteners to be sure you got them tight enough.

Ottawa Student Joins PC Race

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

As the five cabinet ministers campaigning for the leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party went through another day of handshaking, Ottawa student Conservatives introduced a 26-year-old student into the race.

Robert Pharand, post-graduate mathematics student at the University of Ottawa, was announced Sunday as candidate for a group of Conservative students from Carleton University, the University of Ottawa and St. Patrick's College.

A spokesman for the group said Mr. Pharand was entered because the original five candidates are not being specific enough on issues.

"We want to open up the campaign to get the issues to the fore and take the limelight off the personalities."

The spokesman said his group wants candidates to deal with the issues of economic nationalism and education.

Mr. Pharand, who is married, already has degrees in business administration and science. He is a member of the university's board of governors.

His nomination by the student group followed complaints from the party's youth wing, the Young Progressive Conservatives, that they were not receiving their share of delegate positions for the Feb. 10-12 Toronto leadership convention.

YPCs are party members below the age of 30. A revised party constitution states that two of 10 riding delegates must be selected by the local YPC organization in each riding with a recognized YPC group.

Saturday, leadership contender A. B. R. Lawrence told a regional YPC delegate meeting that the party's constitution requires, at least in spirit, that at least two YPCs be included in riding delegations.

He asked how the party can convince voters it is an open-door party if it denies representation to youth and ethnic groups. He said some delegations do not fairly represent women.

Walter Baker, campaign manager for Commercial Affairs Minister Lawrence, said many YPC groups are threatened with disfranchisement in the leadership contest.

Candidate's itineraries today:

—Mines Minister Allan Lawrence drives through the Ottawa Valley, stopping at Pembroke, Renfrew, Carleton Place and Rockland.

—Education Minister William Davis is in Toronto.

—A B R. Lawrence visits Lindsay, Peterborough and Belleville —Provincial Secretary Robert Welch attends delegate meetings in Barrie and Peterborough and a chamber of commerce meeting in Midland.

—Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough meets delegates at the Scarborough Golf and Country Club in suburban Toronto

Sydney J. Harris Says

Radio Deserved 'Killing'

By RAY STAPLEY

One of the grossest miscarriages of justice occurred on Christmas Day in an Idaho town, when a woman was fined in court for turning off the radio with a pistol.

The woman told the judge that her husband was playing the radio too loudly on Christmas Eve. When he refused to turn it down, she took the family pistol and fired it, cutting the cord.

Her husband had her arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct, but it seems to me that the judge should have locked up the husband as well —for disturbance of the peace and incitement to riot.

One of the surest indications of a moronic mind and a bestial disposition is the stolid ability to endure (even to enjoy) loud noises, especially when they emanate from a radio or television set.

And each year, as a nation we are becoming more inured to such noises — until we may eventually reach the point where we cannot dispense with them as background for our intellectual vacuity. School children already find it difficult to "study" without a rock group blasting out in stupefying decibels.

More and more restaurants, offices, and even building elevators have installed those hideous canned - music programs; airplanes have the same, while waiting for takeoff or approaching landing, as if people couldn't stand the "sound of silence" with nothing going on.

I once complained to a restaurant hostess that the canned music was blaring too loudly to conduct a quiet conversation; she stared back at me uncomprehendingly and asked, "What music?" Apparently, after a time, she scarcely heard it at all — but if it were removed, she would feel a deathly silence that might make room for her own thoughts, God forbid.

(Remember the story of the lighthouse keeper, who slept peacefully every night while the machinery hummed away? And one night there was a break in the circuit and the humming stopped; he leapt out of bed and cried "What was that?")

The ear is a precious and delicate mechanism, naturally attuned to concordant beaties and subtleties of sound. Our commercial cupidity is ruining this sensitive instrument as surely as if we poured hot lye over a magnificent pipe organ.

Accoustics has its own law of diminishing returns. Once accustomed to loudness, we require more and more volume to attract our attention. And the whisper of the mind is obliterated by the cacophony of noise.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 2

Your birthday today: There's just enough resistance in your path this coming year to provoke you to definite and consistent effort. Romantic interests are unlikely to run smoothly, require tact and attention as well as your true feelings. Today's natives tend to be jacks-of-all-trades.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Set out this morning to establish permenent arrangements. Technical advice should be sought. You have more impact on others than you realize at first.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Let major changes wait a while. Think a bit more of what the results may be before forcing issues. The evening brings some serious questions where you have deep emotional ties.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Almost anything you hear now has a hidden side to it, perhaps unknown to your informant. Career plans are due for changes.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Try not to repay your friends' moods with similar treatment, remain calm when they disregard schedules and plans. By being competent and serene you offer an anchor for all concerned.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): There's no substitute for quality, either in materials or in behavior. Avoid bickering. Do what you must for the routines of your work. Light entertainment fills the evening well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): News comes from far places. Factors enter your daily living from long past and forgotten beginnings elsewhere.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): It's better to make do with things as they are for the moment; be ready to move up and on with the first break in the situation. Skip heavy chores however feasible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): The temptation is toward arbitrary behavior. Find a middle course, seek co-operation and understanding. Old friends will wait if they know what the problem is.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your own resources are your best bet in all dealings — budget your time and expense accordingly. Get a second opinion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): This may be the time when you have to turn loose and let others run the show, make mistakes, and pick up the pieces themselves. Conserve your own energy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your natural tendency to systematize everything comes in good stead early and late. Hold your position, express your principles firmly.

PISCES (Feb, 19 — Mar. 20): If you are not reasonably satisfied with what you are, review your circumstances and resources; begin thinking about changes for the better.

Greene Would Keep Dispute from Courts

HALIFAX (CP) — Resources Minister J. J. Greene says it would be better to settle the dispute over who owns mineral rights off the Nova Scotia coast outside the courts.

Mr. Greene and Premier Gerald Regan were scheduled to discuss the dispute during a meeting here today.

Members of the Nova Scotia Liberal Association at their annual meeting Saturday gave resounding approval to Premier Regan's stand that the province should reap the benefits if a major oil find is made off the coast.

But that's not the way Mr. Greene interpreted the situation.

He told reporters that as far as he knows, mineral resources found on the continental shelf belong to the people of Canada. He said this was proven by the Supreme Court in British Columbia.

Mr. Greene said a court battle over the jurisdiction rights would probably leave a bad taste "It's faster to settle it out of court.

Pollution control was another reason for the federal government's strong stand on the issue

Canada has the toughest pollution control regulations in the world, he said. If the provinces had jurisdiction over mineral rights, a competition might evolve, perhaps bringing about lax regulations.

Premier Regan told delegates that Nova Scotia "should not have been involved in the ownership" of the Deuterium of Canada Ltd. heavy water plant at Glace Bay, N.S.

"But we have, and do have, the responsibility to find out whether there is some portion of the investment in the plant that can be recovered for the taxpayers of this province, or whether, quite frankly, we would be better off to get a bulldozer and push it into the sea."

Apollo Moonbound

Uncertain Docking System Won't Bar Lunar Landing

HOUSTON (AP) — Apollo 14's astronauts glided on course today toward a rendezvous with the moon, confident their spaceship docking system will not bar a landing in rugged lunar highlands.

On the remote chance the two ships could not link after their moon exploration, astronauts Alan Shepard and Edgar Mitchell were prepared to walk in space from the lunar module back to the command vessel for the return trip home.

Apollo 14 shifted to an on-target course Monday night when command module pilot Stuart Roosa fired the big main engine for the first time.

The 10-second burst manoeuvred the spacecraft off a path that would have approached to within 2,420 miles of the moon. Now it will zip within 69 miles at 2:41 a.m. EST Thursday and Roose once again will fire the engine to go into an orbit ranging from 69 to 195 miles above the surface.

Later Thursday the astronauts will drop the low point of the lunar orbit to an altitude of 11.5 miles before Shepard and Mitchell separate the lunar lander Antares for a Friday morning descent to the hilly terrain known as Fra Mauro on the eastern fringe of the dry Ocean of Storms.

The three astronauts spent a quiet second day in space, monitoring systems and relaxing for the big days ahead.

The suspense over whether Shepard and Mitchell would be able to land ended Monday when Apollo mission director Chester Lee said:

"We're proceeding with every intention of making lunar landing."

Doubt about the landing was raised shortly after launching Sunday when the astronauts had difficulty linking the command and lunar modules. They separated the command ship Kitty Hawk and turned around to hook up with and extract Antares from a compartment atop the third stage of the Saturn V rocket.

Five times they tried and failed. They finally succeeded on the sixth attempt, but experts on the ground huddled to discuss what could have caused the failures.

After running several tests at Mission Control Centre, engineers said they believed the fault lay with a foreign particle that jammed in the mechanism of one of three docking latches and somehow dislodged before the sixth attempt.

Astronaut James McDivitt, Apollo spacecraft program manager, said:

"I can't help but feel that it was some foreign object. Now where this foreign agent came from and went I don't know. If the foreign particle is gone and left no trace we'd never find the cause if we spent a century looking for it."

Avalanche Is Cleared

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — National parks department crews have restored traffic on the Trans-Canada Highway a few miles west of the Alberta-British Columbia border.

The highway and adjacent Canadian Pacific Railway main line through the Rocky Mountains were blocked when parks officials set off an avalanche in Yoho National Park Monday afternoon with explosives dropped from a helicopter.

A 12-pound explosives pack sent hundreds of tons of snow cascading down from a slope after it was feared "the slightest vibration from a truck" on the highway below would set it off.

The railroad was opened after five hours.

Loss $80,000

Fire Kills 21,000 Broiler Chickens

By ELMER BONTER
Staff Correspondent

CARRYING PLACE — Fire originating from an explosion in an oil-fired boiler early yesterday afternoon destroyed a broiler factory on the farm of Jack F. Vader, near here, killing 21,000 broiler chickens and causing loss estimated at $80,000.

The five-weeks-old broilers would have been ready for market in two weeks time.

The Ameliasburg volunteer fire department and trucks from Trenton answered the call for assistance but nothing could be done to save the metal-covered frame structure.

Firemen stood by until 3 a.m. today to protect a second building housing another 18,000 broilers and 200 pigs.

It was the second time in recent years that Mr. Vader has suffered heavy loss from fire. Ten years ago a similar broiler house burned, destroying a like number of chickens.

At that time Mr. Vader rebuilt on the same foundation at a cost of $45,000.

Mr. Vader said he would again rebuild. Yesterday's $80,000 loss was partially covered by insurance.

Egypt Talks War

CAIRO (AP) — The Egyptian government is undertaking a campaign to convince the world and its people that hostilities with Israel may resume along the Suez canal Saturday after six months of silent guns.

Air raid sirens screamed and blackouts were ordered in the capital during the weekend. Leaders scheduled a series of meetings building up to a speech by President Anwar Sadat scheduled Thursday night before the National Assembly.

The Israeli-Egyptian-Jordan ceasefire that began last August ends at midnight Friday night.

The aim could be either to prod the Big Four—the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France—into putting more pressure for concessions on Israel or genuinely to prepare the population for renewed fighting.

Diplomatic efforts to get a formal extension of the ceasefire have been futile, and Egyptian spokesmen from Sadat down have said over and over that Egypt will not extend it unless UN envoy Gunnar Jarring reports progress in the indirect peace talks at UN headquarters.

One Sound Rail Route Is Target

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission has ordered the Canadian Pacific Railway to continue daily operation, year-round, of its transcontinental passenger train, The Canadian.

But, in a ruling handed down Monday, the commission says the railway should put sleeping and dining car services on a paying basis or drop them. Subsidies for dining car losses will be ended next year and those for sleeping car losses shortly after.

For long-term policy, meanwhile, the ruling proposes the "rationalization" of the money-losing transcontinental services of both CP Rail and Canadian National Railways, the Crown-owned line.

The commission intends to undertake a comprehensive study of both services as soon as CN can calculate the losses of its Super-Continental. The aim, the ruling makes clear, will be to develop one basic passenger service healthy enough to justify continuing subsidies from the federal government.

The ruling brought an immediate, angry reaction from spokesmen for unions which have been fighting any reduction in services offered to rail travellers.

At the headquarters of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway and Transport Workers, however, a spokesman noted that union president Donald Secord has already recommended that a single transcontinental service be established.

Uganda Boycotts Parley

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) Uganda has announced it will boycott a committee meeting of the 41-nation Organization of African Unity due to be held later this month.

The decision, broadcast Monday night by Uganda radio, said Uganda would not attend the OAU liberation committee in Tanzania "because of the attitude of the Tanzania government."

Tanzania chose to recognize deposed president Milton Obote as Uganda's head of state, in preference to its new military strongman, Maj.-Gen. Idi Amin, after Amin accused Tanzania of plotting an invasion.

The OAU foreign ministers are to hold their semi-annual meeting later this month in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Obote was there Monday, presumably seeking the same recognition he got from Tanzania.

Uganda's participation, or lack of participation, in the OAU has important repercussions—she is to be host to the OAU summit conference in Kampala in June.

Amin said within 24 hours of assuming power that he believes in the OAU.

While a news blackout persisted in Saigon and Washington, the Japanese news agency Kyodo said flatly today that South Vietnam had invaded southern Laos with the support of United States air power.

The Nixon administration refused to break its official silence despite the fact reports of a major invasion of Laos was about to take place have been floating around the U.S. capital for several days.

Today, Kyodo reported from Saigon that between 4,000 and 5,000 South Vietnamese troops, including airborne forces, began operations in Laos before dawn.

The Japanese agency, quoting reliable sources, said the U.S. Air Force was providing backup support, but no American ground troops were involved.

Kyodo said the South Vietnamese would be operating for a week or 10 days on the Bolovens plateau about 95 to 125 miles south of Khe Sanh, South Vietnam. It said between 7,000 and 20,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops were reported to have infiltrated into southern Laos recently.

In Washington, Senator George Aitken, ranking Republican in the Senate foreign relations committee, said the state department told him of a U.S.-South Vietnamese buildup near the Laotian border preparing for an important operation.

He said the Nixon administration "has given us to understand they're preparing for a massive attack from the north." He said he was told all this last Friday by the state department.

He said he also was told that the congressional ban against U.S. ground forces moving into Laos would be respected.

Today, the pro-Communist Laotian Patriotic Front sent an urgent message to Britain and Russia, the co-chairman of the Geneva convention which guaranteed Laotian neutrality, informing them of an extremely dangerous situation in the country.

The message protested heavy American bombing in Laos and the massing of American and South Vietnamese troops along the border.

Nixon returned to Washington from a Virgin Islands weekend to face charges from Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin, and the North Vietnamese delegation in Paris, that the U.S. now has decisively spilled the ground war in Vietnam over into Laos.

Kosygin charged "an outrageous invasion of the southern provinces of Laos is under way."

One television broadcast said detailed reports were circulating at the White House and the state department about the situtaion in Indochina. Nonetheless, officials still refused to break the total news blackout that has prevailed in Saigon for four days.

The defence department said there had been a build-up of North Vietnamese forces in Laos and Cambodia but did not offer any further comment.

Thailand Denies Its Troops Used

BANGKOK (Reuter) — Thai supreme command sources said today there are no Thai troops fighting in southern Laos.

The sources were commenting on a Japanese news agency report from Saigon that about 1,000 Thai troops were taking part in operations in the Bolovens plateau in southern Laos.

It was possible that some Thai citizens of Laotian blood living in northeastern Thailand might have joined the Laotian army as volunteers, the sources said.

Harry Mulhall

He's Not Doing It for Laughs

Everyone seems happy, but it was no laughing matter that brought Financial and Consumer Affairs Minister Bert Lawrence to Belleville last night. A contender for the Ontario Conservative leadership he met local party delegates voting at next week's convention. Before debate began, however, he swapped more relaxed chat with people like these young party members — Trudie Brown (left), Meg Howell and Kate Walters. For details see page 3.

Committee to Be Set Up To Study Garbage Disposal

The city of Belleville is going to take a long term view into its future garbage disposal problems.

Yesterday council voted for the appointment of a special committee to study and plan future methods for the hygenic disposal of garbage in the Belleville area, the study to take into account capital cost requirements and also area planning as opposed to strictly city planning.

The motion, tabled by Alderman Mrs. Jean Smith asks that the study recognize the following basic assumptions:

Ultimate disposal of refuse must be to the ground; reduction of refuse volume to the smallest size to conserve costly space; elimination of litter, odors, fires, rats and the generation of disease; possible recovery of useful products such as metals, paper or fertilizer and that the provincial government be approached for financial assistance to municipalities for an environmental control form of garbage disposal.

It was asked that the committee be appointed by council within the next month.

Methods of accomplishing the above assumptions, such as pulverization and incineration with land fill are also asked to be studied with the timing of implementation to be co-ordinated with existing plans of disposal.

Council passed Ald. Smith's motion without discussion excepting for a comment from Alderman Donald Soutter who suggested that the province be asked if it has any plans for recycling of wastes.

If so, it was suggested that some aspects of the government plan might be considered by the local committee.

The city will phase out its present sanitary land fill garbage disposal operation on East Zwick's Island early in the spring and will commence dumping at a privately owned area in Sidney township.

City Council Agrees to Expedite Apartment Rezoning Application

A special meeting of city council is expected to be called within the next few days to pass a special bylaw which could get a long awaited east-end apartment building under way.

The bylaw would be a commitment on the part of the Belleville developers guaranteeing completion of certain conditions required to be met before Ontario Municipal Board approval is asked for a rezoning bylaw.

Belleville lawyer Ronald Cass, appearing for the three local developers, former mayor Jack R. Ellis, Lee Grills, MP, and William Wills, noted that council last September had given three readings to the rezoning bylaw but this had not been forwarded to the OMB for approval.

He said OMB approval was necessary to allow arrangement of financing to get the high rise apartment project under way.

Failure to obtain financing now would mean the city would lose out on considerable employment, would delay early assessment of the project and deprive local middle class income families of needed housing, he said.

Several city councillors however, wanted assurance that the developers would be prepared to carry out all commitments contained in their agreement with the city.

Council was told that there were up to 10 requirements to be met, including provision of a 66 foot road allowance through the property to Dundas Street, East.

Mr. Cass said the developers were quite prepared to honor all requirements but were experiencing some delays in acquiring clear title to all of the right of way.

City Solicitor John Miller said the city would be unwise to seek OMB approval of the rezoning bylaw until all requirements were met.

"It would be putting the cart before the horse," he said.

However, in the end council voted to send the rezoning bylaw to Toronto for approval on condition the developers sign a bylaw agreement undertaking not to apply for a building permit or to offer their east end property for sale until all requirements were met.

The east end apartment development which has been in the planning stage for the past 18 months, calls for the erection of two high rise apartment structures.

Bylaw 8929 rezones the five acre site immediately north of the Unemployment Insurance Commission building from RM3 to RM4 and provides a minimum of two acres of parks and green space.

Mr. Cass said only one neighbor raised an objection to the rezoning and the minor question was satisfactorily answered.

The new zoning and expected development would greatly enhance the area, Mr. Cass said.

Don't Need Groundhog To Tell Us

It's Groundhog Day.

So?

Canadian folklore has it if the groundhog sees its shadow on the snow today the result is six more weeks of winter.

And that should just about wrap things up as far as winterbound district dwellers are concerned.

Already, ten more inches of snow have fallen on the district than in a normal winter.

Normal snowfall for the entire season from November to March averages out at 66 inches, the lands and forest department at Tweed reported today.

But so far this winter, 76.5 inches of snow have fallen.

There's plenty of snow in the bush — and even householders could run into difficulties with overburdened roofs, if there's more, a department official cautioned today.

Continuing cold weather also is preventing any thaw from setting in.

Lows last night were: Trenton, 13 below; Belleville, 11 below; Tweed, 23 below; Bancroft, 34 below.

Problems Claimed

Alderman Raps Hospital Planning

As a result of planning on the part of board members during the past decade, Belleville General Hospital is facing serious constructional problems this year.

This is the claim of Belleville Alderman Enos David, one of four city council representatives on the hospital board of governors, who told council yesterday that as a result of expenditures on private rooms with marble shower walls and twin sinks, and beautiful lounge areas, there had not been enough funds left to provide important patient care services at the new hospital.

Now, he said, the hospital board was in the process of planning two additional elevators at a cost of $156,000.

"We also find that the air conditioning unit was installed over the empty elevator shafts and it will cost over $48,000 to move them and we are told even then they are not adequate," Ald. David said in a letter to city council.

Ald. David was also critical of the city's lack of representation on some hospital committees and minimal representation on others.

He said he had been somewhat disturbed on receiving the report of the hospital board nominating committee which appeared to relegate city council members "to a secondary role."

Ald. David said he had been unable to attend last week's hospital board meeting but had requested that the nominating committee report be tabled for re-examination.

Other city members on the board, Mayor J. Russell Scott and Aldermen Gerald Joyce and Ben Corke had attempted to have the report tabled but they were outvoted.

The consequence, according to the alderman, will be that Belleville, which has to provide 65 per cent of hospital costs, will not be represented on some committees and will have only minimal representation on others.

I'll Lose Everything: Hill

Irate Garbage Collector Charges Township Action Unfair

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Sidney Township Council came under vehement attack yesterday from Gerald Hill, a contracting garbage collector in the township.

He claimed with the township, entering into a contract with Quinte Sanitation Services Ltd. on May 1, 1971, he would be put out of business.

"It's just not right," he said.

"I used to be on welfare you know, but I've built up my business . . . I've borrowed money from the bank and am about $5,000 in debt."

He explained that the money had gone towards purchase of newer trucks.

"I don't want to give it up."

Deputy Reeve Gordon Wilman stated: "We've got no contract with you." Mr. Hill is a private collector who charges $1.75 to pick up refuse.

Under the contract with Quinte Sanitation, garbage will be collected throughout the entire township and disposed of at the new land-fill site.

Mr Hill had previously deposited his trucks loads in the old dump, which will be phased out commencing May 1.

The confrontation became more heated.

"There's five of us in the garage business and you're going to throw us all out of business" the angry collector stated.

"The government pays out thousands of dollars for bums sitting . . . doing nohing."

Pounding his fist on the council table, inches from the reeve, he cried: "Who wants to pick up dirty, stinkin' garbage anyway but I had the guts to get out on my own . . . I built up my own business."

Gordon Hill Argues With Sidney Township Officials

Members of council claimed that Mr. Hill had purchased his business from Harold Johnston several years ago.

"He didn't have to buy that business," asserted the deputy reeve. "The township did not have anything to do with it . . . he never came and asked us about the business."

It was council's contention that Mr. Hill could easily have started his own business for less money than paid for the established one which had a number of customers and two old trucks.

"I'll lose everything," the angry man stated.

Reeve Jack Bush suggested Mr. Hill contact the manager of Quinte Sanitation.

"He'll be hiring for the new route . . . I'll help to see you get a job . . I'll try to get Stan Graham to give you a job," the reeve said.

Mr. Hill, close to tears, stormed out of council chambers.

"You're going to have a lawsuit, I'll get a lawyer."

Council explained that his business would end simply because, with the township agent collecting refuse and charging per capita on the annual tax bill, people would prefer the new service.

The reeve explained that there had been "no tenders called".

"We negotiated with Quinte Sanitation on two points . . . the site they owned and the pickup and disposal."

The contract arrived at last fall "tied the pickup with the site." The awarding of the contract had been made public at that time.

Council said that Mr. Hill could continue collecting refuse outside of Sidney Township and could dump in the new land-fill area, but would be charged to do so.

Restructured Departments Goal of Bert Lawrence

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Ontario's property tax rebates are a mess and province needs a less involved tax system, Financial and Consumer Affairs Minister Bert Lawrence told Quinte-area Conservatives last night.

While recipients may happily receive the rebates, nonetheless the citizenry knows it's a "poor way to run a railroad," Mr. Lawrence said.

And, he claimed, the provincial tax structure went awry when the government introduced larger school boards and regional governments before a fair assessment system.

Seeking support to win next week's Ontario Progressive Conservative leadership convention, Mr. Lawrence also told local voting delegates:

—Pollution and foreign investment control were also issues of national policy. Legislation by a single province conceivably could drive industries to seek a better deal in other provinces — thus fragmenting Canada into a series of bidders for multinational corporations.

—Regional government was basically sound but not necessarily high on his list of priorities. In some parts of the province, county government might be the best form of regionalization.

About 50 delegates and leading party supporters turned out at the Sun Luck Gardens to hear and question Mr. Lawrence — the third of five announced candidates, and cabinet colleagues, seeking the leadership.

Close on his heels today comes another rival for the province's most powerful political post — Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, scheduled to meet delegates at noon today at the Sun Valley Motor Inn. Mines and Northern Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence will be in Belleville Friday night, the last of five cabinet contestants.

The future, said Mr. Lawrence before fielding questions, calls for the reconstructing of government which now is running in reverse with the public and backbenchers pondering where their problems go.

"It should be us trying to figure out how we can serve you," he said.

The public, looking at government, blames the Conservative party for something it is not guilty of:

'What they tend to see is (that) we are some kind of institution. That we're part of that series of hurdles we are supposed to require the public or the private member to jump through before you get an answer."

Queried on tax rebates, Mr. Lawrence bluntly told the delegates he felt they were "a mess"

While recipients receives the rebates gladly, the ordinary citizen is not so stupid as not to know it's a poor way of running a railroad."

"The answer is of course, we've got to put all this darn thing together and come up with a cleaner, simpler tax system"

The problem began ("and it's easy for me to say, of course, because I wasn't in the cabinet at the time") when the province "galloped ahead with the theories of expanded school areas and local governments.

"We should have started where the horse should have been — and that's on a fair assessment system — and when we settled on that then start tinkering with the things that are built on a fair assessment system.

"So we got the horse and the cart sort of fouled up . . ." said Mr. Lawrence.

Pollution and foreign investment also were areas of federal responsibility. Mr. Lawrence told one delegate who worried whether strict anti-pollution measures if enforced in Ontario alone could drive development into neighboring provinces.

"The idea that we are going to be able to have a parochial, provincial policy of any use in relation to the fundamental question of foreign investment is ridiculous," he said.

If Ontario alone were to write such laws governing pollution and foreign ownership industry then could go Quebec or Manitoba.

The next premier of Ontario would have to "talk turkey" to the federal government to get Ottawa to discharge its responsibilities in such areas, he said.

This is not shirking responsibility on the provincial level.

"But you can see perfectly well that whether it be pollution or foreign investment, that we can't allow Canada to be split up into 10 different jurisdictions — each being bid one against the other by a multi-national corporation . . ."

Mr. Lawrence said he thought regional government would be "fairly low" on his policy priorities.

The principles of larger local government units are "utterly sound" but establishing them must be geared to timing and public confidence.

Experts may blueprint "where they think you should go. But we're in a democratic society and where we want to go is more important . . ."

Regional governments and larger school areas offer "tremendous potential" in decentralizing government power. But senior government must have "the gumption" to delegate powers and more autonomy to such units — with a resulting reduction in provincial government departments. Local electorates would take care of any mismanagement of such autonomy.

The patterns of regional government would depend on local needs.

"The answer in so many parts of the province is that the county is a regional government," said Mr. Lawrence. "People seem to forget that. It's the oldest — but in many parts of Ontario the old county is the best darn regional government you could design."

Larger government units would also reduce the pressures often faced by smaller municipalities having to deal with big developers. But, there was need for a provincial body on planning — backed by expertise which could take an "overview" of the broader effects of proposed developments.

The Ontario Municipal Board now is engaged in this area performing beyond the jurisdiction of its functions.

Such a proposal conflicted in no way with local autonomy, he said, since there would have to be a source of appeal — "and this will be the ment, no matter how big it will be."

Mr. Lawrence wouldn't go along with a suggestion that, since one individual could cause an OMB hearing by simply protesting any proposed development, a deposit should be posted by the protester to help cover costs.

He said it was a matter of protecting an individual's rights.

Mr. Lawrence said that a sudden, major cut could be achieved in education costs.

Savings could be made in areas like irrelevant research and administrative duplication.

However, any suggestion to lower or freeze teachers salaries indefinitely "won't wash," he said.

If elected leader, he indicated he would not call an early election.

In an interview later, Mr. Lawrence said any election date would depend on how quickly the kind of changes he contemplates would become effective.

"But the earliest I would say would be late next fall perhaps . . . the spring of '72."

Cemeteries on Agenda Of Regional Meeting

Cemetery lay outs, rates for plots and for the opening of graves, and the handling of perpetual care funds, will be topics of discussion at a regional meeting of the Ontario Cemetery Association to be held in Belleville this week.

The meeting, expected to be attended by approximately 60 people representing cemetery boards in the Bay of Quinte District, will be held Friday at the Canadian Legion hall on Pinnacle Street. The Belleville Cemetery Company and the Campbell Monument Co. Ltd. of Belleville are hosts for the meeting.

Thomas Purdy, superintendent of Belleville Cemetery said this would be the first time for an association meeting to be held in Belleville.

Speakers will include James Butler, Stratford, president of the provincial association; Donald Timney, North York, association secretary and Reid McAllister, representing the cemeteries branch of the department of financial and commercial affairs, to which cemetery boards are responsible.

Remains of Arson Inspected

William Denison, manager of the Fish and Dove bookstore on Bridge Street East this morning examined the remains of his garbage. Fire Chief Leo Culhane stated "youngsters were seen setting fire to the rubbish" and "we were just lucky," "if it had been windy, it could have caused trouble."

Repairs Needed

Auditorium Wall Leans

Belleville's Ben Bleecker Auditorium which saw a belated opening three years ago when unexpected construction difficulties delayed issuance of a safety certificate is again having its structural problems.

First the city's consulting engineer hired to supervise construction details deemed the building's exterior walls might not be strong enough without additional pylons to support the heavy weight of the pre-stressed concrete roof.

Now city council has been told that the structure's main interior masonry partition running the entire length of the building is out of plumb and is in immediate need of repairs.

Alderman Donald Soutter, chairman of the city recreation-arena committee said the repairs could cost up to $11,000.

Either 12 supporting pylasters or reconstruction of the entire partition was needed, he said.

The "leaning" partition, which was said to be three inches out of plumb at its west end was placed after the main part of the building was erected.

Its purpose was to provide a division in the main structure to accommodate washrooms and other utility services. Over the washrooms are fair board offices and the local Emergency Measures Organization headquarters.

Ald. Soutter said the problem was urgent and had to be looked after immediately.

Council directed the alderman, city engineer and the city manager determine the best method of correcting the problem.

Milk, Soft Drink Prices to Climb

Quinte-area consumers today face higher prices for two of their most popular beverages — milk and soft drinks.

Major Ontario dairies yesterday raised the price of milk which now ranges in the Belleville area from one cent a quart on jug milk.

Meantime, a major soft drink company has increased the price of its concentrates to consumers and a Toronto spokesman said this will probably produce a one-cent-a-bottle increase in Ontario consumer prices.

Price Increases for milk follow the Ontario Milk Marketing Board decision last month to raise the price of raw milk to dairy processors.

In Belleville, a spokesman for Reid's Dairy said the price of home-delivered jug milk — the line most in demand— is up from 31 cents to 32 cents. Milk sold by pitcher pack—also popular—has increased from 32 to 33 cents a quart.

Brookside - Price Dairy (Trent-Quinte) Ltd., also confirmed the increase.

The one-cent rise in soft drink prices was predicted by J. M. Thompson, chairman of Crush International Ltd.

A spokesman for Moira Beverages in Belleville said prices went up yesterday and could amount to one cent on quart bottles.

Suggested retail price for quarts has been raised from two for 45 cents to two for 47 cents.

Price of 10 - ounce drinks have been increased from $2.30 for a case of 24 to $2.60.

A local Coca Cola spokesman said wholesale prices on 10 - ounce drinks had increased 10-12 cents a case and 12-15 cents a case for quarts.

Canada Dry and Charles T. Wilson Ltd., two other soft drink producers, have announced price increases in recent months.

Angel Assists Parking

PICTON (Staff) — Town councillors learned last night that heaven on earth indeed can become a problem. An Eyre Street resident, writing to complain of a parking problem caused by parishioners attending a nearby church each Sunday became the victim of a typographical error. His letter suggested the problem could be cleared up with the Angel parking on Church Street as at present and restricted parking on the other side of the street." Chairman of the public works committee James Bird has agreed to take this suggestion for angle parking before his next committee meeting.

Young PCs Aid Centre

The teenagers' drop-in centre, now being re-organized at an upper Front St. location, got a nod of approval yesterday from the young Progressive Conservative Association

The Young PCs voted to give a $10 donation to help defray the initial costs of the centre.

"We are a low budget organization, and our donation could not be sizeable, but we gave it as an indication of our approval of the idea of a centre in Belleville," said the Young PCs' president, Roger Porter.

The centre is expected to open this weekend on a one-month trial basis.

Rural Haven

So the problems of pollution and overcrowding in urban areas are reversing the population drift from rural areas. That is the word from Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson; he told a Federation of Agriculture meeting in Ottawa last week that rural land around large cities was being snapped up by city dwellers who "feel the need to return to the land."

This trend is one that should prove beneficial to both people and the land. More will enjoy the pleasures of country living, and if they tend the land they acquire then the rural scene should become more productive.

City life increasingly is becoming a mixed blessing, with its overcrowding, auto-congested atmosphere and tension, not to mention the loneliness and alienation that to one degree or another are also facets of any large metropolis.

There is a danger of course in the fact that as the rural areas become more popular, the very problems people deplore in the city could come to plague the new environment. This is where planning is vital; new development in the country — housing, industry or whatever — must take these factors into consideration.

Rural Canada as it stands needs development though, and not only from the viewpoint of productivity. If life in the country keeps one busy and healthy there may nevertheless be too few outlets for the young. We made this same point some time ago and received an excellent letter ... as we recall from a young woman saying in effect that life in the country was anything but dull. Be that as it may we think there is room for more recreational facilities, say golf and tennis — or are such activities too far removed from the interests of the majority of young Canadians to be worth even considering? Wo do think though that there is room in the country for more of the kind of recreation facilities of the city.

New Fad

In commenting on the new fad, if it may be called thus, of sensitivity training (or baring ones innermost thoughts to others in a group situation) the other day, we suggested that not everyone would want to participate in such frank discourse. To many it would be not only distasteful but an invasion of privacy.

No sooner had this editorial appeared than we read an observation on the subject by Dr. Andrew Malcolm of the Ontario Addiction Research Foundation to the effect that it should be investigated by a royal commission.

Sensitivity training, it should be explained, can include group screaming ("letting it out," as singer-composer Dory Previn has put it), nudity, and fondling, and Dr. Malcolm, who was speaking in Hamilton, says it is "just as big a problem as drug abuse ever was. It is something that has to be looked into, both for its benefits and hazards."

The psychiatrist said he had no estimate of how many Canadians have been, or are involved in, such groups. But he said that a paperback book on how to conduct your own awareness sessions is on sale and he named one major Canadian company which is using such training among its employees.

Clearly, this practice could go too far, taking people into realms they had not anticipated, resulting in confusion and embarrassment. As Dr. Malcolm put it, such stripping away of defence mechanisms can be both dangerous and devastating. "Defence mechanisms are essential to mental health . . . but it is incredible that it has become a parlor game to cut someone into small pieces, with no one there to put him back together again."

Beware then of this new probing into the inner recesses of the mind. Group therapy, as employed by qualified psychiatrists, is one thing, but this extension of something carried out under controlled conditions, with the brakes off so to speak, is something which should be approached with caution and even suspicion.

Singapore Post-Mortem

Trudeau, Black Africa and the Communist Threat

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Now that most of the heroes and anti-heroes of the Commonwealth Conference are back from Singapore, parliamentarians here have been peering through the settling dust to assess just what happened and what part Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau had in making it happen.

Depending on your parliamentary point of view, the Singapore story can be read in many varied ways.

One of the more interesting is that of Wallace Nesbitt, for 18 consecutive years Conservative MP for Ontario's Oxford constituency and long one of his party's leading students of the conduct of Canada's foreign affairs.

The way he weighs the Prime Minister's Singapore performance, the Prime Minister did the thing he does best: lectured.

There was the Prime Minister, in his "One World" pose, conducting a seminar in race relations, and giving all the best of his lecture to the black African states, and the worst of it to the minority white members of the Commonwealth.

The Prime Minister's great flaw, the way Wallace Nesbitt sees it, was the acceptance of Zambia — leader of the African militants — as a "non-aligned" state, and its president, activist Kenneth Kuanda as a rational, reasonable and responsible Commonwealth representative.

It was President Kuanda's neighbor, confidante and partner in black African "non-alignment," Tanzania, recalls Mr. Nesbitt, which not long ago kicked out Canadian military advisers who had been schooling and training the republic's troops and rolled out the red carpet for Chinese advisers.

Both republics, charges the outspoken Ontario Conservative, are "front-runers for the Kremlin — if the Russians want Britain blocked in Indian Ocean and South Atlantic defence, this pair of Communist mischief-makers try to take care of it."

Zambia, Tanzania and other "non - aligned" Commonwealth African states, not long before the conference, held one of their own.

At it they condemned Britain's intention to resume arms sales to South Africa, but deleted specific condemnation of France for the actual and continuing sale of arms to Pretoria over an extended period of years.

They condemned the Americans for involvement in Vietnam, but remained silent on the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia.

They condemned Israel for occupying some Arab territory, but were mum about Arab guerrillas hijacking jets and holding hundreds of innocent people hostage in the desert.

Finally, while imploring the black African "soldiers of non-alignment," as he called them, to fight for freedom and justice, President Kuanda jailed 16 reporters from western news organizations covering the conference simply because some of them were based in Rhodesia and South Africa.

Trouble with the black African Commonwealth leaders, says Mr. Nesbitt, is that they learned their political ABC's in opposition in what were British colonies. Giving the governor a hard time was the name of the game.

Now as presidents of independent states, they still retain an emotional need for the governor as the political enemy, and who better to fulfil it than the British?

The black African states are too weak and poor to wage real or even economic war against Rhodesia and South Africa, and except when they try playing the East - versus - West game at the United Nations, the world seldom pays them much mind.

But along comes a Commonwealth conference. The perfect stage. What role best to play? Why, bait the governor — the British — of course, with threats, protests, boycotts and talk of walk-outs.

So they trot out the old threat: If Britain does not budge, then that is the end of the conference for them and, hopefully, the Commonwealth, too.

It is old - fashioned colonial politics they play, and the majority of Commonwealth members know this, keep their cool and compromise.

Taking a hard - headed pragmatic business view of the Commonwealth, the Industry Trade and Commerce Department some months ago reorganized its export policy division, scrapping its Commonwealth branch and lumping Commonwealth and non - Commonwealth countries together on a regional basis.

Commonwealth trade is small. Last year Britain bought only 8.8 percent of Canada's exports and the rest of the Commonwealth took only 4.5 percent.

And, interestingly enough, the "rest" of the Commonwealth includes such former members as Ireland and South Africa.

Preferences began as a Commonwealth membership trade inducement, but since have been written into a series of agreements between Canada and each of the continuing and former members.

So the trading preferences, the Industry Trade and Commerce Department is convinced, no matter what happened to the Commonwealth, would survive.

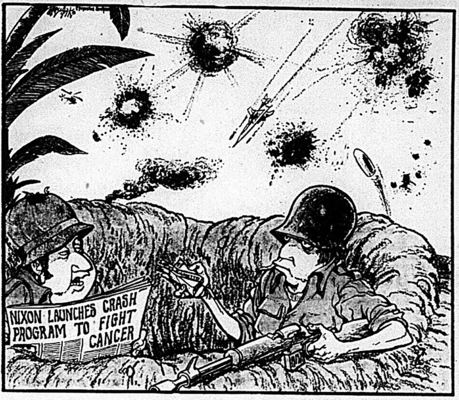
But the Commonwealth is more than the dollars and cents of trade balances.

Former Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker put it best when there were rumbles from the African representatives at the Singapore conference that Britain might be "kicked out" of the Commonwealth and Canada given its leadership.

The Commonwealth, says Dief, is Canada's link with the past, its heritage of the years of empire when the 21 now independent states were joined in world dominion that splashed British red on every continent around the globe.

"A Commonwealth without Britain just could not be," says Dief. "With Britain gone it would collapse. These countries would not have existed nor could survive without Britain.

And he warned, as if nodding in Prime Minister Trudeau's direction, continued attempts to dictate to Britain "by the smaller members of the Commonwealth," with sympathy if not actual outright support of Canada — this was in apparent reference to African opposition to British arms sales to South Africa — would be "the death of the Commonwealth."



NIXON LAUNCHES CRASH PROGRAM TO FIGHT CANCER

"No thanks, I don't want to endanger my health!"

Those Fashion Fads

Christian Science Monitor

Perhaps one of the most futile areas to comment upon is the world of fashion. Fashions and fads, like underground rivers, operate at a sub-intellectual level. Further, there is a widespread belief that taste, unlike actions and motives, cannot be criticized. And the cynic might say there is little point to trying to curb fashions because they quickly obsolesce themselves anyway.

Still there are, at times, implications in fashions or in the promotion of them that are worth the registering of disapproval.

Two cases:

An ad for American mink coats: "Owning a mink coat is something like earning the Distinguished Service Cross. It proves that you've fought life and won . . . So go ahead. Be the first on your block to buy a mink during a recession. That's status." Crass.

The fad of bullet or cartridge belts for women is likewise out of taste.

Perhaps there is a bit of fun in the notion of woman guerrillaism. Certainly the clothes-conscious women already sporting the belts may be harmless enough. But one can hardly argue that the current cult of bombing and anarchy, in which a few young American womenfolk have enlisted, should be glorified.

Mr. Davis and Decentralization

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I have noticed that on a recent date you reprinted an item from the Trentonian, which suggests to me that you approve of its content, which implied that the policies of the Ontario Department of Education while I was Minister were centralist. The item asked whether if I became Premier this policy would be fostered in the whole Government.

The person who wrote this item originally must not have been very observant of the policies of the Department of Education. During my period of office, 10 Regional Offices, covering all parts of the Province, have been established, decentralizing a good deal of the day to day business of the Department.

Of even more dramatic effect has been the establishment of the so-called county boards of education, which were intended to have, and will have, a very considerable independent authority in defining school policies suited to the needs and wishes of their own areas. Large enough to be viable units able to cope with the many involved and complex problems in their own area — making their own decisions and acting on them. This is decentralization.

When I came to the Department of Education as Minister there were literally thousands of small school boards, independent of one another, whose every move was directed by officials in Toronto sometimes hundreds of miles away. That indeed was centralization.

Decentralization is a policy which is being explored by many departments of the present Government. If I am elected leader of the Government at the forthcoming convention, I can assure you that substantial efforts will be made to bring the activities of the Government closer to the people in any way that seems practical and effective.

Unmarried Mothers—Many Do Continue Education But Statistics Lacking

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

There has been recently expressed concern about young unmarried mothers discontinuing their schooling as noted in your editorial comment and in an article in the January 27 issue of the Globe and Mail entitled "Only 52 or 115 pregnant Metro girls return to school: study".

It should be of interest to readers in our area that a cursory review of the cases handled by the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County during 1970 indicates a considerably more optimistic situation than what might be supposed. While we would hasten to qualify our findings by noting that we have no statistics on the pregnant girls in our County who do not seek our services, we are encouraged to find that of those students we served last year, who subsequently relinquished their babies for adoption, almost all have continued their schooling according to our information.

Those who were resident in maternity homes during the latter stages of pregnancy all continued their studies at the homes and, insofar as is known to me, made their year. Since courses are generally arranged and directed by the local schools which the girls have been attending, they return to their classrooms after delivery. Others who have dropped out of school and stayed at home have either been able to continue their studies at home with the school's assistance, or in a number of cases were older students who chose to continue their education at business school or some other institution.

Only in respect to those who choose to keep their babies do we note possible cause for concern about the mother's continuing education. The young unmarried mother generally drops out of school to care for her child. As the agency does not normally maintain long - term contact with these girls, we have no statistics on those who subsequently continue their studies.

In passing, tribute should be paid to the personnel of our county secondary schools whom we find to be so understanding and co-operative in these situations.

MRS. THORA W. FULLER,
Unmarried Parent Worker.

The league was reconstituted in 1488 by Emperor Frederick III. to back war in Hungary, but expired when European politics was reshaped by the new phenomenon of Reformation.

Latter-Day Courtroom Behavior

Windsor Star

Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols of the Quebec Court of Queen's Bench is faced with the ticklish job of assuring that Paul Rose, accused of murdering Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, receives a fair trial. The task will not be an easy one considering Paul Rose's declared intent to use the trial as a propaganda vehicle for the FLQ.

On the opening day of the trial, Mr. Justice Nichols displayed restraint in handling the accused, who was conducting his own defence. Such restraint probably will be necessary if past performance in Quebec courts is any indication of what is to come.

However, there is also the prospect of the judge having to take measures to check repeated outbursts. Two recent cases in the United States have indicated opposing methods of dealing with such a problem.

In the famous Chicago Seven trial, Judge Julius Hoffman used contempt sentences against the defendants and their lawyers as a means to keep control over the court. There was, at first, a stunned reaction and then an outburst at the heavy contempt sentences. Furthermore, Judge Hoffman's handling of the trial and contempt sentences projected some of the defendants as martyrs.

In the second case, which involved 13 Black Panthers, New York State Superior Court Justice John M. Murtagh repeatedly recessed proceedings after continuous interruptions. He was following the precedent established in the immediate postwar period when alleged Communists were facing charges in U.S. courts. Mr. Justice Murtagh's decision was based on the inability of his court to proceed with the case. The case was resumed when behavior was orderly.

The second instance had the desirable affect of ending the courtroom outbursts, thereby permitting the course of justice to be followed. There were no martyrs, no more outbursts, just the orderly process of justice. The New York case illustrates the worth of patience and perseverence on the part of the presiding judge.

Mr. Justice Nichols may, however, be forced to take further steps in the case of Paul Rose if there are repeated and constant outbursts. For instance, it may become necessary for the defendant to be removed from the courtroom to watch the proceedings on closed circuit television if it becomes impossible to proceed with the case. This would be preferable to having the defendant bound, gagged and shackled as happened to Bobby Seale when he appeared before Judge Hoffman in Chicago.

What Is Human Life? Anglicans Seeking Answer by Committee

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — What is human life?

In an attempt to find a definition that could apply to subjects such as abortion, medical experimentation and human transplants, the Anglican Church of Canada will appoint a committee of doctors, theologians, social scientists and lawyers to study the question for 2½ years.

The decision came out of a debate at general synod Monday night that started out on the question of abortion.

Rev. P. R. Ellis of Surrey, B.C. submitted a motion he said was in opposition to abortion on demand as advocated by members of the Women's Liberation Movement, because he said it encourages "the downward grading of morality."

It said Canada has progressed "beyond the primitive culture of disposing of unwanted children" and called for laws to end "the indiscriminate slaughter of unborn children by abortion."

Mrs. J. H. Craven of Ottawa said talking up the sacredness of human life in abstract terms was unreal when it meant the birth of children who were unwanted and whose existence could destroy a frail family.

Her motion said the right to life involves not only existence but human dignity and healthy development.

It asked the federal government to broaden its Criminal Code legislation relating to abortion so that consideration of the pregnant woman's health would also include concern for emotional and sociological factors.

Mr. Ellis withdrew his motion and later tried unsuccessfully to reintroduce it as an endorsement of the stand the church took in 1967, which closely paralleled changes later made in the Criminal Code.

The synod heard from delegates who are doctors, all of whom hold differing views on abortion.

Dr. Gordon Wyant of Saskatoon said present hospital committees that rule on abortion applications are heavily loaded with psychiatrists who approve them "for very vague emotional disturbances."

He said abortion on demand is based on a beautiful catch phrase based on the premise that women should control their own bodies.

"If she had controlled her own body, it wouldn't have happened in the first place."

Dr. R. N. Bissonnette of Stratford, Ont., said Mrs. Craven's resolution was "too general to be of any use."

Abortion should be a matter between a woman and her doctor, he said, but "no way will I be in a position where a woman comes to me and says 'you will do an abortion on me.' "

Dr. D. H. Gould of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., in suggesting the committee to define human life, said until there is a definition there is no answer to the question of whether abortion terminates life or simply potential life

Carol Haberlin, 17, of Vancouver said no one had talked about the girls "that are going out and being slaughtered in the hotel rooms. It scares me because friends of mine are in situations like that. These are kids. They're not responsible enough to bring up kids. It is wrecking their lives."

Betty Graham, director of child welfare for Ontario's department of social and family services, said in Ontario alone there are 9,000 to 10,000 new unmarried parents every year. "I would plead that the social side of this whole question would also be explored by the committee."

Rose Clashes with His Judge But Chartrand Prefers Humor

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul Rose clashed with the judge again Monday at his trial in the kidnap-murder of Pierre Laporte, former Quebec labor minister, while in another courtroom labor leader Michel Chartrand exchanged some humorous repartee with the judge and lost a bid for a mistrial on seditious conspiracy charges.

Two jurors were chosen in the Rose trial at which Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols of Court of Queen's Bench interrupted Rose's attempt to obtain political opinions of prospective jurors and heated exchanges ensued.

Rose, conducting his own defence with a lawyer as adviser, faces charges of murdering and kidnapping Mr. Laporte, Quebec labor minister, last October. He is being tried first on the noncapital murder charge.

Chartrand, one of five men accused of seditious conspiracy, asked for a mistrial because a court stenographer became ill during proceedings and had to be replaced. The 53-year-old president of the Montreal central council of the Confederation of National Trade Unions said it was possible there would be incomplete verbatim notes.

But Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet rejected the motion, saying:

"The trial hasn't started and there is not a mistrial."

Today, Chartrand was to continue arguments that Mr. Justice Ouimet step down on grounds of partiality as presiding judge at the trial of the labor leader with co-accused lawyer Robert Lemieux, author Pierre Vallieres, teacher Charles Gagnon and Jacques Larue-Langlois, a former CBC radio producer.

Chartrand, recently sentenced to a year in jail by Mr. Justice Ouimet for contempt of court, said he and the others do not feel comfortable before him.

But Mr. Justice Ouimet said while it is impossible for any person to be completely impartial, he is not ashamed of his record on the bench.

"What do you want—a vegetable?" he asked.

At another point, Chartrand had the judge and reporters laughing when he complained he had not seen a woman since his arrest Oct. 16.

"Hey, deprived of a woman at my age," he said. "Us old guys are on our last legs."

He suggested conjugal visits from young women.

All five men were arrested Oct. 16 under the War Measures Act and only Larue-Langlois was freed on bail in December.

In the other courtroom, Rose grilled each jury candidate at length, but when the questions became political, Mr. Justice Nichols reminded him that questioning was to determine only whether a prospective juror was impartial.

"I'm just trying to find out what side he's on," Rose said at one point. "Nobody can be impartial here. Either he's on the side of the establishment or he's on the side of the workers."

Mr. Justice Nichols, who rejected four mistrial motions by Rose last week, rejected a fifth Monday.

Rose had complained that because the Crown has 52 peremptory challenges of prospective jurors and the defence has only 12, the prosecuion could choose jurors who "oppose the liberation of Quebec" and are close to the "Liberal party and the establishment."

United Church Decides Abortion Justifiable

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The United Church of Canada, not without misgivings and deep soul-searching, and in the future realization that its decisions are historic, said Monday that abortion is morally justifiable.

It made one important qualification: "in certain medical, social and economic circumstances."

Abortion on request was not implied in the resolution approved by a show of hands of the 410 commissioners, attending the 24th biennial meeting of the body that sets policy for Canada's largest Protestant church. Many abstained and vote figures were not announced.

For a time it seemed as though a decision would not be reached at this meeting. Through amendments and subamendments, opponents of the resolution put to council by the board of evangelism and social service and the board of women, sought to have it referred back to committee for further study. These manoeuvres failed.

Overlooked in the spirited discussion—except by the committee which presented the resolution—was the fact that the preamble, lengthy and containing the gist of the resolution itself, was approved unanimously and without discussion.

In essence, the debate was over an issue already decided.

One of the points under discussion was that the resolution leaves it to a medical doctor to make the final decision on an abortion

"This makes a doctor a judge, juror and executioner," said a commissioner.

Under the Criminal Code, abortions in Canada are legal on therapeutic grounds if approved by a hospital committee. This, the committee resolution approved by general council, wants changed.

It should be the private decision of the woman concerned, it said.

The resolution, approved clause by clause, was sweeping; some commissioners thought it was too broad.

Among other things, it recommended:

—Calling on the federal government to remove from the Criminal Code existing restrictions on abortions.

—Urging provincial governments to provide the necessary facilities and personnel "to meet the increasing number of abortions."

—Asking all hospitals to grant nurses the option of non-participation, on conscientious grounds, to abstain from "abortion proceedings."

—Requesting clergy and laity to initiate discussions of the moral and legal issues of abortion with people of "differing views at all levels."

Its key points:

"The international use of abortion as a means of birth control is morally undesirable; bringing unwanted children into the world is irresponsible."

Munro Sees Health Cost Rise Slowed

OTTAWA (CP) — Brakes applied a year ago to soaring health care costs are beginning to take hold.

Federal Health Minister John Munro said in an interview that the first decline has been recorded in the rate of increase in costs that are nearing $2.3 billion a year.

Costs have been climbing at an average annual rate of more than 16 per cent for the last four years in the field of hospital insurance

An analysis of the various provincial programs now shows the rise will be held to 10 or 11 per cent in 1971-72. That means chopping some $60,000,000 from the hospital program.

Financial authorities here and in the provinces are hoping for a comparable limitation on the rate of increase in medical care insurance costs.

The full picture in medical care insurance won't be known until more bills are in from Quebec's program, the most recent addition to the insurance scheme.

Analysis of data on hospital insurance in the provinces indicates that the areas of major savings included reduction in lengths of stay by patients and improvements in bed usage.

However, federal authorities said the effort to curtail rising health care costs is not yet over the hump. The real test will come late next fall or early in 1972 when an assessment can be made of the 1972-73 costs picture.

A reason is that union contracts covering hospital employees in several provinces, including Ontario, will be open for negotiation. Other factors are the degree of inflation that occurs and the rate of population growth, which affects costs because the health insurance programs are universal.

Commons Atmosphere Changed As Prime Minister Back Home

OTTAWA (CP) — It's funny how one man can overhaul the atmosphere of the Commons.

While Prime Minister Trudeau was in Asia — ever since the House resumed after the Christmas recess — the chamber never seemed its usual self. The daily question period tended to drag — there didn't appear to be an excessive dose of either smiles or snarls, and even the occasional attempt at humor seemed flat.

The public assisted in creating this apparent pall. They stayed away from the public galleries by the hundreds.

Then Mr. Trudeau returned to the Commons Monday. Sure enough, the galleries were virtually filled. There were 10 people in the diplomatic gallery — the first time the seats were used by so many since last fall.

The officials' gallery was packed, and so was the gallery reserved for senators and their friends. There was standing room only in the press gallery.

Just watching the Liberal benches was enough indication that the action was back. Backbenchers couldn't wait to pound their desks with enthusiasm when Mr. Trudeau, dressed in a light brown suit and orange shirt, stood up to give a report on his travels.

It was contagious. When Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield rose a few minutes later, his followers tried to outdo the Liberals. Then the New Democrats had a turn when their leader, T. C. Douglas, got to his feet.

The old fire returned. All the interruptions, wisecracks, laughter and anger were back.

Mr. Stanfield noticed it because, during his remarks about the prime minister's absence, he said that cabinet ministers had felt "that the action was taking place many thousands of miles away rather than here at home."

There was an entirely new audience for humor. So Mr. Stanfield talked about the prime minister's encounter with the orang-outang named Joan in Borneo.

Some people might accuse Mr. Trudeau of frivolous behavior with the animal, said Mr. Stanfield, but perhaps they were having a serious discussion, "perhaps about the possibility of a cabinet appointment for Joan as part of the government's current reorganization program.' "

Then the Opposition leader added, "and I hope nobody will think I am being unfair to Joan."

Next, Mar. Stanfield talked about the prime minister coming across a giant turtle lying on its back, "this hard-shelled creature, head withdrawn under cover, feet pawing the air in protest, all of its immense potential immobilized."

The Opposition leader suggested Mr. Trudeau would be musing: "I wonder how the minister of finance is making out with the economy?"

Trudeau Accused by Opponents Of Downgrading Parliament

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition speakers marked Prime Minister Trudeau's return to the Commons Monday by spending much of the day protesting that he is downgrading that institution in favor of his own empire.

Mr. Trudeau, just back from a Southeast Asian trip and the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference at Singapore, absorbed attacks on the unemployment situation and gave a summary of his trip before retiring for the day at the end of the 40-minute daily question period.

As soon as he left debate resumed on the government reorganization bill—an omnibus measure that opposition MPs claim furthers a cabinet design to bypass Parliament whenever possible.

The wide-ranging bill would do several things, from establishing a department of the environment to allowing senior public servants to continue paying into government superannuation schemes after their early retirement.

But the opposition's main source of criticism on the bill still at second reading after five days of debate—was that it gives the government more power to make arbitrary decisions without consulting Parliament. Debate on the bill continues today.

The most contentious issue is the fact that the bill would allow the government to create up to five new ministers and ministries by order-in-council, rather than having to create them through legislation.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said Parliament "is being raped by this very subtle step," and deplored the lack of attention being paid to the bill by the news media.

The bill's measures, he said, "ride roughshod over the principle of having to come to this House to justify the government's actions."

Not one justifiable reason had yet been advanced on why the government should not come before Parliament before creating a new ministry.

In addition he said, the bill appeared to open the way for the government to attempt to transfer funds from one department to another through a proclamation and order-in-council rather than through a spending estimate and an appropriation bill.

With a little care the government could concentrate "at least half of its worthwhile opportunities" in the five new ministries it could create for itself.

Those five ministers could conceivably form half of a cabinet of 10 with all-encompassing powers.

John Burton (NDP—Regina East) agreed, saying that within the last two or three years "the sole concern of the government has been to increase the power of the executive branch."

Under the bill, he said, Parliament could vote money for the use of a department or an agency and later in the year see the money transferred to a new department "constructed on an entirely different set of principles."

Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville) said the bill gives the government the authority to "spend millions and millions of dollars to further entrench the Liberal establishment."

"It gives the government the power to spend and expand without recourse to the representatives of the people."

Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East) said the provisions to allow the government to create new ministers of state arbitrarily reflected the "uncontrolled desire" to increase the power of a small number of people.

The proposed department of environment also received some attention.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) said creation of the department was an important step forward in controlling pollution. He hoped that the department would have the enforcement powers to be effective.

CBC Interview Assailed

OTTAWA (CP) — A televised CBC interview Sunday night in which five Vietnamese who had been barred from Canada appeared drew a protest in the Commons Monday.

E. B. Osler (L—Winnipeg South Centre) said the CBC had given the Vietnamese an opportunity to "propagandize." He asked whether Immigration Minister Otto Lang plans to protest.

Mr Lang said he hadn't seen the program and the CBC was outside his jurisdiction. He refused the Vietnamese entry to Canada last week.

The interview was filmed in Moscow. Only one of the five Vietnamese spoke, through a translator

START OF A WIG — Synthetic hair wound on long drums is cut into three or four-inch lengths at Mod Hair, a new wig-making plant in Toronto. The cutting is the first step in making the wigs, which come in 27 shades. The plant can produce up to 50,000 wigs a month. (CP Photo)

New Synthetic Wig Making Plant Geared to Produce 50,000 A Month

TORONTO (CP) — The business of making a wig is something like the business of cutting and setting your real hair, in an Alice-through-the-looking-glass kind of way.

At Mod Hair, a new synthetic wig plant, it begins with 27 shades of synthetic hair wound on 27 long drums, giving the makers a color choice most women would be delighted to have.

The hair is cut in three or four-inch lengths and gathered into little bundles to be weighed, a wig's worth per bundle. Too much hair and the wig would be too heavy, too little and it could look bald.

The bundles then go to a sewing machine operator who stitches them into long rows of hair and then to another who stitches on a binding edge.

The rows are given to people who spread each one on a piece of brown paper, comb it, trim it if necessary and wet it, then roll it onto a roller about three feet long. They vary in diameter, just as ordinary rollers do, depending on the size the curl is to be.

A wig factory's version of a hair dryer is a big oven in which the rollers are hung on racks to dry at high heats.

What comes off the roller is a sausage curl looking much shorter than the straight row of hair did.

That goes back to the sewing room to be stitched on the stretch wig base, a sort of reverse scalping.

The results are long wigs, short wigs, curly and straight wigs in one color or a mix, wigs for men and wigs for women.

The company has about 60 women making the wigs, and is geared to turn out up to 50,000 a month. Its president is Mark Eng, whose father runs a wig producing company in Hong Kong, the birthplace of most synthetic hair wigs.

Army Cartridge Belt Now Accents Fashions

NEW YORK (Reuter — Greenwich Village demi-hippies and Fifth Avenue matrons, girded with cartridge belts and with gas masks slung over their shoulders, have armed themselves for the latest fashion fad.

Several stores in New York and other major American cities have taken on the look of as retailers ruch to cash in on the new "army chic."

The look began with cartridge belts, similar to those worn by gunmen in Western movies, filled with imitation bullets and worn either slung across the chest or hung on the hips.

Then came Second World War khaki ammuniion belts, with snap-on pockets, designed to hold bullet clips.

But bullets are only a part of the wardrobe. It has been suggested that the proper handbag to carry with the new look is a Swedish gas mask bag, although any slouchy shoulder-strap military bag will do.

While some ingredients of the army look can still be found in army surplus stores, most cartridge belts have to be bought new and range in price from $25 to $35.

One distributor has already reported sales worth $100,000 after only a few weeks.

Not everyone thinks the fad is cute. The New York Times, in a rare fashion editorial, recently attacked it. The strongly-worded comment, entitled "Let them eat bullets," suggested a number of unusual fashion ideas, including the use of a replica atomic warhead to make an amusing hat.

It continued:

"None of these fashion fantasies is more offensive than the new fad of the cartridge belt, apparently designed to give 'relevance' to women's stylishness.

"When the cartridge belt was first worn by armed student militants during a campus revolt, the public was justifiably shocked. Both by the symbols of violence and by the depth of fear and frustration reflected in the display.

"The decadent chic, in turn, mirrors society's pathological lack of comprehension and compassion. It debases tastes and life-styles as it transforms the implements of extremist revolutionaries into toys for the rich."

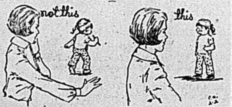
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Jenny, don't run with that knife. Give it to me right away or I'll spank. Jenny, don't make me chase you."

Mother: "We always carry a knife with the point toward the floor. That's the way. Bring the knife to me slowly and carefully."

A knife should be kept out of a toddler's reach, but if she gets her hands on one, don't scold or chase her. Give her calm commands so she won't get excited and run with it.

New Element In History

CAIRO (AP) — Waitresses jobs—an American inspired experiment here—have introduced a new element in the history of Islamic Egypt.

It started 12 years ago when the American-run Hilton International Hotel pioneered the scheme as soon as it opened. The coffee shop became an instant attraction, not so much for itself, but for its novelty—young women employed as waitresses.

Today, pretty and beguiling Egyptian waitresses have become an accepted part of the Cairo scene.

Yet the Hilton and the newly-inaugurated Sheraton—both establishments with American backing—are the only ones in town to hire young women for this job.

Though it is a relatively minor change by Western standards, it is a giant step forward by local scales.

In most Middle Eastern countries—especially Islamic ones—women still go about cocooned in long white or black shrouds. Many still see the world through veils.

"It was not easy when we started," says Rajia Bishay, social director of the Hilton. "Because most of the girls come from leading families, it was trying for them to take tips. We explained this was part of the job, if they wanted it."

Still, Middle Eastern sensitivity lingers. The girls would rather be called "hostesses." The word "waitresses" recalls to their minds the voluptuous attendants to the rulers of the Roman or Ottoman Empires.

Conservative elders may frown on what they consider a radical custom.

In such cases, Nagwa Abdel Hamid, like some of her colleagues, has told her parents, "I'm a hostess, and only take menu orders. Serving is done by others."

Nagwa, a cute Egyptian with a flash of her dark eyes and a defiant tilt of her chin, says: "I'd rather serve guests in the coffee shop than stay at home. I am happy in my job."

She is happy but perhaps not quite satisfied. And, like several of her colleagues, she considers her present job a stepping-stone to higher ambitions.

Her counterpart in the Sheraton also has different plans for the future.

Affaf Ahmed frankly admits, "working in the coffee shop makes good money. But I'm saving up to study for a MA degree in commerce. It is my dream to work as a qualified accountant."

The management of both establishments confide that they each get more than 200 applicants when a vacancy is announced.

Sometimes a waitress's job is not only money. Marriage is also a consideration.

Several of the girls have married men from wealthy sheikhdoms and other countries.

THE FINISHED PRODUCT — A model wears a synthetic hair wig made in Toronto by Mod Hair, a new wig plant geared to turn out about 50,000 wigs a month. The curls are set permanently during the manufacturing process. The plant makes curly and straight wigs of various lengths for men and women in 27 different shades. (CP Photo)

Nurses Favor New Pants Suits

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — The pants-suit craze is sweeping through this community—particularly its hospitals.

Nurses at Civic Hospital were the first here to don the new outfits which have been gaining popularity among hospital staff in various parts of North America since last year.

The pants suits at Civic come in a wide range of pastels and general reaction has been favorable.

A spokesman for the nurses in the pediatrics ward said the pants are extremely practical and the older children think the suits are "very sharp".

The little ones, however, don't seem to have noticed the difference, she said.

A nurse at another Peterborough hospital said the uniforms were approved for use at the hospital in November and quite a few nurses have switched.

At a Peterborough clinic about "1½ nurses" have followed the trend, a nurse said.

"It's only a matter of time before we're all wearing them," a nurse at another centre added.

"Bending and reaching aren't problem manoeuvres any more," one satisfied nurse commented.

Teen-ager Claims 'Pot' Not Harmful

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your letter against pot last week was a joke. If you dried-up creeps want kids to believe you, why don't you tell them the truth? I have yet to see a single letter in your column telling the good things about pot? Why is that? I'll tell you why. Because you are a bunch of fuddy-duddies who are trying to scare us kids to death. Well, it won't work. Most of us know more about pot than our parents and teachers put together.

I'm a 16-year-old girl who lives in a medium-size Midwestern town. I have been smoking pot at least once a day for nearly two years. It hasn't hurt me at all. In fact, it has done me a lot of god. Not only is pot smoking a pleasurable experience, but it has expanded by consciousness and opened my eyes to the beauties of the world.

Grass has not dulled my mind. It has sharpened it. My thinking is clearer now than it ever was. I am more aware of things around me — things I never noticed before. Objects that used to look small now look large. When I smoke, I see mental images in color instead of black and white. I used to be too shy to speak up in a crowd. Now I am a brillian conversationalist. I can talk on any subject. People listen spellbound. At this very moment I am stoned yet I am 100 per cent lucid. I am expressing my innermost feelings brilliantly. When finish this letter it will be a masterpiece.

If you fail to print it, I will know you are a Communist. In Russia, they present only one side of a story. The side they want people to believe. I'll be watching and waiting. — THE TRUTH WILL WIN.

DEAR T.W.W.: Here is your letter — but I had to make some corrections in order to put it in the paper. Your "masterpiece" contained 17 misspelled words, four non sequiturs, and three unfinished sentences. Thanks for proving once again that a person who is stoned is no judge of his lucidity, his brilliance or the calibre of his performance.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please state your opinion on women in pantsuits. My husband announced when the pantsuit came out that if I ever wore such an outfit he would not be seen with me. He hates them.

Last week I tried on several pantsuits just to see how I'd look. (I loathe the midi, and the mini is definitely out.) I thought I looked great. How do you feel about women in pantsuits? — CHOMPING AT THE BIT IN BELLINGHAM.

DEAR BELL: The pantsuit is for the tall, slim-hipped gal with a flat tummy and a small caboose. The trousers must be well cut and the jacket must be strategically proportioned. In my opinion, the pantsuit can be smashing on the right figure. On the wrong figure it can be a disaster. (Your husband has probably seen some of the walking disasters.) Since he has stated such strong opposition against the pantsuit, that should settle the question for you. Petunia.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm 13. Mother says I'm too young to date. She also says I'm too young to drive, and too young to be out after curfew. The law says, I'm also too young to drink, too young to smoke and too young to work. What can a girl my age do? — BORED.

DEAR BORED: You can study hard and accomplish something in school. You can make worthwhile friends and develop interests that will broaden your scope and contribute something to others. You can help your mother around the house and take some of the burden off her shoulders. And you can be thankful that you have a mother who won't let you step all over her and do as you please.

Frozen Turkey Carcass Makes Excellent Soup

By MARY MOORE

Frozen turkey carcasses are still taking up freezer space evidently for I am opening requests for turkey soup: "Mary I missed your turkey soup recipe this year." "I do not know how to make soup from turkey bones."

So I hauled out the soup pot and pulled my turkey carcass from the freezer and went to work.

TURKEY SOUP (about 8 or 9 cups) bones from 1 12-lb. turkey (preferably with a little meat attached)

8 cups cold water
¼ cup tomato paste (OR 1 cup canned tomatoes)
½ can undiluted mushroom soup (optional)
1 1½" onion chopped (OR ¼ cup bottled flakes)
1 cup chopped outer celery
2 tbsps. rice
1 cup noodles (pressed down and broken to measure)
1 cup diced (¼") carrots
1 cup chopped turkey meat
¼ tsp. MSG
1 tsp. salt
½ cup fresh frozen peas

NOTE: Do not be restricted by the list of vegetables I have drawn up. If you have other vegetables on hand that you want to use go ahead but do include the tomatoes and onion.

Add cold water to turkey carcass and simmer three hours covered. Strain through colander. Cut any meat from bones, chop and add to broth. Chill, preferably overnight, skim off fat. To skimmed broth add all remaining ingredients and simmer until carrots are tender — about ½ hour or a little longer. You should taste this for salt, because I am reducing the amount of salt I add to my cooking because nutritionists say older folk should reduce their salt intake. You can always add a little more at the table.

Actually this is so good and rich it is a main course soup accompanied by a hot bread or toast and a generous dish of cut-up Cheddar cheese.

Blind Girl Copes Differently

SHERWOOD PARK, Alta. (CP) — Patti Wilson says there are no disadvantages to being blind.

"You just have to learn to cope in a different way," said the 18-year-old high school student.

The Grade 11 student at Salisbury composite high school in suburban Sherwood Park said in an interview that she doesn't want anyone's sympathy. She never uses the word pity.

But the girl, who was born blind, does become discouraged at times.

"Not in public, but sometimes when someone starts showing sympathy," she said. "There's no harm in someone offering you assistance, but it bothers me that people think I am helpless.

"Sometimes people want to help with something you can do. The problem is how to tell them what you can do without hurting their feelings."

Five days a week Patti, like thousands of other Canadian students, waits for a school bus. The only thing to distinguish her is her white cane.

In school, the teacher or someone in the class reads what's on the blackboard. Most of the books for her class she gets on tape, Patti said, but some are in braille and others she cannot get in tape or braille. The latter books are read to her.

"Usually one of my parents reads to me."

Patti gives a lot of credit to her mother for not offering the protection she might so easily have given to a blind child.

"My mom had me do as much as possible. When I was younger the family tride to keep things off the floor, but I'm not sure they even do that anymore."

Patti is class representative at her school and writes for the school newspaper, but the way she tells about these things makes you realize she dosen't consider them outstanding.

She likes to talk about her dog Taffy and her two horses.

"If someone goes with me, I can be convinced to go riding."

But basically she prefers the dog.

"I throw things for him and he brings them back."

Patti's best subject is typing and she wants to be a secretary. She types with the rest of her class, but uses earphones plugged to a tape recorder to listen to dictation rather than reading from a book as other students do.

Successful Living

Life Can Be Successful If One Perseveres

By DORIS CLARK

In an article entitled, Success Comes in Cans, LuVain Bue wrote: "In your mind's eye, imagine four chairs in front of you. In the first chair is a man who was tongue-tied at birth; in the second chair is a man who is blind; in the third chair is a man who is deaf; and in the fourth chair is a man who was in a terrible automobile accident at the peak of his career and not expected to live.

These men had real handicaps. They had every right to say, 'This is the end for me'. Instead, they knew they could still succeed in life. And they did.

The first person, the one who was tongue-tied at birth, was Demosthenes; and he became the greatest orator in Greece. The blind man was Milton, who wrote Paradise Lost. The man who was deaf was Beethoven. In the fourth chair is a man who was shattered by a head-on collision with a bus. The doctors told him he'd never walk again — that he would never again play his favorite game, golf. He made up his mind that he would . . . and he came back to win the PGA once, the Master's Tournament twice, and the National Open Championship four times! His name — Ben Hogan."

If you feel you're being held back — kept from the things you want — you should realize that the only person standing between you and what you want — is you! — Kathleen H. Pfohl, in CEB Outlook.

Dear Doris: I am a bachelor, 49. This lady and I both love dancing and have similar styles and that's what brought us together in the first place. I have gone longer with this one than the others, and am deeply attached to her, but sometimes I'm so confused I'd like to break it all off.

Her children are all for me, but it is mostly them that hold me back. The youngest doesn't care for work and they all bug me at times.

I enjoy my freedom even at my age. We have talked about waiting till the boys grow up and leave home but that's quite a while to wait too.

Also I have been thinking about wanting to date other girls, one in particular. Guess I'm a crazy mixed-up kid, so to speak. — Undecided

Dear Undecided: I wouldn't touch that decision of yours with a 10-foot pole. You are used to your freedom. Raising boys is not exactly your cup of tea.

Would it be fair to this lady if you were to marry her without making a firm resolution to control your roving eye? Marriage takes loyalty, commitment, and sharing.

Either offer her yourself and all that means, or let the commitment be to occasional companionship only, with no strings attached.

• • •

Dear Doris: This group of girls made fun of another girl because they couldn't stand the way she looks and the way she does things. They imitated her style and called her a lot of mean names. They also swore and threw paper airplanes at her.

What I would like to know is why did they make fun of her like that? She never did anything to them.

Most of the girls in my class thought these girls were pretty nice and some of them are well liked by students in their own grade (some think students of lower grades are "stupid little brats"), but they give the teachers a hard time. — Wendy.

Dear Wendy: At least you were concerned enough to write a letter about it. And therein lies the beginning of wisdom!

Trouble is, in teen years, we all struggle for approval, for the spotlight, especially for the admiration of all the other people who happen to be the same age as we are. There are exceptions, in the unusually independent thinkers, of which you seem to be one, or you wouldn't be questioning the way these mimics and clowns are acting.

From here I couldn't guess just what the victim does to be so undesirable; but I do believe you could start a new trend by being kind to her.

U.C.W. Meeting

HOLLOWAY STREET UCW

Mrs. T. W. Spear, UCW Presbyterial president was guest speaker for the January general meeting of Holloway Street United Church.

Mrs. G. Dobbs presided and a thought provoking devotional was presented by Mrs. Way. Progress she explained is small roads grown into highways and compared lives to highways. "They determine our destinations, there are many roads in each life — one is service for others, as did the good Samaritan; second is the road of hope which runs through our homes. There are many others and at the beginning one must stop, look back and assess our progress during the past year. We see some mistakes and failures, may we profit by these and go on trying." She concluded by saying that some are too timid to face up to life, some want religion without a cross, which is service, denial, enlightenment and involvement.

During the devotional portion of the meeting, a solo was rendered by Mrs. Butler.

Mrs. A. C. Campbell introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. T. W. Spear the Presbyterial president opened her remarks by maintaining that the UCW needs to get to work and said, "The UCW means church women united with Christ. Us is a small word, but it means many things — likeness and talents." She recommended the book, "Never A Dull Moment" by E. Price which contains much information and comfort.

Mrs. H. Wilson expressed appreciation to Mrs. Spears for an inspirational and challenging message.

Several items of business were discussed among which was the congregational meeting to be held Feb. 2. The Presbyterial UCW meeting will be held Feb. 11 in Tabernacle Church with Dr. A. C. Forest editor of the United Church Observer as guest speaker, who will speak on a subject dealing with the theme of the meeting "Responsible Communication". A fall bazaar is planned for Oct. 27 with Mrs. Churchill as convener.

Mrs. Ken Parks gave a resume of bazaars throughout the years dealing with the original, right up to the present time. She also gave a report on the financial support which the UCW had given the building fund.

The executive served refreshments.

Ingrid Bergman in Shaw Show Called Triumph of Nostalgic

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — Ingrid Bergman tried out a Shaw comedy in Brighton Monday night, and one critic called the evening a triumph of nostaliga.

For the first time in its history, Brighton's Theatre Royal was sold out.

The 55-year-old Swedish actress played Lady Cicely Waynflete in Captain Brassbound's Conversion.

"The audience was predominantly the sort of middle-aged people who relished Miss Bergman's films in the '40s and they now came to pay tribute to a legend," wrote Peter Waymark in The Times.

MASTIC BEACH, N.Y. (AP) — Ethel Casey, who played leading stage roles in the United States and abroad, died Saturday at her home after a long illness. She was 49.

Miss Casey was a leading lady at the Arena Stage in Washington, D.C., until 1961, when she joined the American Repertory Theatre for a tour of 26 European cities.

MILAN Italy (AP) — Nino Besozzi, 69, a comedian for 50 years in Italian plays and movies who reached the peak of his career in the 1930s, died today after suffering a stroke.

CHICHESTER, England (Reuter) — One of the starriest companies ever assembled in Britain will take part in this year's Chichester Festival theatre season marking the 10th anniversary of this now famous open-stage playhouse modelled on the Stratford, Ont., Festival theatre.

Dame Edith Evans, Sir John Gielgud Margaret Leighton, Joyce Redman, Anna Calder-Marshall, Nigel Patrick, Rene Asherson, Beatric Lahmann and Sir John Clements, the present director of the theatre, are among the leading players to appear in a varied repertory of four new productions starting May 5.

The 19-week season, the longest so far, will open with Sheridan's The Rivals, directed by Sir John Clements, who also will play Sir Anthony Absolute with a cast including Miss Leighton as Mrs. Malaprop.

Fund Chairman Honored

Alderman Ben Corke, 1970 chairman of the United Appeal Campaign, was awarded an engraved plaque in appreciation of his services, which were called upon after the campaign was already under way. His personal attention to the supplementary campaign, which raised more than $8,000, together with being chairman of the appeal which raised $130,000, earned him the gratitude of the UCS.

UCS Speaker:

Voluntary Financing Likely to Change

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

The growth of the "modern welfare system stems from the history of shifting responsibility from the family, to organized voluntary effort, and then to government."

Henry Stubbins, executive director of the Community Funds and Councils of Canada, further stated that more united fund raising campaigns are being organized each year and are annually raising more money.

He told the annual meeting of the Belleville and District United Community Services last night that they could expect an increasing gap between money raised and funds required.

He also predicted that the face of community fund raising would be changing in the future.

"There is a widely held assumption that the united campaign is the best organization to give leadership to voluntary financing in our current urban and suburban setting . . . I have no doubt that something better will evolve in the future."

He stated that in their present form, the agencies "are barely keeping up with increased costs and population growth and are actually falling behind in terms of the growing needs of the agencies."

He directed members of the UCS to "deal with the gap" and not worry about eliminating it. We can assume "that there will always be a gap."

Cut backs in the budgets of agencies, more pressures for governmental support and more fees from those who can afford to pay for the services are the traditional ways of dealing with this gap.

"Steadily rising incomes and a greater spread of wealth mean that more people are able to pay an increased share of the cost of services traditionally offered by United Fund agencies."

He referred to the budgeting process, "as practiced in many Funds today," as "unimaginative and even mechanical."

He revealed that the "United Funds are not really happy with the current situation," and predicted a leaning towards establishing priorities for the funds raised.

In stressing this importance to deal with the more essential problems of society, Mr. Stubbins, himself a past United Fund raiser in the Ottawa district, did not intend "to downgrade the tremendous significance of grinding poverty in our midst . . . the elimination of which has to be our main challenge today."

At the same time he expressed optimism for Canada saying that "for the first time in Canada's history, the poor represent a relatively small minority of our population."

"Perhaps in the neighborhood of 25 per cent."

The logical summation of this statement holds that 75 per cent of the population must have more money . . . a fact he backed up by stating that "more people . . . are able to pay for part or all of the costs of community services."

He drew attention to the fact of "the rapid expansion of governmental health and welfare in Canada in the past 40 years.

"Not only has government developed a whole new range of income maintenance and social service programs, it has also moved into fields that were traditionally voluntary, largely because of the inability of the voluntary sector to finance its own programs in the face of new problems and exploding and increasing needs."

Locally, the executive of the UCS expressed appreciation for raising "at least 10 per cent more" than was raised last year.

In 1969, the Belleville United Community Services raised a total of more than $116,000. In 1970, the total was $131,000.

Although this was above the minimum goal set by the service, it fell approximately $7,000 short of the goal of $138,000

Robert J. Ord, president of the UCS, followed the ideas of Mr. Stubbins when he stated that "we in United Community Services are concerned with people.

"A constant major task we have is to determine if the community resources that relate to people are sufficient, outdated or unnecessarily duplicating each other.

"We also have to determine if there are unmet needs of people for which there are no community resources."

Much of the success for the past year's campaign rested on the hiring of an executive director.

Tribute, paid to all the volunteers and committee members, was especially warm to Isidore Cooperman, who assumed the position of executive director on July 1, 1970.

Mr. Ord took the opportunity to thank city council for making the hiring of Mr. Cooperman possible.

Ald. Ben Corke, campaign organizer for 1970, expressed appreciation for the extensive assistance received.

"We ran a meek and mild campaign.

"People just walked in with their money," he quipped.

15 mph in Town

Main Street Snowmobiles Banned

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Town council last night passed a bylaw prohibiting the operation of snowmobiles on Main Street and limiting them to a speed of 15 miles an hour on all other streets. The bylaw stated, however, that " a motorized snow vehicle shall not be prohibited from crossing Main Street provided it shall be made to cross at right angles to Main Street and with due precaution in respect to traffic." The regulations for snowmobile operators followed a meeting between a special committee of council and Vincent Gentile, a representative of the Picton Snowmobile Association.

Mr. Gentile, who attended last night's council session with approximately 12 fellow snowmobilers remarked that he was "pleased" with he recent discussion between councillors and snowmobile association delegates. Reeve Albert Piroth termed it " a very fruitful meeting" and added that complaints concerning snowmobiles have dropped to nil in recent weeks. He commented that "teeth" were needed in the snowmobiler's code of ethics and suggested that the new bylaw could provide needed controls.

Mayor Margaret Ackerman asked if the 15 mph speed limit also would be enforced on the inner ice of Picton Harbor and was told by Mr. Gentile that it would be in effect there as well as in the streets. Council supported a recommendation to permit organized snowmobile events in Picton subject to their approval by the police chief.

The Picton Snowmobile Association will be asked to draw up a code of ethics to control the operation of snowmobiles and to make it public through insertion in the local paper.

Snowblower Purchase Vetoed by Council

PICTON (Staff) — Town councillors last night vetoed the purchase of a snowblower for clearing sidewalks after the suggestion was questioned by mayor Margaret Ackerman. Mrs. Ackerman observed that there are 42 miles of sidewalk in Picton and commented that it would be doubtful if all the snow could be removed from all sidewalks. She said the snowblower, which could cost $4,000, would not benefit all tax payers.

Mayor Ackerman suggested that the small blade plow now used for cleaning walks should be operated as a bonus service only in areas assessed for commercial and industrial taxes. It was her opinion that town residents should be required to follow an existing bylaw which states that individuals must shovel their walks within 24 hours following a snow storm. Mayor Ackerman added that unemployed persons could be hired to do this shovelling.

Picton reeve Albert Piroth, who initially proposed the purchase of a snowblower, commented that the machine could also clean litter and dust from the walks during the summer. He said the cost of the snowblower would be approximately $3,500. The reeve pointed out that Wellington village now operates a similar piece of equipment with good results.

Mayor Ackerman moved that council adopt the public works committee report, deleting the proposal to purchase a snow blower. Council carried this motion and a companion motion requiring council to advertise the bylaw requiring town residents to shovel their sidewalks regularly.

Picton to Draw Plans For Fire Hall Addition

PICTON (Staff) — Preparation of preliminary plans for the construction of an addition to the Picton fire hall to provide space for town offices, another fire truck and a lock-up was ordered last night by town council. At a combined meeting of the fire and emergency and the planning and development committees last month alternatives to this plan were discussed and rejected. It had been suggested earlier in council that the required facilities could be constructed at the site of the former Mary Street School. It was also observed that additions and alterations to the town hall could be made to accommodate town offices, a lock up and space for a new fire truck.

Councillor William Lane reminded fellow committee members of current proposals are acceptable and an now under consideration between the Ontario department of public works and the town for the extension of fire protection services to the hospital complex at the former Camp Picton. He remarked that if the town's proposals agreement reached an additional fire truck and extra equipment would be required. An addition to the existing fire hall would be needed to house the new engine.

The committees examined the cost of renovating old buildings as opposed to new construction and the practicality of additions to the present fire hall. It was decided that the Mary Street School property, now used as a free parking lot should be sold.

UCS Holds Annual Meeting

Concern over allocation of funds and methods employed for their use formed part of the talk by Henry Stubbins (second from right), executive director of the Community Funds and Councils of Canada, at last night's annual meeting of the Belleville and District United Community Services. Joining the after-meeting discussions were Isidore Cooperman, executive director, Robert Ord, returned president and, extreme right, Rev. A. Laurie Sutherland, the 1971 United Appeal campaign chairman.

No Problem: Runacres

Quinte Trend Is Unwed Mothers Continue Education

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The educational problem of the unmarried mother goes far deeper than the availability of schooling.

That's the opinion of social workers who counsel unwed mothers in this area.

Across Canada a groundswell of opinion is growing that the unwed mother gets less than a fair shake in the matter of education.

Newspapers report that the expectant schoolgirl is discriminated against — forced to drop out and discontinue her education, or lose a year of schooling at the very least.

The matter even came before eastern Ontario directors of education at a recent conference. They were told to review the situation in their districts before public opinion became militant and forced panic reaction.

But in Hastings county, the situation is well in hand, in the opinion of school principals, teachers, social workers and the girls themselves.

"I looked over the situation and found the schools had it beautifully under control," said director of education Eric Runacres. "I can forget about that one."

In a letter to the editor of The Intelligencer Mrs. Thora Fuller, unmarried parent worker with the Family and Children's Service of Hastings county, wrote that "a review . . indicates a considerably more optimistic situation here.

Almost all the pregnant schoolgirls who later relinquished their babies continued their schooling and made their year.

"Only is respect to those who choose to keep their babies do we note possible cause for concern about the mother's continuing education," wrote Mrs. Fuller. "The young unmarried mother generally drops out of school to care for her child."

But there is more to this than meets the eye, social workers say. The senior high school girl who is strongly motivated toward continuing her education does so, with home study and at maternity homes. She returns to school after delivery.

But the girl who keeps her baby is often one with little or no academic inclination before the unplanned pregnancy, and the baby is often used as an excuse for dropping out of school

Last year, 97 unwed mothers appealed to the local Family and Children's Service agency for help. Of these, 59 gave up their babies and 38 elected to keep them. No breakdown on the number of schoolgirls included in this total is immediately available.

What happens to the schoolgirl who finds herself pregnant?

In the first place, she is not a promiscuous street-walker. The father is usually a steady boyfriend.

The pregnant schoolgirl in Hastings county can remain in the classroom until delivery if she wants to. The board or individual schools have no ruling against continuing attendance, nor do they exert subtle pressures to get the girl to leave.

But the girls usually drop out of their own accord somewhere around the middle of the fifth month.

Homes for unwed mothers don't accept girls before this, believing it psychologically unsound for them to spend much more than three months in a home.

If the girl goes to a maternity home, the receiving agency notifies the local board that her tuition is being continued, and the board picks up the tab.

If the girl decides to remain at home, she can receive home instruction. In many cases, teachers bring the girls back to school at night to use laboratory facilities.

Girls who return to school after delivery report no discrimination from their classmates. They "get along fine" with their own age group, but members of their parents' generation are not as understanding.

The older generation takes the attitude: "You've made a mistake; now you've got to pay for it."

The treatment meted out to the unwed mother here contrasts with reports coming from oher centres. In Winnipeg, the school board recently voted to ask pregnant girls to leave, saying that "a girl who is pregnant and unmarried cannot expect to be part of the system."

The number of out-of-wedlock pregnancies is higher there, too, remaining steady at about 17 pregnancies reported each year for every 1,000 girls in school.

With 8,529 students, both male and female, registered in Hastings county high schools the number of unmarried mothers who appealed to the Family and Children's Service was 97. Not all of these were girls going to school.

Although no official breakdown is available, it would appear that the number of high doesn't go any higher than about six for each 1,000 female students a year.

There has been a steady increase in the number of unmarried mothers applying to the local agency. But the increase, in the opinion of social workers, can be attributed to the increase in population. In 1966, 71 unmarried mothers were registered; in 1967, 80; in 1968, 91; in 1969, 89 and in 1970, 97.

Some Rancor Remains with Ruel Over Ousting as Coach

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Ruel is happier today in his role as chief scout with Montreal Canadiens than he was as coach of the National Hockey League club.

"Let's say this—I like scouting better than coaching in this city," he says in his blunt observation on the subject.

Now 33, Ruel, a native of Sherbrooke, Que., became the youngest person ever to coach in the NHL when he was appointed to replace veteran Toe Blake after he retired in 1968.

In his rookie year as coach, Ruel duplicated Blake's 1968 Stanley Cup triumph with the Canadiens But last spring the Montreal club missed the playoffs for the first time in more than 20 seasons.

Two months ago Ruel resigned as coach to resume his previous job as chief scout. He was succeeded by Al MacNeil, who had become Ruel's assistant at the start of this season.

"It's not the people . . . don't get me wrong, they would have taken me," Ruel said in an interview. "But all I ask is people to be honest and some weren't honest with me.

"Your team has 103 points one year and wins the Stanley Cup, 93 points next year and then you're six points out of first place.

"And all you are is a bum."

A little of the rancor remains today as he still ponders his move.

He harbors a suspicion that certain segments of the French-language press succeeded in railroading him out of office by driving a wedge, one without foundation, between him and the fans and between him and his players.

"What would they be saying about me now 25 points out of first place?" Ruel asked. "I wonder, they'd be blaming me."

"I was six points behind Boston (Bruins) when I resigned and I didn't have (defenceman) Jacques Laperriere or Yvan Cournoyer."

Laperriere missed 29 games because of a pinched nerve in his neck, while Cournoyer currently is Montreal's top goalgetter this season with 27

Ruel said his role as chief scout is a lot of work "seeing one or two hockey games every day of the week and flying back and forth across the country."

"But they pay me the same salary I had as coach and I'm happy to do the job," Ruel said.

He said the Canadiens have many draft choices for the future and "we must use them wisely"

Scotty Bowman, now general manager of St. Louis Blues of the NHL, calls Ruel one of the best scouts because of his ability to spot a sleeper.

"I have different ideas about scouting," Ruel said. "I look more for the aggressive player with courage and I mark him down even if he's not the best skater or the most polished.

"Here's an example. Phil Roberto. I drafted him 66th in a midget draft because he had courage, a big heart, and he was always working. No one else liked him. Now he's a good pro, a good player."

Roberto currently is a right-wing regular with the Canadiens on a line with the Mahovlich brothers—Frank and Pete.

Ruel also found and signed Gilbert Perreault when the rookie sensation of Buffalo Sabres was 15 and "I could see he had everything."

Perreault was the top amateur draft choice last season, and currently leads the Sabres with 26 goals and 17 assists.

Happiness Is . . . . .

Mike Walton, now a Boston Bruin, said at a press conference in Toronto Monday that he's happy to have been traded by Toronto Maple Leafs. Walton was traded Sunday to Philadelphia Flyers with goaltender Bruce Gamble for Flyers' Bernie Parent. Flyers promptly traded Walton to Boston. (CP Photo)

Walton Wears Smile

TORONTO (CP) — Mike Walton's happy smile demonstrated Monday the healing effect on the former Toronto Maple Leafs centre of a trade to Boston Bruins.

Walton called a news conference to publicly express his thanks to the Leafs for finally having traded him. But the National Hockey League player's appearance before reporters was in sharp contrast to a news conference two weeks ago.

That Jan. 12 appearance saw Walton sit with head down, never smiling, and fidgeting nervously while he read a prepared statement outlining the history of the depressive illness which knocked him out of the Leafs' lineup last December.

He appealed then to the Leafs to speed up attempts to trade him and Sunday night the appeal was answered when general manager Jim Gregory telephoned him to say he had been traded to Philadelphia Flyers.

The Flyers immediately swapped him to Boston.

"I think there's a lot of pressure lifted off me now and I'm really happy about joining Boston," Walton said Monday. "They're a great bunch of guys and a great bunch of hockey players."

He also said it was great being able to move from a fourth-place club to a third place and then a first-place team within an hour.

Toronto is fourth in the NHL East Division, Philadelphia third in the West and Boston first in the East.

Walton said he has tried to keep himself in playing condition and is only seven or eight pounds over his playing weight.

He said his doctor has warned him that the move away from Toronto may not result in an immediate cure of his depression. Walton said he still felt somewhat confused by all that has happened, but happy to be going to Boston where he joins his hockey camp business partner, Bobby Orr.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Oakland Raiders' wide receiver Warren Wells was jailed on a drunken-driving charge early Monday after what police said was a high-speed freeway chase. Wells, 28, was arrested by highway patrol officer Robert Krehbiel, who said he pursued the pro football player's car for six miles at speeds in excess of 90 miles an hour. Wells was released about 6½ hours later without bail on a promise to appear in court Feb. 8. Wells has another court date Feb. 17 on a misdemeanor charge of hit-and-run driving in a minor accident Dec. 17.

CHICAGO (AP) — Forward Lou Angotti will be lost to Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League for at least three weeks because of a slight fracture of the left ankle. Angotti suffered the injury in a 4-1 victory over Montreal Sunday. X-rays taken Monday revealed a slight crack in the ankle which will be placed in a cast.

She served powerfully and hit every shot with confidence. Alex Metreveli of the Soviet Union won the men's final, beating Phil Dent of Australia 6-4, 6-2.

Wings Obtain Three Players

MacGregor Ponders Move to New York

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

After 10 years in a Detroit uniform, Bruce MacGregor said Monday night he's not sure he wants to live in New York.

The 29-year-old right winger from Edmonton said he was stunned by the National Hockey League trade that sent him to New York Rangers along with rookie defenceman Larry Brown in exchange for veteran Ranger defenceman Arnie Brown, rookie defenceman Mike Robitaille and forward Tom Miller of Omaha Knights of the Central League.

"It's kind of a blow when you've been with a team the number of years I have," said MacGregor, who had scored 151 goals and 182 assists in regular-season play with the Red Wings since joining the club for the 1960-61 season. "It's hard to accept leaving.

"I haven't made a decision yet whether to report to the Rangers. I'm going to take a couple of days to think about it. There are some personal things I want to go over."

MacGregor said he'd already spoken with Emile Francis, Rangers' general manager and coach, and, since he'll probably be suspended if he doesn't report to New York, "it doesn't leave me much alternative."

MacGregor said he'd consider the trade until Thursday then talk with Francis when the Rangers visit Detroit.

"I've played 10 years now and it's something to think about," replied MacGregor when asked about the possibility of retiring.

In Larry Brown, the Rangers are reacquiring a young defenceman they thought highly of before letting him go to Detroit earlier in the season in a trade that sent centre Pete Stemkowski to the Rangers from Detroit.

Robitaille has been one of the Rangers' finest young prospects for several years but has had problems cracking the New York lineup.

BRUCE MacGREGOR

California Golden Seals, meanwhile, have indicated they won't trade off any more draft choices for experience.

Fred Glover, coach and general manager, said Monday at a news conference the Seals have already parted with their first-round selections for 1971, 1972 and 1973 "but that is the last of it."

Montreal Canadiens have acquired the Seals' first-round selections through 1973.

In other NHL developments Monday, the Canadiens announced that defenceman Serge Savard, who fractured his left leg against Toronto Meple Leafs Saturday night, will undergo a bone graft operation today.

Team physician Dr. Douglas Kinnear said the bone graft will "ensure Savard's complete recovery and return to his hockey career."

The young defenceman fractured the same leg in five places last March and returned to the Canadiens' lineup Nov. He was rounding into his earlier form when the most recent injury occurred.

Chicago Black Hawks said Monday centre Lou Angotti will be lost for about three weeks with a slight fracture of the left ankle, suffered in Chicago's 4-1 win over Montreal Sunday.

And Philadelphia Flyers announced the loan of left winger Earl Heiskala to San Diego Gulls of the Western League. Heiskala, 28, scored two goals and one assist in 30 games with the West Division club this year.

Rookie Interrupts Boston Record Breaking Binge

MONTREAL (CP) — Boston Bruins have started on what they will probably make a series of broken records in the National Hockey League this season, but one of the NHL's oldest marks is threatened by young Gilbert Perreault of the new Buffalo Sabres.

The Bruins, leaders in the league's East Division, scored two shorthanded goals last week, raising their season total to 16—two more than the previous record established by Chicago Black Hawks in 1964-65. And just about every other offensive record is also endangered by the Bruins.

But the one mark which a Boston player likely will not establish is the most goals by a rookie in one season. However, there's a better-than-even chance that the record of 34 goals by Nels Stewart of the old Montreal Maroons in 1925-26 will be broken by Perreault, the rookie sensation of this season.

Perreault scored six goals in three games last week with the Sabres, including three in one game, to raise his total for the season to 26.

That leaves the 20-year-old centre only eight short of Stewart's record, a mark tied by Norm Ferguson of Oakland Seals and Danny Grant of Minnesota North Stars in 1968-69.

However, both Ferguson and Grant had had previous professional experience before their rookie NHL seasons. Perreault was with Montreal Canadiens of the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A series last season.

Perreault's scoring—11 goals in his last 13 games—has been largely responsible for the Sabres' climb out of last place in the East Division. No other Buffalo player has more than 11 goals for the season.

In addition to his 26 goals,

GILBERT PERREAULT

Perreault has 17 assists for 43 points, which tied him with Dave Balon of New York Rangers in 19th place in the over-all scoring list.

Phil Esposito remains on top of the list with 96 points in 49 games, including 45 goals. The Boston centre's chances of equalling the 50 goals in 50 games scored by Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Montreal Canadiens in 1944-45 appear slim, but Esposito appears set to put together his second 100-point-plus season of his career.

He set the current mark of 126 points two seasons ago.

Three other Bruins trail Esposito. Defenceman Bobby Orr is second with 82 points, including a league-leading 60 assists, while right winger Ken Hodge is third with 71, four more than John Bucyk.

Bucyk has a four-point lead over Bobby Hull of Chicago.

Never in NHL history has a team had the first four players in the individual scoring list at the end of a season.

The last time three players from one team finished on top was in 1954-55 when the Canadiens had Bernie Geoffrion with 75 points, Rocket Richard with 74 and Jean Beliveau with 73 points.

Weatherman Holds Canada Games Key

SASKATOON (CP) — The stage is set for Canada's national amateur winter sports spectacle, and the only thing that could sour the performance is the weather.

Officials are looking for nine days of average winter weather after Prime Minister Trudeau opens the Canada Winter Games Friday, Feb. 12. On the central Prairies this means about 10 degrees above zero.

Anything much warmer could hurt skiing and speed skating events and well-below-zero temperatures, which have prevailed for the last month, could cut paid attendance which may total 243,000.

"Our present plans are, 'damn the weather,' we'll go ahead anyway," says John Pringle, chairman of the Games' ceremonies committee.

When Saskatoon, population 130,000, first bid for the Games there was no ski hill within a hundred miles.

But today, man-made Mount Blackstrap towers 300 feet over the flatlands 25 miles south of here. Snowblowers are at work to ensure the base will be perfect for the first event.

About 2,400 athletes and their coaches are expected to start arriving in the city early next week to take part in the 16 events. Nearly half of these will live in the athletes' village.

Truck campers, military tents, and holiday trailers have been moved into a vacant downtown department store to house the athletes.

Newspapers and radio and television stations alone are sending 350 persons to cover the Games.

Most night clubs are offering special entertainment during the nine days and liquor lounges have been given special permission to stay open to 2 a.m. on week nights.

The Games open at 8 p.m. CST—9 p.m. EST—with the arrival of the Winter Games' flame from Ottawa. The flame left the capital Jan. 20 and will travel 2,400 miles by power toboggan before reaching here.

Robinson Has A Belt

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Brooks Robinson, outstanding player of the World Series with his glove and bat, was named Monday night as winner of the 21st annual Hickok Professional Athlete of the Year Award.

The 33-year-old third baseman of the baseball champion Baltimore Orioles won by a large margin over another veteran, George Blanda, 43, quarterback of professional Football's Oakland Raiders, and Bobby Orr of the National Hockey League Boston Bruins.

Robinson, who hit .428 in the World Series and made spectacular fielding plays in the five-game triumph over Cincinnati Reds, received 62 of the 146 first-place votes by a panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

He had a total of 238 points, based on three for first, two for second and one for third.

Blanda, who led the Raiders to the National Football League's playoffs with his clutch passing and field-goal kicking, received 19 first-place votes and 140 points.

Orr, 23, star of the Stanley Cup-winning Bruins, was third with 25 first-place votes and 110 points.

Robinson was the 13th baseball player to win the award since it was inaugurated in 1950.

SHOULD REAL ESTATE
SALESMEN TALK
A LOT?

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

It may seem so. There is a lot to explain about a house. If a salesman wants to sell his prospect, what better could he do th keep plugging the good points?

Or so it often SEEMS to a home owner inexperienced in dealing with buyers.

A seasoned Realtor, however, knows it is not that simple.

There may well be a time when he should do all the talking, explaining the property and terms. He may even have to go over them several times.

But equally, there is a time to remain quiet. This is often the time when the prospective buyer is inspecting the property in the presence of the seller. The Realtor's client is concentrating on the property and weighing in his mind the obvious features his inspection is revealing to him. It may well be best for the Realtor to say nothing while his client thinks and the Realtor has a chance to study his reactions.

Knowing when to remain silent and when to speak, and then WHAT to say, is part of the negotiating skill of a good Realtor. It is a task that requires extensive knowledge and training and a high degree of natural talent.

Late Outbursts Bury Gas House Underdogs

Marysville and Mulroneys started out holding the fort quite well against the Gas House League powers, but could be left holding the bag as the Mustangs and Merchants each took a 2-0 stranglehold in the best of five semi-finals series.

Marysville managed to hold the Merchants to a slim 1-0 lead until the final 15 minutes of the game, when the winners broke out with six unanswered tallies.

Don Fish, Perry Soule and John Sager tallied within a minute and 45 seconds to virtually assure the Merchants of victory. Fish had previously given them a 1-0 lead.

Tallies by Soule, Carl Boomhower and Barry Marshall completed the 7-0 win for the Merchants.

Bob Harrison picked up the shutout in goal for the winners, who drew three of the game's seven penalties.

The penant winning Mustangs could manage only one goal in the first half of their game with Mulroneys, but came up with three more tallies in the second half before the losers spoiled goalie Paul Smith's bid for a shutout with just under four minutes left to play.

Don Irvine, Bob Mulvihill Murray Brydson and Tom Woodley were the Mustang goalgetters. Tom Bennett scored the lone Mulroneys goal.

Each team drew four minor penalties.

Phantom Scorer Costly In Golden Hawks Loss

"The little man who wasn't there", proved to be highly instrumental in giving the Cobourg Cougars a 9-4 home-ice win over Trenton, moving them to within two points of the Belleville Fairways in the battle for the fourth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Ontario Junior B league.

The "phantom" player was Trenton defenceman Dave Jack, who appeared to tally a goal at 9.44 of the first period that would have cut an early 2-0 Cobourg lead. Jack, however, had been inadvertently omitted from the Trenton game sheet, so the goal was disallowed.

The loss of the goal helped deflate the Golden Hawks as Trenton absorbed their 25th loss in 26 games this season.

Among the other Trenton losses were forwards Paul Lavender who suffered a torn groin muscle and Art Brunet who was taken to hospital for x-rays of a badly injured ankle.

The Golden Hawks were without the services of both regular goalies. Tony Minaker missed the contest with torn muscles in his arm, while backup Peter Pettingill has been hospitalized with a blood clot to the brain. Juvenile backstop Bill Cormier was pressed into service for the game as a result of the injuries.

Mark Woodward picked up two goals and two assists for the losers, while Mike Hall notched one of each. Peter Utman added the other Trenton tally.

Pete Kelly was top triggerman for the Cougars with four goals. The winners drew 14 of the game's 21 penalties.

League Leaders Emphasize Quinte Status Quo

Belvedere and DCA Transfer were at opposite ends of the Quinte Hockey League standings all year and the Hotelmen took advantage of the last game of the season to emphasize the point.

The league pennant winners rolled to a 12-2 win, their 13th in 15 games, while DCA suffered their 15th consecutive defeat.

Belvedere's brother combination of Jack and Gene Francis dominated the scoring with Jack picking up five goals and Gene and equal number of assists.

Bill Goodfellow and Larry Marshall collected two goals apiece for the winners with the remaining tallies going to Gerry Jones, Elmer Cain and Larry Stewart.

Each team was assessed two minor penalties.

In the other contest Central Taxi and Stinson's battled to a 4-4 draw. Goals by Grant Hagerman and Ted Schwager, late in the game rallied Central from a 3-2 deficit, sending them one up on the Constructionmen.

Dennis Ray tallied his second goal of the game with six and a half minutes remaining to play, salvaging a 4-4 tie with Central.

Al Walker and Schwager had counted the first goals for the Taximen, while Mecks and McGuire rounded out the Stinson scoring.

Playoffs for the league start next Monday night at 10 p.m.

Canada May Make Return To International Hockey

SACKVILLE, N.B. (CP) — Buck Houle, general manager of Hockey Canada, feels Canada may be back in international ice hockey competition before the end of this year—" and pretty much on our own terms."

Houle said in an interview during a visit to Mount Allison University here that he believes Canada will be back at the top level of international hockey competition before 1971 is over, as well as being represented at Lake Placid, N.Y., in the Federation International Sports Universitaire (FISU) Games this winter.

And he added that he is sure Canada will be prepared to send a "simon-pure" hockey team to Tokyo for the 1972 Olympic Games.

Houle, a veteran hockey man who was general manager of Canada's last team in international competition, said he would like to see international competition develop on all levels—junior, senior, university and club. But even with this much development, he feels it still would be "ridiculous" for Canada to pursue the world hockey championship with "anything but top-notch professionals."

He said one of the better teams in the American Hockey League, if sent to the world championships as Canada's representative, would do "reasonably well," but some of this country's greatest hockey players—including Boby Orr—would "jump at the opportunity" to represent Canada.

He says somebody will be "giving" soon so that the present stalemate keeping Canada out of international hockey can be broken.

"It is a ridiculous situation, but you can't really blame the Russians or any other team since they don't have professional leagues over there. However, the European countries do send their best 20 players while Canada has been forced to send their 600th to 620th best."

Houle, a top junior A player with Toronto Marlboros prior to the Second World War, figures "I must be the only guy ever to play, coach, manage and direct the same team"—a reference to the Marlies.

Houle, who signed with the Marlies when he was 14 years old, is on a tour of Canadian university campuses to "sound out" athletic directors and hockey coaches on their ideas of how Hockey Canada might be more effective.

Dukes Get Stung By Hornets

The Hornets won the battle of the Northern Electric Hockey League powerhouses Sunday, taking a 6-5 win from the Dukes.

Wayne Brown Jr. and Larry Lupenette counted twice for the winners with other tallies going to Edgar Eley and Bill Goodfellow.

Rick Rosebush (2), Bob Taylor, Adrian Caddick and Doug Doyle scored for the losers.

Terry Casselman's four goals led the Good Guys to a 9-6 win over the No Stars. Bob Baitley (2), Dwight Rathwell, Tiger Totten and Doug McCory had the other goals.

Bob Moon scored four times in a losing cause with Marco Mior and Doug Bolte getting the others.

Rolls Royce Raise For Ferguson?

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Fergie Jenkins, ace pitcher for the Chicago Cubs of the National Baseball League, said Monday he is handling his own negotiations seeking a $100,000 contract but said "we're about a Rolls Royce apart right now."

The native of Chatham, Ont., who has won more than 20 games in each of the past four seasons, indicated it might be better if he were to hire a lawyer to handle his contract negotiations like players in the National Hockey League.

"A lawyer would be speaking for his client not himself," he said in an interview at a London sportsman's dinner for crippled children. "It might make for a better relationship between the player and his boss."

Jenkins said the latest offer from the Cubs called for a raise befitting "a 12 or 15- game winner. . . It was just a token raise."

Magnussen Worries Champ

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — The manager of the United States figure-skating team said Monday that Karen Magnussen of Vancouver "is a real threat" to Janet Lynn's North American senior ladies' title.

"We are definitely aware of Karen's potential," said Charles A. Demore of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, on arrival with the 18-member U.S. team for this week's North American figure-skating championships.

"The fact that she skated in the world championships and where she placed (fourth) is an indication that she is a serious contender and a real threat."

Miss Lynn, 17, of Wagon Wheel Rockland, Ill., defending North American champion, said Miss Magnussen could dethrone her.

Fairways Hope To Tame Lions Tonight

The Belleville Fairways haven't enjoyed notable success as "Lion tamers", this season, but the team can take heart from the fact that the other four Eastern Ontario Junior B entries have served as fodder for the Peterborough Lions as well.

The Lions have lost only four games all season and have recorded wins of 4-0, 7-1, 15-1, 5-4 and 8-1 over the Fairways. The last encounter on Belleville ice was the 5-4 defeat with Peterborough pulling out the win in the final minute of play.

Coach Floyd Crawford is hoping that his team can come up with a similar effort when the teams clash in an 8.45 game in Belleville tonight.

A win against the Canada Games - bound Lions would virtually assure the Fairways of the final playoff berth.

Star centre Danny Lupenette missed Sunday's 8-1 loss to Peterborough as a result of a charley-horse and is a question mark in tonight's contest.

Defenceman Peter Ackerman, who was hit in the temple with a shot Sunday is expected to be able to play.

Crawford is hoping to bolster his lineup with the addition of juvenile all-stars Bill Bunnett and possibly Mike Goegan. Bunnett performed well in the one Junior B contest he played in this season.

Money to Burn

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Vikings football player Jim Marshall had money to burn when he and several others were isolated on the wintry slopes of Wyoming's Bear-tooth Mountain.

And that's just what the defensive end of the National Football League club did, to help start a fire that helped save the lives of a group of five he was with in the cold, pre-dawn hours.

Paul Dickson, Marshall's team-mate on the Vikings defensive line, told about the incident Monday night after the two had flown home from Billings, Mont. They had been with a group of 16 adventurers, one of whom died.

"We were trying to find any thing suitable to burn," related Dickson. "So Jim hauled out his checkbook and even took about five $1 bills from his wallet to help start the fire. We also had a few candy wrappers.

"I had my souvenir lighter with me, and we touched off a fire. . . ."

Dickson said he, Marshall, and three others including a teen-age boy clustered together about 2½ miles from the Top of the World store, after plodding 12 hours through deep drifts 7½ miles.

"We just couldn't go any further," said Dickson.

He said he was glad to be back to the fireside warmth of his wife and two boys.

A rescue party had reached the stranded group Sunday afternoon.

Andras Urges Housebuilders To Stress Homes for Low-paid

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada's housebuilding industry must concentrate this year on providing accommodation for persons whose income is low or modest, Robert Andras, minister responsible for housing and urban affairs, said Monday.

Mr. Andras, speaking to the annual meeting of the Housing and Urban Development Association—the group prior to Monday was known as the National Housebuilders Association—said such groups have a "crying need" for access to decent housing.

"I urge you in your own interest to concentrate like never before on this market."

Mr. Andras predicted a record 220,000 housing starts in Canada this year compared with the previous high of 210,000 in 1969.

However, there is nothing magical in that record if the units are not the right kind and Canadians should not be mesmerized by the numbers.

"I am interested in shelter that meets the social needs of Canadians."

Housebuilders and governments last year created an "historic turn-around" in providing quality housing for low-income families.

"I would hate to see the housebuilders revert to the easier old ways this year now that mortgage rates are falling and money is easier to find."

Mr. Andras told a news conference later he believes mortgage interest rates would decrease slightly this year, "perhaps they will go to 8¾ per cent this year."

Harold Shipp of Toronto, newly-elected president of the association, said he expects interest rates on mortgages to drop one per cent within two months.

"Rates will drop one per cent below the existing National Housing Act rate of 9¼ per cent and the comparable 9½-plus per cent for existing conventional rates."

Mr. Shipp attributed his prediction to the "very large gobs of money" becoming available in the mortgage market place.

PLEASED WITH RESPONSE

Mr. Andras said he was pleased with the initial response to his proposals for tri-level meetings between the federal, provincial and large municipal governments.

Such discussions on housing policies are necessary because in the past many federal policies have not met the needs of the urban areas or the provinces.

"There is a frightening amount of rethinking to be done and not much time to do it in, when one becomes aware of the pace of urban growth-urbanization lying ahead of this country."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Four Rules Given For Over-anxious

Yesterday, I promised to reprint a letter from one who has borne the pangs of anxiety. Here is the first part of it:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I feel so sorry for Mrs. K., who at the age of 28 is suffering so badly from the symptoms of anxiety that the prospect of living until 80 appalls her. I'm going to break a personal rule a write a letter to a columnist. Peace and self-worth are what she wants and I'm going to butt in with a suggestion or so—all positive.

* * *

First: you've been told what's wrong, Mrs. K. Stop doctor - shopping. No one has an instant cure. Keep taking the tranquilizers until you are accustomed to being calm (you will be able to tell when this happens). It will probably take at least a year. Then keep a few at hand for flare-ups if they should occur. Never take more than the doctor prescribes, or you'll find yourself climbing walls for a few uncomfortable hours!

Have your husband talk to the doctor because your husband's support is essential. By this time he probably thinks you are a nut! Or worse!

You can alleviate your own symptoms. Remember your body has breathed successfully for numberless years without your active help. So stop consciously breathing. I know hyperventilation is panic-making, but remember you will not die!

Keep a brown paper bag handy for these episodes and breathe into it until your carbon dioxide level is back to normal. The panic will subside. So will the other symptoms as your episodes of panic lessen.

* * *

Second — and this is the dificult part because from here on out it's up to you. However, unless you want to spend the rest of your life in a state of panic, you will act now. (Well, you don't want a divorce and a bunch of neurotic kids, do you? After all, don't you set the tone of your household?)

Sit down, look at yourself in a mirror and say to yourself: I am a reasonably intelligent, introspective woman who worries too much (never mind what about). I am no longer going to punish my family because I have this weakness. Having done this, decide what the important things in your life are and ruthlessly drop the rest. Or, at least declare a moratorium. If the list is not reduced so your family can be happy, healthy, well-fed and well-clothed, you aren't the woman I take you for.

* * *

Third: Since your activities are somewhat circumscribed (and we shall crawl before we run) and since, above all, the children should not suffer, decide between your husband and yourself how you will share your responsibilities. Daddy: movies, dinners at a restaurant, visiting Grandma, Sunday drives, etc. Mommy: Homework - helping, cookie-baking with the kids, reading stories, nature walks, chats, etc. Family: Entertaining friends, drive-in movies, zoos, picnics, marshmallow roasts. The list is endless.

* * *

Fourth: Stop always thinking about yourself. This is most difficult. This is where you must be really ruthless. To come out of yourself turn on a talk-show on an all-news station on the radio. Get involved in daytime TV, if you have the time. Read whenever you get the opportunity. If you can't concentrate, then read out loud.

Tell stories to your preschoolers. Make them up. They'll think you are a genius. But until you can handle yur thoughts, then don't allow time to think them. If it takes you awhile to get to sleep at night, keep redecorating that house, or build a new one in your mind. In any case, do not mull and mull.

(This informative and encouraging letter from one who has overcome her own anxiety will be continued tomorrow in Part 3 of this series of columns on the problem of anxiety.)

Sydney J. Harris Says

Fare Increases Cut Take

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Call me an economic illiterate if you will, but there are things I just don't understand about the workings of our economy. Let me give you a simple for-instance.

After a weekend in Los Angeles, I checked out of my hotel and hopped into a cab, directing the driver to the airline terminal. I was going to take an airport limo from the terminal because it would cost only $2.50 for the whole trip, whereas a cab from hotel to airport would cost something around $7.

After we had gone a few blocks, the cabbie said, "Tell you what I'll do. I'll take you straight to the airport for a flat $5, and no tip. How about it?"

I agreed, and he went on, "You know, business is so rotten that I could wait an hour at the airport and not pick up a decent fare. People just won't pay $7 to get downtown when they can save $5 on a limo."

My plane was one of the new jumbo 747s. You could have shot an elk in the aisle. There were more stewardesses aboard than there were passengers, and the first-class section looked as if Typhoid Mary had just passed that way. Anybody would be crazy not to take coach, because each coach passenger had enough room around him to swing a lariat.

Now, the taxi companies are petitioning for fare raises, and just got a good-sized bite in New York City. The airlines are crying about their losses, and mumbling about the possibility of fare increases, because profits were low or negative in 1970.

But nobody seems to think of reducing fares when times are bad, only of raising them. This isn't only true of private enterprise, but of public corporations as well. Every time the Chicago Transit Authority meets in executive session, it boosts bus and subway fares another dime.

All that these fare increases do is chop off another segment of potential customers, and so a smaller number of total passengers has to pay a higher rate. This seems like suicidal economics to me.

In New York, for example, where taxi fares have been relatively modest, and cabs have been plentiful, a driver could do very well indeed. In Chicago, by contrast, where fares have been much higher, drivers make considerably less. In New York, even low-income people take cabs everywhere; in Chicago, they simply can't afford to.

Likewise, if the airlines cut their fares in half, or somewhere near it, I'm convinced that millions of people would take to the skies who never flew before. When I took my family to Florida for a week last winter, it cost as much to fly there and back as to live there a whole week. There's got to be something wrong with the economics of that.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 3

Yur birthday today: A gateway opens to a busy year of progress. You will have to cope with many issues simultaneously most of the year, including matters you thought you had settled or outgrown some time back. Emotional ties grow strong. Today's natives seek perfection, esthetic beauty, are seldom satisfied.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Pleasant changes are promised uncertainty of outcome, strive for improvement. Your reputation gains as others mention what you did for them.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Younger friends are full of fun and talk today. Work out all contional efforts, seek additional contacts. A complete change of direction is called for in the late hours.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Pleasant changes are prmised for the late hours, much to celebrate, people in good humor. You can ask a big favor today with an excellent chance of getting it.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Think abut your health care, appearance, personal habits — if any detail doesn't fill your ideal, do something about it. Your earnings promise some improvement now.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Press serious decisions early. Your special qualities must come to the attention of your more influential associates discreetly, to avoid future misunderstandings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Full information is needed more than ever. You have an exceptional opportunity to find out facts and figures, discrepancies, and make things more to your liking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Be willing to share expenses. Your intuition is sharper, especially in choices of investments, items for resale. Career efforts should be steady. Other people have a lot to say this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov 21): You can put together ideas and information from several sources to get something you can put to profitable use. Common sense is the motto.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): An early start makes the difference in making this a generally successful day. Select chores that put your muscles to use. Plan for a festive social evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Find time to develp a closer knowledge of your neighbors. Any study which promises an improvement in your skills is favored. Advance planning of vacations can be started rather well now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Home and family concerns tend to demand much of your attention today. Most of the news is good, but it requires thoughtful programming, long-term adjustments. Romance beckons as well.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Expect considerable bickering, god natured give - and - take from family, friends, relatives. Take the initiative, express yourself wherever you feel you really have something to say.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

PCs Praise Trudeau Role In Parley

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's actions at the Commonwealth conference in Singapore drew cheers from the Conservatives and jeers from the New Democrats on his return to Parliament Monday.

Mr. Trudeau himself seemed satisfied with the results of the conference. If it had helped avert a general racial war in Africa, it was worth it, he said.

He still felt Canada could survive without the Commonwealth, "but not nearly so well." As an association, it was probably the envy of other nations, he thought.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield congratulated Mr. Trudeau for "playing a part in preventing a breakup" of the Commonwealth on the issue of British arms sales to South Africa.

The danger isn't over, Mr. Stanfield said. Tension and resentment remained among some members and Canada should continue to seek the trust of all sides to keep the association of 31 countries strong.

New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas slammed Mr. Trudeau for watering down the Commonwealth declaration of principle presented by Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda.

A Canadian amendment had "rendered meaningless" a clause which would have prohibited arms sales to countries that practise racial discrimination.

Mr. Douglas also said the arms-sale issue itself had been merely shelved when it was given to a committee.

Mr. Trudeau reminded New Democrats the government has spoken out publicly and privately against such sales.

In his statement to the Commons, he said the value of the conference lay in increased comprehension rather than in persuasion.

"In Singapore it quickly became apparent that the future of the world will not necessarily be determined in accordance with European conceptions," he said.

Canada had a duty to influence events at such conferences if it was able to.

"This duty does not flow from some vague international role to be played by Canada. Canada must act according to how it perceives its aims and interests."

It was in the Canadian interest that a general racial war in Africa be avoided. And if the Singapore conference had reduced the chance of such a war, it was worth it.

Mr. Trudeau remarked upon Canada's "enviable reputation" in the countries he had visited.

This reputation placed upon Canadians a responsibility to rid their country of racial, regional or linguistic prejudices, which were "belittling."

Créditiste Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse) remarked sourly on the number of interest-free loans Mr. Trudeau had handed out in Southeast Asia. Canadians are needy too, Mr. Lambert said.

Canada Has Protested Arms Sales by French

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has no qualms about publicly and privately condemning arms sales by France to South Africa, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Monday.

Replying to questions by John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert), Mr. Trudeau said Canada has protested the French arms sales in the United Nations and other forums.

Mr. Trudeau said he had expressed Canada's disapproval of French arms sales several times during the recent Commonwealth prime ministers conference in Singapore.

Mr. Diefenbaker, who was prime minister when South Africa was expelled from the Commonwealth in 1961, asked whether Mr. Trudeau would protest the sales by France in the same fashion he had condemned Britain's proposal to consider resuming arms sales to the white-ruled country.

Mr. Trudeau said Britain had invited representations from other Commonwealth countries on the sale of arms. But communications between Canada and France, a non-Commonwealth country, were not so direct.

Mr. Trudeau added that if French President Pompidou asked his advice on arms sales to South Africa he would repeat the condemnations he has made publicly.

Exports to South Africa Likely Over $100 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian exports to South Africa are expected to top $100 million for 1970, the trade department says.

For the first six months of 1970, South Africa was the fourth-largest overseas customer for fully manufactured Canadian goods. That put it behind Britain, Australia and The Netherlands and ahead of such countries as Japan, Germany and France.

Of the Canadian exports to South Africa, 90 per cent consists of fabricated materials and inedible products ready for market.

Peak In Idle Passed --PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau returned to the Commons Monday to battle questions and accusations from opposition MPs, outraged by the current levels of unemployment.

He managed to take some of the steam out of the original onslaught by assuring the Commons that the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate has likely reached its peak and will decline in the next few months.

But that didn't quell the wrath of Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield who wanted to know what new job-producing programs the government planned to implement immediately.

No such measures are planned, replied Mr. Trudeau, appearing cocky and alert for his first day in the Commons this year after attending the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Singapore.

Outside the Commons, the prime minister said the unemployed can draw unemployment insurance while they wait for the economy to improve and new jobs to become available.

Meanwhile, in another part of the interview room, Mr. Stanfield was telling another knot of reporters that the prime minister was talking sheer nonsense.

Mr. Stanfield, whose attacks on unemployment have been gaining momentum in recent weeks said it must be remembered that December figures showed a seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate of 6.6 per cent, representing 538,000 people out of work. Many of those unemployed did not qualify for unemployment insurance.

Mr. Trudeau said the government had told Canadians 18 months ago that inflation could be beaten through the use of monetary and fiscal tools combined with co-operative restraint in all parts of the private sector.

However, he added, some elements in the private sector had not shown the proper restraint and unemployment had climbed as the government tightened fiscal and monetary controls, defeating inflation.

"We said we wouldn't lack courage because of a fear that unemployment might result if we didn't get co-operation."

The government had relaxed its fiscal and monetary programs last March and again in June, September and December.

In the Commons, Mr. Trudeau said absolute numbers of unemployed would likely increase through January and February but the rate, when seasonal factors are taken into account, would likely fall below 6.6 per cent.

He turned down a request by New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas to disclose the government's estimate of the expected height of unemployment. It was not parliamentary practice to answer questions of statistics, Mr. Trudeau said to hoots from the opposition benches.

Mr. Trudeau said the opposition parties should not expect new measures to be announced every week or so. The government had already taken effective measures to stimulate the economy and these now were accomplishing their purpose.

Earlier, Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) requested a special debate on the growing numbers of unemployed applying for unemployment insurance benefits. He said the number may have reached 750,000. The request was turned down by Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux.

Mr. Howard's move drew exasperated comments from Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey who said the figure of 750,000 was greatly exaggerated.

Mr. Howard replied that the estimate had been generally agreed to last week by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, then acting prime minister.

"Who the hell are we supposed to believe," Mr. Howard asked.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson fielded a flurry of questions about a $160 million loan fund made available to provinces and municipalities for make-work projects

He said the money will be advanced to the provinces and municipalities as quickly as they can develop programs to use it.

The government had shifted from a budget surplus to a budget deficit for the year, strictly to make this kind of assistance available as a means of promoting economic growth.

Communists Capture Key Centre in Laos

Senate Body Uneasy

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Irritation mounted in Congress today at the U.S. government's continued silence on events in Indochina, where South Vietnamese and U.S. forces are believed poised to widen the war in Laos.

Concern at developments in the war was strongest in the Senate foreign relations committee, some of whose members fear President Nixon is on the point of escalating the conflict.

Government officials persisted in their refusal to discuss what is happening on the border between South Vietnam and Laos, where South Vietnamese troops are reported massed for an invasion of Laos with the aid of U.S. air power.

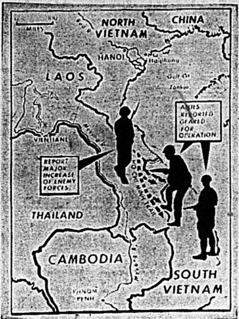
The Washington Post reported today 25,000 South Vietnamese ground troops were massed near the Laotian border Tuesday, "preparing to raid Vietnamese Communist bases and supply lines in Laos with U.S. air support.

"Operating with them, U.S. sources unofficially acknowledged, is a screening force of about 9,000 American troops, who are under instructions to halt at the Laotian border when cross-border operations begin," the newspaper said.

The impression left by reports that have filtered out of the war zone and the hints and remarks of officials here was that, up to Tuesday night, the thrust into Laos had not yet begun.

U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird, while refusing to shed light on what is going on when he was button-holed by reporters in a corridor of Congress Tuesday, emphasized that "there will be no American ground combat forces operating in Laos or Cambodia.

But State Secretary William Rogers, Laird and others have said there are no restrictions on the use of U.S. air power anywhere in Indochina.



Invasion Reported

U.S. officials have remarked recently of a major increase of infiltrated North Vietnamese forces, top figure, into Laos, Cambodia, and northwestern South Vietnam. Meanwhile a Japanese news agency reported Tuesday that South Vietnamese paratroopers had jumped into southern Laos in an attempt to cut North Vietnamese supplies moving down the Ho Chi Minh trail.

Pakistan Overflights Are Banned by India

NEW DELHI (AP) — Several hundred Indians stoned the Pakistan high commission building today in protest against the destruction of an Indian airliner by Kashmiri hijackers in West Pakistan.

In Jammu, the winter capital of Kashmir State, a protest closed all shops and schools.

A Pakistani spokesman said several members of the high commission staff were hurt but none seriously. Police drove the demonstrators away with tear gas.

India banned flights by Pakistani military planes over its territory in retaliation for the destruction of the airliner.

Pakistan's foreign office deplored the burning of the $1.14 million aircraft at Lahore airport Tuesday night as it was negotiating for its release and return to India.

India claimed Pakistan's military government could have prevented the destruction of the Fokker Friendship F-27, which two young Kashmiris diverted to Lahore Saturday from a domestic flight over Kashmir. The other 26 passengers and four crew members returned to India by bus Monday.

Saigon Silent About Invasion

From AP-Reuter

A spokesman for the South Vietnamese defence ministry said today he could not confirm or deny reports that the Saigon government had sent troops into southern Laos to attack North Vietnamese troops and supplies on the Ho Chi Minh trail.

"As far as I know," Lt.-Col. Nguyen Tuyen said in Saigon, "there are no South Vietnamese troops in Laos.

In Vientiane, the Laotian government of neutralist Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma announced the fall to Communist forces of a key town in Laos on the edge of the strategic Plain of Jars.

Observers said the fall of Muong Suoi would be a severe blow to Souvanna Phouma, further undermining his hold on the shaky coalition government.

Fighting began in the area near Muong Suoi recently after the return of Communist troops with new reinforcements, including regiments of the North Vietnamese army.

The pro-Communist Pathet Lao today repeated charges that U.S.-led South Vietnamese commandos had intruded deep into Laos, claiming they were preparing for future large-scale operations in Pathet Lao areas.

Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin Monday night and again on Tuesday charged that South Vietnamese troops had invaded southern Laos with U.S. support.

The U.S. command in Saigon has refused to comment on the reports while at the same time announcing every day the continuation of its massive bombing campaign against the Ho Chi Minh trail.

In Washington, the Senate foreign relations committee pressed the state and defence departments for information about the rumored operations in Laos, President Nixon met with key advisers, and the administration would say only that no U.S. troops had crossed into Laos and none would.

Producing Lands Study Oil Pricing

TEHRAN (AP) — Representatives of 10 oil-producing nations met today following collapse of price negotiations with the major Western oil companies. Conference sources said the meeting would probably recommend that the producers follow Venezuela's lead and adopt legislation decreeing the price rises the companies have refused to concede.

A shutdown of oil supplies for Western Europe would be resorted to only if the companies refused to comply with new payment schedules promulgated under the legislation, the sources predicted.

Venezuela recently adopted a bill providing for an increase of taxes on oil company income to 60 per cent, an increase of royalties to 16 2-3 per cent and the authority for unilateral increases of base prices on which the taxes and royalties are figures

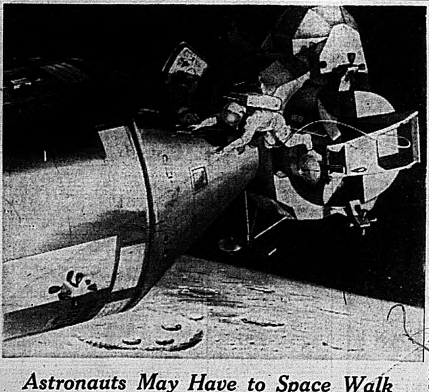
Army Role To Decide Tanks' Fate

OTTAWA (CP) — The government must decide whether to continue its present military role in Europe before deciding whether to buy surplus tanks now in mothballs, Defence Minister Donald Macdonald told the Commons Tuesday.

Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre) said it had been "discovered" that about 5,000 battle tanks were being held in storage in Germany.

He asked whether the government planned to buy them to replace existing Canada tanks, which the minister has said will soon be worn out.

"Prior to any decision we would have to decide whether we intend to continue to perform that role in Europe and whether it is consistent with the reformed structure in Canada," Mr. Macdonald replied.



Astronauts May Have to Space Walk

Artst's conception depicts how moon explorers Alan Shepard and Edgar Mitchell could space walk to the Apollo 14 command module in the event they had any linking or docking difficulties with the lunar module. The illustration shows, by grasping hand rails, an astronaut could transfer to the command ship, left, from the lunar module, right. Command pilot Stuart Roosa could open a hatch in his ship, permitting his fellow spacemen to enter.

Apollo Has Battery Trouble

HOUSTON (AP) — A battery problem developed in the Apollo 14 lunar landing vehicle today just hours before the astronauts were to orbit the moon.

Apllo 14 had swept into the grasp of lunar gravity and sped toward a Thursday morning orbit.

There was no immediate indication of the severity of the problem or whether it could block an attempt at a moon landing Friday.

No official announcement was made, but sources reported the difficulty was with one of two batteries in the ascent stage of the lunar module the astronauts call Anares.

The word came as astronauts Alan B. Shepard, Edgar D. Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa started a nine-hour sleep period, resting for the gruelling days ahead in the vicinity of the moon.

Shepard and Mitchell earlier today had entered the lunar ship through a connecting tunnel, and after a 2½-hour inspection Shephard pronounced it "immaculate."

The sources said that during the lunar module check Shepard and Mitchell had tested the batteries and that ground indications showed one registering 37.1-volts and the other 37. They are supposed to have the same reading.

Mission Control officials reported they were studying the possible problem. There was a possibility it was only a faulty reading.

There are two batteries in the ascent stage of the lunar module, the cabin section that is designed to lift the astronauts off the moon and fly to a rendezvous with the orbiting command module. The descent, or landing stage, is left on the moon.

If one of the two ascent batteries failed, the remaining battery would provide sufficient power to accomplish a safe takeoff and rendezvous and docking with the command ship.

However, it is doubtful whether Mission Control would commit Shepard and Mitchell to a landing if only one of the batteries was functioning.

There was no indication in the air-to-ground conversation with the astronauts that anything was amiss as they settled down for he sleep period.

They were awakened shortly after they dozed off to correct a valve setting when Mission Control noted an excess overboard flow of oxygen.

Earlier they had televised a picture of the moon, a shimmering half crescent that loomed larger and larger as earth shrank in the distance.

At 10:12 a.m. EST, Shepard, Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa zipped through a so-called "twilight zone" in which the gravitational influence of the earth and moon is equal. They were 212,774 miles from earth and 38,894 miles from the moon.

When Apollo 14 passed this invisible line, the moon won the gravitational tug of war and the speceship accelerated after slowing to about 1,600 miles an hour on the long outward coast.

The speed will increase to about 5,700 miles an hour as the astronauts go behind the moon early Thursday. At 2:01 a.m. they are to fire the engine of the command ship Kitty Hawk to whip into lunar orbit.

The spacemen were in a sleep period as they entered the lunar sphere of influence, resting for the gruelling days ahead in the vicinity of the moon.

About 4:20 a.m. today Shepard and Mitchell floated through a connecting tunnel into the lunar module while Roosa remained in the command ship. The two craft are linked nose to nose.

Following the extensive 2½-hour examination, the two astronauts returned to the Kitty Hawk and reported Antares in good condition for the daring descent to the highlands of Fra Mauro.

'Blueprint for Future'

Report Says Industries Are Major Trent, Quinte Polluters

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

BATAWA — Domtar's paper mill at Trenton is singled out as "the major source of pollution on the Trent River" in a three - volume report by Ontario's Department of Energy and Resources Management presented to the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority here last night

The report says that in the days of the Ontario Pollution Control Board, forerunner of the Ontario Water Resources Commission, most Domtar waste passed directly into the Trent, and a program to overcome this was instituted.

However, in 1968, OWRC research showed "contaminant concentration levels in the mill effluent to the Trent River were still found to be in excess of the commission's objectives . . . the wastes are adversely affecting the quality of the watercourse", it says.

Although waste cooking liquor from the paper - making process is used by the Department of Highways locally to surface roads, a Domtar liquid waste, referred to as clarified white water, is discharged into the Trent through an outfall, the report explains.

Other Domtar liquid wastes include log chain wash water, tank and pump leakage and overflow from a septic tank adjacent to the river. The report says "apparently contaminated wastes resembling black liquor have been periodically observed in the overflow"

It adds that 1968 analysis showed "an immediate and drastic reduction in aquatic invertebrates on the east side of the river below the paper mill".

Two other Trenton firms, Stokeley - VanCamp and Knox Gelatine, are cited as contributing to the pollution of the Bay of Quinte. "All wastes from the vegetable processing operations (at Stokeley's canning factory) are pumped to a vibrating screen . . . the screened effluent is discharged to the Bay of Quinte" it says.

The report says the three Trenton companies have decided to take action to curb the pollution situation.

Most Trenton industries feed waste through an OWRC sewage treatment plant designed for a daily flow of one million gallons. With daily pumpage reaching an average of 2.8 million gallons by June, 1969, the report contends expansion of the plant is "of the utmost importance".

"Floating masses of algae . . . make swimming and boating virtually impossible in certain stretches of the Trent" it says.

The Trent River at the Dundas St. Bridge is not suitable for swimming and pollution levels in Trenton are "extraordinary" considering the size of the Trent River and the fact that most of the town's waste now flows through the sewage treatment centre.

Upriver, the research team, whose findings are the basis of the report, discovered the Bata Shoe Co. discharged its cooling water into the Trent. "Large quantities of suds were discharged with the effluent, usually before 8 a.m. each weekday morning in the summer of 1969" . . . effect of these wastes was seen in exceptional growth of algae and higher aquatic plants downstream from the effluent pipe," the conservation study explains.

At Campbellford dam, a "very high degree of bacterial pollution" was found and a survey of the river through the town showed that life forms "characteristic of an unpolluted stream were no longer found and tubifex (the sewage worm) was found in large numbers".

Bacteria counts at Stirling registered "unsatisfactory" levels but at Frankford there were "no serious problems".

The Evergreen Cheese Factory, east of Stirling, was observed by the survey crew "dumping whey from a tank . . . into the adjacent field and stream." Whey from the cheese factory at Harold "evidently fouls a tributary of Squire Creek" the report says.

"It seems that virtually all of the streams in the watershed are polluted in some degree," it concludes at one point. Private homes and a hotel "run raw sewage into Butler Creek, near Brighton. One family apparently obtains its drinking water from the creek," it says.

Filling in for Energy and Resources Minister Hon. George Kerr, Dr. Richard Potter (MPP Quinte) told authority members the waters of the region still need cleaning although they are some of the province's cleanest.

Cy MacDonald of Carrying Place, chairman of the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority, said the new report would be a "blueprint for the authority's future".

Mr. MacDonald asked for public support of the LTRCA as it enters its third year of operation. "If we do not get support, we are going from here to nowhere," he said.

Milk War Over; Price Climbs 5¢

The milk price war at Belleville grocery supermarkets appears to be over!

For the past month or so local housewives have enjoyed rock bottom milk prices at three large grocery chains with the cost of three quart jugs of 2 per cent milk dropping as low as 67 cents plus jug.

But the honeymoon apparently ended this week when a one cent per quart hike was added to bottled milk following a 20 cents per cwt, increase to farmers which went into effect Feb. 1.

This week the new "jug" price for milk at the three supermarkets is 82 cents for 2 per cent and 85 cents for regular homo — an increase of 15 cents or five cents per quart over last week's price.

The new supermarket price for milk is now in line with corner groceries and over the counter sales at the dairy.

Cold Slows School Project

Bayside Secondary School is out of the ground, but cold weather is holding up pouring of cement for the walls.

The new $4.4 million secondary school on Highway 2 between Belleville and Trenton is expected to be 60 per cent completed by school opening next September.

But school officials expect the usual new school upheavals of classes on shifts and housed in existing schools until the building is finally completed and all furniture and equipment moved in.

For this reason, the innovative courses scheduled for the new school may have to be shelved for the first year of its operation.

Although eastern Ontario's most modern school is still just a hole in the ground, its first catalogue is out. Descriptions of courses available must be ready for the students who will soon register to start school at Bayside in September.

Only Grades 9, 10 and 11 will be offered at Bayside during its first year of operation.

Because it is an open - plan school, the construction is expected to facilitate team teaching, remedial programs and independent study.

Its principal, L. D. Read, has visited similar schools in operation in the United States to observe educational innovations in practice and benefit from the successes and mistakes of others.

Engineers Hired For Water Line

The Ontario Water Resources Commission has retained the consulting engineering firm of Gore and Storrie to do the engineering for the proposed water pipeline from Laken Ontario to serve municipalities in the Quinte district.

The agreement calls for the Toronto firm to do the engineering for the pipeline and required treatment facilities and to develop a rate based on usage for the municipalities to be supplied with water.

The municipalities named in the agreement are Belleville, Trenton, Thurlow, Sidney, Murray, Hillier and Ameliasburg townships and the urban municipalities of Batawa and Wellington.

The Belleville public utilities commission is currently planning new installations to provide sufficient water for Belleville and immediate area until water from Lake Ontario is available.

Quinte riding member Dr. Richard T. Potter said the OWRC agreement with Gore and Storrie was dated January 27.

KEEGAN, Mr. William W. — Who passed away two years ago today, February 3rd, 1969.

—Ever remembered by his wife, sons, daughters and grandchildren.

SMITH — In memory of daddy, Jack Smith, who passed away Feb. 3rd, 1967.

If we only knew that the smiles we see,
Often hide the tears that would fain be free,
Would w not more tender and loving be,
If we only knew, if we only knew that the words we say,
Oft may drive the peace from heart away,
Would we speak those words itself some say. If we only knew —Ever remembered, Jeanne and family.

KEEGAN — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, William "Scotty" Keegan, who passed away two years ago today on Feb. 3, 1969.

Your presence is ever near us,
Your love remains with us yet,
You were the kind of a father,
Your loved ones would never forget.

—Sadly missed by son Charles, daughter-in-law Nancy and grandchildren.

SMITH, Jack — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who left us Feb. 3, 1967.

You were so patient — made no fuss,
You tried so hard to stay with us,
With no word or warning came the call,
Without goodbye you left us all.

—Lovingly remembered by wife Marion and family.

Not on Religious Grounds

Welch Says Separate School Issue Must Be Resolved Soon

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Quinte district Conservatives were told yesterday that their party must clearly state its position on support of separate schools before the next election — then let the electorate decide.

At the same time, warned Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, the issue must not become a religious dispute.

"Nothing would upset me more as leader of this government than to conduct an election campaign in which a religious issue is injected," he told local delegates to next week's leadership convention.

The support - of - private - schools issue — lately gathering momentum in Ontario and seemingly headed for a hot election career — has not been a notable point of debate during candidates' talk sessions in Belleville.

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough was posed the question as the first contender to arrive in Belleville. But the issue was not raised with Education Minister William Davis — the man on the spot — or Financial and Commercial Affairs Minister Bert Lawrence.

Mr. Welch told delegates meeting him at the Sun Valley Motor Inn that the schools question was not a valid issue in the leadership race.

But, he added, there was no question in his mind that "before we next go the people of this province the party point of view should be made quite clear to the people of Ontario, who will then make their decision on that basis. In other words, the people . . . deserve to know where we stand as a party."

The present government attitude means no support to private schools (which, besides the three upper grades in Catholic schools, includes other religious groups and privately-operated schools).

As one member of the government "I would take the position quite strongly that there would be no public support for private schools — and that would be where we have to stand," said Mr. Welch.

However he hoped ways could be found to share school facilities and bring people closer together on the issue.

Any injection of the issue as a religious question into an election campaign would "set ecumenism back many, many years," he said.

"I would only hope that as we approach this question, as we continue to study it . . . we would keep this as a school question and not as a religious question," said Mr. Welch.

Mr. Welch said he would be "very careful" about introducing regional government across the province.

While a supporter of local autonomy, Mr. Welch said he would be "very careful" about introducing regional government across the province.

Government should wait to harvest the experiences of five regional governments now operating in the province then introduce larger units only after thorough consultations with the citizens involved.

"I think we could gain a lot of experience before we approach any other area," he said.

Mr. Welch said he didn't believe in the "cookie - cutter approach" — which would impose a common form of local government.

"I think each area has to reflect its own uniqueness in its local government and its boundaries."

Economic nationalism was being raised at a time of great unemployment in Canada and economic well-being is essential to produce jobs, he said.

Canada needs to stimulate its economic growth and industrial development and he wouldn't seal off capital because of its nationalistic origins.

"But however, I can't see any reason why we can't develop guidelines for a corporate citizen to function in this country under certain rules and regulations in the same way that an individual has to," he said.

Policy and management decisions should be in keeping with Canadian public policy. This would apply to trade unions as well, said Mr. Welch. But Canadians should start taking an interest in their country's development and "maybe some Canadians better put their financial resources where their nationalistic mouth is, too."

The federal government should also take a look at its White Paper on Taxation and make sure Canadians are given the incentives to invest in their own economy.

Mr. Welch said he advocates a national conference to examine the whole question of economic nationalism.

He said he was concerned that the recently announced Canadian Development Corporation seems designed for enterprises of $1 million or more.

"I'm just wondering what help it is going to be to the small businessman of this province. The small businessman . . . needs help and — there's no question about this — is the backbone of our economic life," said Mr. Welch.

Queried on the multi-purpose use of wilderness resources, Mr. Welch said it must be possible to find an accommodation to satisfy all interests involved.

The Quetico Park controversy — involving conflicting interests of both industry and conservationists — was a typical case, he said.

If industry using wilderness resources was to end, it would have to be phased out to avoid serious dislocation of people whose livelihood is rooted in such enterprises.

Government in such conflicts has a tremendous responsibility to find a compromise satisfactory to both sides.

Mr. Welch also predicted future development of the province would see much emphasis on rapid transit systems — including corridors to stream commuters from country homes to larger business areas.

"I would hope that we wouldn't lose sight of the tremendous importance of what I call smalltown Ontario. It's one of the great advantages that we might have."

He didn't agree with lotteries as a source of government funds. However, lotteries run by service clubs and like organizations for special projects "were another matter."

Properly policed off-track betting might also correct abuses caused by illegal operations, he said, but such a system is not possible until the Criminal Code has been amended.

Mr. Welch was the fourth cabinet minister seeking the premiership to visit Belleville. The last — Mines and Northern Affairs Minister Al Lawrence — will arrive Friday evening and meet with delegates at the Sun Luck Gardens.

Long Distance - - By Luggage

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch carries instant communication in his suitcase during province-wide campaign for Progressive Conservative leadership — which yesterday included Belleville visit. Portable telephone, in a briefcase-size pack, keeps him in constant touch while on the move.

Quinte PCs Start Fund

Members of Quinte-area Ontario Progressive Conservative associations are raising a fund to help defray expenses of visiting leadership candidates.

The fund — with a goal of $1,250 — is being raised in the Quinte, Hastings and Prince Edward constituencies and will be divided equally among candidates who have travelled to Belleville to speak with delegates from all three ridings.

Before the leadership race is over, five cabinet ministers will have visited the area and each is expected to receive $250 to offset the costs of renting meeting quarters and entertaining the delegates.

By yesterday, the fund had passed the halfway mark in its goal, said Ted Parker, president of Quinte PC Association.

By visiting the area, the leadership contestants were engaging local party members in a two-way political process, said Mr. Parker. The fund was a tangible gesture to show party members' appreciation of the candidates' efforts.

Property Maintenance Report Endorsed

Members of Belleville city council have no objection to the mailing of unsolicited credit cards by business firms.

At least they have decided not to concur in a Niagara Falls resolution calling for an amendment to the consumer protection act which would prohibit the mailing of such cards unless a specific request in writing has been received by the issuer.

The Niagara Falls resolution was one of 11 resolutions covering a wide range of subjects which were considered by council on Monday.

Council concurred with the recommendations of the Lawson report regarding the maintenance of property in the province of Ontario, and added a recommendation of its own.

This was to the effect that encouragement to property owners to properly maintain their properties be provided through assessment but that in no way should it be made compulsory.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said the resolutions committee felt if owners had some assurance that assessment values would not be increased as a result of paint-up and fix-up campaigns they would be more encouraged to do proper maintenance.

Council also concurred in a Niagara Falls resolution asking the department of highways to absorb 100 percent of the cost of all alterations and relocations of watermains and sewer mains necessitated by road improvements to provincial highways.

Council also went along with a resolution from Windsor asking the Ontario Good Roads Association to endorse the principle that street lighting be considered an item eligible for highway grants subsidy.

A Kingston resolution asking that the community centres act be amended to provide, alternatively, that the members of a board who are not members of council, may be appointed on a staggered basis for two-year terms of office, was concurred with despite an objection from Alderman Donald Soutter, chairman of the city recreation-arena committee.

Ald. Soutter said two-year appointments on a staggered basis were unnecessary as present boards can be revitalized through yearly appointments.

Ald. E. A. Orr, chairman of the council resolutions committee, said Ald. Soutter's point had been considered but the committee had gone along with the Kingston resolution, which asked that two-year appointments "may" be considered.

The committee took no action with respect to a Niagara Falls resolution asking the minister of education to make legislative grants available to school authorities on a municipal basis. The committee felt this matter should be considered and dealt with by school boards, not the municipalities.

Snowmobiler Injured In Crash Into Gravel Pit

A 46 - year - old Stirling-area man remained under intensive hospital care today after he and a companion crashed into a gravel pit while snowmobiling in Sidney township yesterday.

Raymond Cooney, RR 1 Stirling, suffered fractures in both legs, broken ribs and a broken arm and was reported in serious condition, in Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. Cooney was snowmobiling across country with three of his brothers and Edwin Richardson, 42, RR 1 Stirling, when the mishap occurred.

The vehicles driven by Mr. Cooney and Mr. Richardson, say police, went over the edge of the pit, near the township's sixth concession about two miles west of Highway 14, and dropped 37 feet.

A construction worker on a crew hauling gravel from the pit dashed for help to the nearby home of OPP Cpl. Al Cockburn.

Estimated damage to the snowmobiles totalled $1,200.

A member of the Cooney family said the snowmobilers were on a cross-country jaunt to Foxboro when the accident occurred.

Injured Man Sent To Kingston Hospital

A constable from the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police was taken to Kingston General Hospital last night with injuries received in a two-car collision on Cherry Valley Rd.

A former Belleville resident, Constable Michael Chalmers, 20, of Picton, sustained a fractured skull and possible internal injuries when his car which was being towed by another vehicle, was in collision with a car that was being driven by Wendy Carman, 16, of RR1, Picton.

Miss Carman received minor injuries.

Constable Chamers was not on duty at the time of the accident and was behind the wheel of his own car.

Phasing Out

The phasing out of the American Superior Electric operation in Belleville is a disappointment in the midst of otherwise encouraging progress on the industrial scene locally.

But then the operation has never really fulfilled the expectations of four years ago when the Connecticut-based precision motor company established here.

The company says it plans to continue warehouse and repair functions at the Belleville plant and to keep its production facilities here intact. Does this mean the company has some more extensive operation in mind? This suggests itself, but the company announcement affords no clue. It obviously has its own reasons for the course it is taking — specifically, "failure of general economic conditions to perform as expected," to quote plant manager Alden Summerville.

From the community's standpoint though, the observations of Mayor Russell Scott and Industrial Commission chairman Gerald Joyce should not be lost upon the company. That is, Superior Electric has substantial land holdings surrounding the plant, itself located on a showcase site fronting Highway 401, holdings which it would appear are far in excess of the company's needs, and which will remain unproductive — unless the company has plans for them, or alternatively releases the land for another and, hopefully, more productive enterprise.

From the U. S.

One would think there would be ample pickings for bank robbers in the sunny U.S. south without having to come and take up residence in frigid Toronto and start picking up the loot there. But there it is — three men alleged to have been involved in a holdup Friday, and who subsequently engaged in a gun battle with police, were all from an address in Riviera Beach, Florida. They are also accused of the attempted robbery of another bank Jan. 26.

We hope this is not a trend — importation of hoodlums from the United States. It would be too much to expect that among the increasing number of Americans, draft dodgers as well as legitimate immigrants, in recent years there have been no undesirables, but this is the first time we have heard of any being involved in bank robberies.

Closer to home there was that nasty incident in the Bancroft area the other day when a man and his wife in their car were pursued by a carload of young men, forced to the side of the road and assaulted. This and what seems like an increasing number of break-ins in Belleville are cause for concern.

Citizens should take warning from these further examples of crime locally and in the province generally. It is not too much to ask that people ensure that their own homes are properly secured; this way, together with police vigilance and public cooperation with law enforcement, crime may be restrained.

Travel Plan

Those 75 Centennial students off on a Mediterranean cruise, which will include shipboard education along with 600 English students, are about to have the experience of a lifetime.

What benefits could come to our young people if it were standard practice to spend some of the millions of dollars now spent on bricks and mortar on programs such as this educational cruise.

Is it so impractical, moreover, to suppose that one day there may be wholesale exchanges of populations across the globe? Already it is being accomplished on a small scale by families exchanging homes in each other's countries. Certainly such a scheme would promote closer understanding of other lands, as well as opening new horizons to people everywhere.

For a start though, nothing could be more advantageous than this opportunity which has come the way of some of our students.

Out of the Past

When it comes to image-making we could question the decision of Rita Hayworth to come out of retirement and make her television debut amid the banalities of the Carol Burnett show. But Miss Hayworth is still a glamorous woman at 52. the radiant smile is still there and it was an interesting new encounter with this star of many a musical, and more recently dramatic roles in films like Gilda. As mutual fans, Carol and Rita spoofed each other's acts, there were scenes from old movies of Miss Hayworth and Fred Astaire and while it was not one of Miss Burnett's greatest hours she remains perhaps the funniest and cleverest comedienne around today.

Predecessor Served 45 Years

Joseph Maingot at 39 Is Top Man in Parliamentary Law

OTTAWA (CP) — There is no doubt that in the highly-specialized field of Parliamentary law, Joseph Maingot has the top job in the country.

Now he has become Canada's parliamentary counsel there really isn't that much room for advancement. But there are no complaints from the lanky, likable lawyer who has taken over the job at the age of 39.

"I can't think of anything I would rather be doing," he says as he sits among enough constitutional, legal and procedural books to ballast a battleship. "Not anything."

There isn't a law school in Canada that teaches students how to become parliamentary lawyers—and perhaps it's just as well since employment opportunities are understandably limited—but Mr. Maingot says that once it gets into the blood it isn't easily removed.

"The House of Commons really is a jealous mistress."

For four years prior to taking over the top legal job on Parliament Hill, Mr. Maingot had the "very fortunate" experience of working under Dr. Maurice Ollivier, who retired a month ago after holding office for 45 years. He was internationally-recognized as a top legal mind in the field of constitutional and procedural law.

And Mr. Maingot was a quick student, since he had already attracted the attention of federal legal officials with his appearances in court—including the Supreme Court of Canada—to argue the fine points of legal procedures.

What he didn't have when he arrived was the "feel" of Parliament —something he has since corrected. When the Commons sits, Mr. Maingot is on the Hill, and that means that his day stretches from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. three days each week.

"But in order to do this job, you really have to know the feel and atmosphere of the House. So much of the work involves anticipation —knowing what arguments and procedural points are likely to be raised.

Among Mr. Maingot's duties is the drafting of all recommendations preceding government bills calling for the expenditure of money. Only the government can introduce such measures. Another of his duties is seeing that private bills do not call for the spending of money—which would automatically kill them. It can frequently be a grey area.

He helps MPs draft bills, and various notices of motions that are brought up in the House. He also has to be an expert in various constitutional conflicts, advising members when it's okay, or otherwise, to accept temporary employment with another government or when, for instance, it is possible for them to have any business dealings with government.

He must also be an expert regarding the financial rights of members—when it's possible to claim mileage allowances, telephone expenses and other such incidental money matters.

He must be able immediately to spot any potential legislation that might overlap provincial responsibilities. On questions of legal House procedures, he must be ready to give his opinion to the Speaker when asked.

Then there are the massively-researched undertakings, like the three months spent preparing a presentation on whether televising Commons procedure would interfere with the traditional right of members to say anything in the House without fear of libel.

His decision was that this immunity could not be extended to television—although Parliament, being its own master, could legislate the protection.

Mr. Maingot, a native of Ottawa, had been interested in procedural aspects of the law ever since he graduated from Toronto's Osgoode Hall. After practising for two years in Fort Erie, Ont., he returned to Ottawa and joined a large firm to concentrate almost entirely on courtroom litigation.

Since he had attended French grammer schools, he could argue his cases in either language.

Asked how he happened to be selected, Mr. Maingot said he didn't know. "But now that I am in this office, perhaps I should ask someone how it happened."

In any event, he wouldn't want to return to private practice. "There is no way I could devote the time I would want to spend on procedural matters—I'd have to make a buck, you know."

Protection of Arctic Wildlife Aim of Animal Welfare Group

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

May we, through your column, have the opportunity of speaking to Canadians.

Canada's Arctic, the last great wilderness, is poised on the brink of a headlong plunge to ruin. Industry, seemingly careless of the possible harm rapid exploitation of the mineral wealth of our North could cause to the fragile ecology of the area, is thrusting in with destructive heavy equipment and personnel. As a direct consequence, Arctic wildlife, portrayed perhaps most colorfully by the magnificent polar bear, is desperately threatened.

It is the old story all over again. All sorts of money available to rip and tear at nature — the federal government allocated $13.5 millions of dollars for industrial exploration in the North — but virtually nothing, in comparison, is being spent on the basic research necessary before exploitation can be undertaken safely. If the federal government had allocated a matching $13.5 million dollars to research and permitted a five-year breathing space while biologists replaced geologists, those of us concerned about the North could have relaxed knowing all was going right in our world. But the simple truth is that just about the opposite is true — our world is about to tumble about our ears.

But tales of woe are not enough. This fund is going to organize friends of the Actic in Canada and abroad. (We did it for the seals, and can do the same for the polar bear.) This summer, just for starters, we are going to stand between people and the bears—and we will save the lives of some of these superb creatures. Then, with some experience under our belt, we will move on to play a part in tackling the broader issues that threaten the bears and other wild animals in the North.

Now, we need people, lots of them, indeed every single Canadian who cares. As individuals there is often not a lot we can do about major issues, but together we can pack quite a punch — and we believe there may be quite a lot of punching required before this threat to nature is rolled back.

If you want to be part of a punch for polar bears and other Arctic wildlife, write to us today, tomorrow may really be too late.

The Peterborough Examiner

The press is suspicious of any meetings held behind closed doors because of past experiences with such meetings at city hall. And this feeling is shared by the majority of the public.

One example is a caucus meeting last year, about which nothing was heard for several days. It was then learned from a press release issued at the end of the week by Alexander Crate, city administrator, that the mayor and aldermen had given themselves a substantial pay boost.

I agree that some meetings should be closed, in the best interests of the public because information is sometimes revealed which could be used to the detriment of the city and the taxpayers generally.

One of the problems, of course, is that committee of the whole meetings are now open to the public, as well as the press and this makes it more difficult because although the press sometimes has an obligation to respect certain privileges in committee meetings, the public does not.

This admittedly puts council in a bit of a box.

But the caucus meeting must be used with discretion and only when necessary.

On occasion the press has waited in the Mayor's Parlor while a caucus meeting was held and when reporters returned, council, in open session, approved whatever it was they discussed in caucus, without disclosing what they had decided upon or what the subject matter had been.

There is some information the public is entitled to know, but some civic leaders and city officials would prefer to keep it quiet.

The people have a perfect right to be concerned. After all, it's their city and it's their money that foots the bills.

It is not the private domain of a handful of elected and appointed officials.

British Postal Strike

Kingston Whig-Standard

A postal strike in Britain involves much more inconvenience to the public than it does here. In Britain the General Post Office also controls telephones and telegraph services, which gives the strikers a very strong club indeed.

The fact that the British Post Office is now organized as a Crown corporation with the power to deal with its own internal problems, including finances, has not, of course, guaranteed the end of strikes. But there is no doubt that not being forced to deal with Government departments, such as the Treasury Board, which have no knowledge of Post Office problems, will be an advantage in the arbitration negotiations.

It is questionable whether any organized group should have the power to cripple any country through its refusal to man vital services. On the other hand, postal employees in Britain are not very well paid and it is difficult to blame them for trying to improve their position. If the British authorities have some magic formula for this kind of mess it is to be hoped that they will demonstrate it effectively — and that it will prove to be exportable.

A Reply to Critics Of Separate School System

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Whom or what is "The H. Arbinger Society"?

From the overtones of the letter written by said "society," printed in your paper Jan. 26, it reeks of animosity.

Has this person or persons ever attended a separate high school? I mean did they? really?

I have written several letters trying to find out what happens to and where the Separate school taxes go for 11, 12 and 13 and have received polite blanket letters of "thank you and the matter will be looked into."

The students of Separate high schools could rebel against wearing a uniform of any kind, but I am sure they choose to do so because they all look so neat and clean, and no one student is better dressed than the other one, and can go to school to learn as they should.

As far as the religion being taught, it is probably the only way some students ever learn of God; note I said some; it is the same about sex education in any school today; I personally feel it should be taught in the home by the parents, but for the benefit of the students whose parents unfortunately are unable to bring themselves to speak of sex, I advocate it be taught in the schools.

If you think I am upset by such a distasteful letter being printed, you are quite right.

The freedom of the press is a precious thing, but for anyone to use it to create ill will it is down-right abusive.

"THE NOT TO BE INTIMIDATED SOCIETY".

Snowmobilers and Wildlife

Kingston Whig-Standard

Cases of sadistic snowmobile operators chasing tired animals across open ground and ice-covered lakes and deliberately running them down continue to be reported throughout Canada with depressing frequency. Clearly, it is time that such monsters were made to feel the full weight of the law.

Last year amendments were made to the Game and Fish Act of Ontario, making it illegal to use a vehicle or vessel for chasing, worrying, injuring or killing any animal or bird. The amendments broadened the power of the courts to cancel hunting licences when a person has been convicted of cruelty to animals. These amendments were long overdue.

One of the most difficult problems our society has to face is the twisted mind which leads to gross forms of cruelty to animals. Our hunting laws, and our laws to protect animals, are not nearly as comprehensive as they should be. Lack of positive identification frequently prevents the laying of charges. In addition, in many cases witnesses hesitate to inform on those they have seen torture and kill animals.

Recently two St. Pierre, Manitoba men were fined $200 and costs each after being found guilty of using snowmobiles to run down foxes and rabbits. In addition, the two "sportsmen" had their hunting privileges suspended for one year and their snowmobiles and rifles confiscated. Such action by the courts is needed all across Canada as a deterrent to other misguided individuals who may be tempted to use the snowmobile as an instrument of harassment and slaughter.

Procedural Questions Still Confront Separate School Board

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Procedural wrangles were the main preoccupation of the trustees of the Hastings and Prince Edward separate school board at their second duly constituted regular public meeting since the new board was voted in.

The board met in the library of Nicholson Catholic College because the fire marshal has prohibited anyone but board members from meeting in the board room at 158 George St.

Trustees decided to continue to meet in Nicholson library until a fire exit could be installed in the board room.

Although the meeting was public, no agendas, reports or copies of correspondence were issued to the press or three members of the public present.

When asked for copies before the meeting, chairman Ben Kroeze of Trenton said the issuing of agendas to the press was an item on the agenda for consideration during the meeting, and after trustees had voted their approval, copies would be distributed.

"That is the proper way to do it, with official approval," he said.

However, the matter had not come up by the time the board moved into committee of the whole two hours later. Items on the year-end financial report submitted by business administrator Edgar Paquet, resolutions recommended at previous closed board meetings and other business on the agenda were referred to by number by trustees and information on their precise nature could not be obtained.

The policy of Hastings county board of education and boards in the adjacent counties of Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington and Northumberland-Durham is to send agendas in the mail to members of the press at the same time they are mailed to trustees. Minutes of meetings are also mailed to the press when they go out to trustees.

Both the Hastings and the Prince Edward public boards record their meetings by having an executive secretary take notes in longhand. The Lenox and Addington board employs a shorthand stenographer.

Standing committees and the trustees appointed to them were confirmed, although Rev Louis Casartelli of Maynooth objected to setting up a policy committee. He said a period should be allotted at each meeting to policy making and a committee would overlap the board's function.

A rotating committee was also set up to prepare the agenda each month.

The procedure for recording meetings and preparing minutes, decided upon at the inaugural meeting in January, was questioned by Zderek Kvarda.

The procedure called for taping of all meetings, preparation of a typewritten transcript of the tape and preparation of a summary of the transcript to be considered as minutes and submitted to the board at its next meeting for approval.

Mr. Kvarda said the typewritten transcript was a waste of time filing the tapes for two years would be sufficient. His motion that the minutes contain only a record of motions and directives was carried by the board.

Supervisor of program C. G. Mersereau said the taping and transcription of minutes was a suggestion of the board's solicitor.

"Why are we taping the minutes?" again queried Paul Fleming. "For the secretary's convenience? For the protection of board members? The purpose doesn't seem too valid to me; it seems unnecessary."

Mr. Mersereau told Mr. Fleming that "Something said that didn't seem important at the time later becomes significant. Other boards are taping."

Joseph Chapelle agreed, and said he was in favor of the procedure.

Rev. Walter Hamilton of Picton asked if there was any need to also record the proceedings of meetings in shorthand.

He was told the board stenographer used both the tapes ane her shorthand notes in preparing the minutes.

The policy proposed by the board for dealing with delegations was criticized by Msgr. J. P. Sullivan.

The proposal was to have all delegations submit written briefs two weeks before the meeting at which they are to appear, so that copies can be made and mailed to trustees with the agenda.

"You are expressing a closed door policy and could stall off delegations for months this way," Msgr. Sullivan said. "It is the obligation of the delegation, not the board, to prepare copies. You don't need this kind of notice to appear before city council."

The necessity for written motions, signed by mover and seconder, was questioned by Mr. Fleming. He asked if this procedure was a recommendation of legal counsel.

"This is the way I like to see a motion," replied the chairman. "I had some experience on previous boards.

Mr. Kvarda noted "quite a few deficits" on the financial report and asked if authority was given to overspend the budgeted amounts.

Mr. Paquet, the business administrator, said that the interest on borrowing to the bank was the only item that exceeded budget totals. The sum in excess that he gave verbally was $8,000.

Mr. Kvarda said he understood no amounts could be transferred from one account to another without authority and asked on whose authority the amount was overspent.

Mr. Paquet said there was no way of controlling telephone and unemployment insurance expenses.

"People have to be paid whether you guessed correctly at the beginning of the year about the amount due them," he said. The legal fees of the board this year exceeded the budget, he revealed.

Mr. Kvarda, reading the financial report, noted an item, "other travel expenses" on page 1, which was exceeded, he said, by $900. He asked if there was any directive to curb or control travel after Oct. 1.

In reply, Mr. Paquet said: "In November and December there was some unusual travel." He added he had had no guide from the previous year to go on in preparing the 1970 budget.

John Granville remarked that when he was an administrator and made up budgets, he could not overspend without authority.

"When a board gives you authority to hire more people and there is no money in the budget . . . ", said Mr. Paquet.

"Then that is approval," finished Mr. Granville for him.

A private closed meeting of the board will be held Feb. 9, when three members of the Ontario Trustees Council have been invited to talk to trustees on board procedures and conduct.

The board's meeting date was changed to the third Tuesday of each month to permit the business department to submit up-to-date financial statements.

Ice conditions are not expected to halt the Quinte Loyalist this winter. A bubble system installed at the docking slips keeps ice from forming at the docks where it could interfere with the ferry.

L'Amable School Closing Up for Further Discussion

No decision has yet been reached by Hastings county board of education on the closing of part of L'Amable public school.

Monday night members of the board and its administration travelled to Bancroft to discuss the issue with representatives from the area.

Objections to the proposed reshuffling of elementary school pupils among schools in north Hastings centred on the transportation problem.

People of the area were concerned that pupils would be subjected to long bus rides and forced to leave home at an unreasonably early hour and be brought back unreasonably late.

The board's proposal is to close the old five-room building at L'Amable, leaving the two-room new building for kindergarten and Grade 1 students. The Grade 7 and 8 pupils now occupying the two-room Limerick school would be moved to a new senior public school and the Limerick school converted for retarded children.

A new senior public school for Grades 7 and 8 only would be constructed at a cost of about $761,000, probably in Bancroft.

The 125 people gathered in the auditorium of North Hastings High School heard associate superintendent Glen Watson outline the advantages of the senior public school system.

The county board is committed to a policy of providing senior public schools, but the northern part of the county is not being served, he said.

The previous public school board in north Hastings had been planning to bring in a senior elementary school system before the county board was set up two years ago.

All elementary schools in the north are overcrowded, Mr. Watson said, and none of them have libraries, special education facilities, general purpose rooms or laboratories.

A new senior school in the north would relieve the overcrowding, and move children out of the two basement rooms now in use at Bancroft Public School and the two portables at Bird's Creek

The proposed senior school for the Bancroft area would include rooms for industrial arts, home economics, art and music, a gym, science labs, room for setting up an oral French program and complete facilities for outdoor sports activities.

"It was a positive meeting, with speakers from the audience presenting both sides," said director of education Eric Runacres.

"All recognized the value of a senior public school, but something will have to be done about organizing bus routes and feeder lines if the school is built."

Final decision of the schools in the north will await further study and investigation on the part of the board and its administrators.

Frankie Loves Millie, But Not as Girl Friend

By DORIS CLARK

Frankie is 13. His after-school companion is Millie. Same age, same athletic propensities — and a girl.

This is Frankie's first year in secondary school and there is a dance coming up. Frankie doesn't know whom he could take to the dance and his mother was amazed that he would not ask Millie.

It seems Millie is talked about by the other boys. She is called "Miss Square". Why? Because she wears hair cropped short, dresses longer than the other girls and thick stockings. Frankie says her father always wanted her to be a boy, and same father now falls to see that he is turning out a boyish model — category uncertain.

Frankie loves Millie, but not as a girl friend! And whose fault is it?

• • •

Dear Doris: I can't figure myself out. This guy Paul and I broke up with each other about four months ago. I don't like him, but we are friends.

I like and date other guys, but when I hear Paul goes with other girls and really likes them, it hurts me. What does this mean

He was the first guy I ever really liked. Does that have anything to do with it — Hurt.

Dear Hurt: It means you are a natural human being who still doesn't feel very sure of herself.

Once you get going with another fellow you like better, you'll start feeling glad poor old Paul isn't pining away for you. Believe me, it isn't fun leaving a trail of broken hearts behind you, in spite of the romantic sound of it.

• • •

Dear Doris: I have been married seven years to a man who can change like day and night. He blames the breakdown of his last marriage on his wife, but I can see the light now

He tells me any time I don't like the way he acts or does things I can pack up and leave. My nerves are at the breaking point, but where could I go with three children and no money?

I only wish any girl who has intentions of marrying a divorced man stop and think before it is too late. This letter might save some unfortunate single girl from falling prey to a smooth-talking married man. — Bitter.

Dear Bitter: Catering to such a person accomplishes nothing. All the Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde combination does is expect more of the same.

Unless you are prepared to shock him into a complete change of front, I can't see holding together such a disagreeable home. Counselling — on a personal basis and not through a letter — ought to be tried first.

It is true that a girl who is being pursued by a divorced man ought to take a pretty steady look at just why that first marriage broke up.

• • •

Dear Doris: I have four children, one of whom is in the final stages of muscular dystrophy.

After my husband died, I found work to support myself and my children; however, necessity forced me to place my ailing son in a foster home.

This letter is really in praise of foster parents. The people who keep my son have a very real affection for handicapped children—they must have. This wonderful woman finds the time somehow to care for three of these children, and to give my son endless exercises. She reads to him, teaches him, prays with him and for him, I know. In short, she loves him, I am sure, as much as I do. My son calls them Mummy and Daddy.

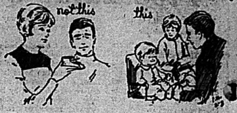
I am always welcome to drop in. The house is always spotless, and so are the children. I don't know where she gets the energy.

It is too bad that there are not more of this kind of person populating our planet, for we would have a much better place in which to live. — Thankful.

Dear Thankful: I say "Amen!" Foster parenting is one of the noblest jobs in the world, with the peak being reached by the foster parents who give loving care to little ones who are handicapped in some way.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Look at this shoe. Tommy has had this pair a month and they already seem too small. Don't you think he could get along with them for another month or two? He isn't walking yet."

Mother: "Let's make sure these shoes will fit Tommy well. I want them to be roomy. He is just beginning to pull himself up to a standing position."

When a child needs shoes for warmth and when he begins to stand, make sure his footwear is roomy enough for tender, growing feet.

ALPHA DELTA KAPPA (LAMBDA CHAPTER)

Miss Phyllis May Beatty primary consultant for Hastings County was the guest speaker at the January 27 meeting of Lambda chapter held at the home of Mrs. Laura Fisher, Belleville, with Mrs. Grace Anderson as cohostess. Miss Beatty showed colorful slides of her trip last summer to the British Isles. The speaker was introduced by Fay Burnett and thanked by Miss Phyllis May.

Earlier, considerable planning was done for the rummage sale to be held on March 13 at Bridge Street United Church. Various means of advertising this event were discussed and all members were urged to continue saving articles for the sale.

The February meeting is being planned as a jewellery demonstration to be held on the 24th at Loyalist College lounge. Each member was asked to bring a box lunch and the money from these will be put into the altruistic fund.

Miss Clara Adams who has transferred membership from Beta chapter, Toronto to Lambda chapter was officially welcomed by president Helen Calnan. Each member received her new directory for the province of Ontario.

The meeting was opened by Mrs. Helen Calnan, president. Jean Szczerba read the treasurer's report while the minutes of the last two meetings were read by Marion Craighead.

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT — Karen Magnussen practises her free skating routine during a training session as she prepares for the North American championships to be held in Peterborough, Feb. 4-6. Figure Skater Practises Four Hours Daily

TORONTO (CP) — At a time when most people are still thinking about crawling out of bed, Karen Magnussen has already started a grueling day of training.

Karen, an 18-year-old student at Delbrook High School in North Vancouver, is Canadian senior ladies' figure skating champion, a title she has held for three of the last four years. After reading the morning sports pages, she has a light breakfast of coffee and orange juice and heads for the ice rink, hitting the ice anywhere between 6 30 and 7.00 in the morning. She spends four hard, and sometimes monotonous, hours working on her free skating program and perfecting her compulsory figures.

She then attends school until mid-afternoon, followed by another four hours of hard skating. Then it's home for dinner, homework and a moment of relaxation before hitting the pillow.

This is the routine that has kept Karen among the world's top skaters for the last few years. She first won the senior title in 1968, lost to Linda Carbonetto the following year, and then recaptured the title in 1970. That same year she placed fourth at the world championships. Her immediate goal is to win the North American championship, being held at Peterborough, Feb. 4 - 6, and then the world title at Lyon, France, at the end of February.

Following the world championships, Karen will go on a world tour lasting until the end of March. She is chaperoned on her trips by her mother, while her father stays behind with her sisters, Judy, 13, and Laurie, 15.

Counselling Discussed by Columnist

Belleville should have some facility for marital counselling on a skilled and professional basis according to Doris Clark the Canadian social worker whose column "Successful Living" appears in The Intelligencer every day.

She was discussing the social welfare services available in Belleville with Bruce Kerr, Director of the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County when she was on a visit to the city with her sister Pearl on Tuesday afternoon. Doris Clark commented that sometimes even new marriages threaten to go on the rocks and this is where a trained social worker can step in and help to interpret the young couple to each other.

Doris Clark, who lives in Hamilton, frequently travels to various cities in Canada and abroad. She visits social workers in each city to keep up to date about what services are available to her readers in each area. She has also visited social agencies in Rome, Paris, Copenhagen and London to see how they work and compare them with Canadian ones. In Denmark she visited the International Peoples' College in Elsinore, where students from various countries exchange ideas and learn about world affairs. She feels that her contacts with foreign social agencies help her to gain new insights into her readers' problems.

At present the Canadian Association of Broadcasters is promoting some tape recordings by Doris Clark answering questions similar to the ones she deals with in her newspaper columns. She hopes that these recordings will be broadcast by several radio stations in the near future.

Miss Clark remarked that she was happy to be back in Belleville after four years because The Intelligencer was the first newspaper to purchase her column, which is now published in 55 papers including some weekly ones. She feels strongly that Canadian readers need Canadians to write for them as Canadians have a definite national character and personality which a person of another nationality cannot fully understand.

Doris Clark who had 20 years experience in social work before she started writing her column comes from a family of successful columnists. One of her sisters is Mary Moore whose recipe column is familiar to readers and another sister is Pearl, or Peady as she is affectionately known, who writes a column on social etiquette.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Sausage Rolls Are Popular

By MARY MOORE

Before Christmas a reader asked for a repeat of a Christmas 1968 recipe for "sausage rolls that had hot mustard I think spread on the crust before rolling."

It was a surprise to me to discover just how popular that column on sausage rolls was for we received hundreds of requests for surplus copies. Since Christmas 1970 we have received more so a repeat is indicated.

SAUSAGE ROLLS

Buy small pork sausages — 20 to a pound if possible. Place in shallow pan, pour 1 cup boiling water over, cover, bring to boil, turn heat low and simmer 10 minutes. Drain. (This cooks the sausages and removes a little of the excess fat.) Cool. Use them in the 2 following variations:

1) SIMPLE: Use fresh white bread for these. Cut off all crusts. Squares of bread should be ½" longer than sausages and long enough to give a 1" overlap. Spread some thinly with mustard and some with catsup. Roll cooked cooled sausages up in slices and fasten with toothpicks or wind each with about 4 or 5 loops of string (to hold and to give a spiral marking on the bread, when removed, after toasting). Place on broiler pan 6" from hot burner to warm the sausages through. Then turn and move closer to burner to brown. Serve at once with coffee or tea for a late snack or with soup for a main course or with first course cocktails.

2) STANDARD: My sausages measured 3" when cooked so I cut my plain pastry (see below) in squares 3 x 3" and placed them, lapped side down, on baking sheet and chilled them. I baked them at 450 deg. Fahr. about 18 to 20 minutes.

Plain Pastry:

½ cup shortening or lard
1 tbsp. butter
1½ cups stirred but unsifted pastry flour
½ tsp. salt
about 3 tbsps. cold water

Cut shortening and butter into flour and salt until size of peas. Drizzle in cold water, tossing with fork until you can shape into ball between palms. Roll out (see above).

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Main Course Turkey Soup (see Tuesday); Tomatoes with Tossed Greens; Roquefort Dressing; Canned Canadian Pears; Holiday Banana Bread (see Mon.); Tea.

A Tasty Change

Serve hot sausage rolls or "pigs in blankets" at your next tea or coffee party. Something hot is always more popular than sandwiches. Mary Moore gives you two Sausage Roll methods today.

Unexpected Guests Given Warm Welcome

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I would like to comment on your answer to "Alice's Restaurant." The gal was furious because her husband kept bringing unexpected guests home to dinner. (Last time he caught her with wieners and sauerkraut.)

Alice should be pleased that her husband is so proud of his home that he feels comfortable enough to do this. And he must have a great deal of confidence in his wife. Some men would be scared to death of what they might find if they surprised the little woman with unexpected company.

I can tell you from experience that our most interesting evenings have been the times my husband brought home a "surprise" guest to share a casserole of tuna, or a batch of French toast — and, yes, even meatloaf. Friendly atmosphere and stimulating conversation mean more than fancy china and sirloin steak. To a travelling man who is away from his family, any home-cooked meal among friends is better than a gourmet dinner at a cafe — alone. — NO NOTICE NORA.

DEAR NORA: I am a rapid-scan reader and the first word of your letter that caught my eye was meatloaf. Needless to say I was shook. I was delighted, however, your letter dealt with another topic. I hope every wife who gripes about her husband bringing home an unexpected dinner guest will see your letter and learn from it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two years ago my sister married a homosexual. In less than a month he told Myra he had married only for "respectability." From that day on he rejected her. Last month he started divorce proceedings. Myra is fighting the divorce. This should tell you right away that she is a nut.

Myra has upset the entire family because of her behavior. She rattles on and on about her marvelous husband, how well he treats her and how thoughtful he is. It's enough to make a person throw up.

A few weeks ago Myra began to have some physical problems (stomach pains and headaches.) Her internist sent her to a psychiatrist. I hope he will help her. In the meantime, what can I do about this balmy girl who is making such a big fool of herself? — RX-11.

DEAR RX: Nothing. But you can do something for yourself. Separate yourself from Myra's problem. She sounds like a sick cookie who needs understanding, not criticism.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I couldn't resist writing in the hope that I might help the woman who is driving herself crazy about her daughter's short lifeline. It seems the mother became interested in palmistry and began to read the palms of her friends and relatives. She became petrified when she discovered that her youngest child had a lifeline about one fifth the length of a normal life span.

When I was a child my mother had a palm reader come to our home. The woman told my mother that she would not live to see her 51st birthday. I was only seven years old at the time and my mother was 47. Every night for three wretched years I went to sleep on a wet pillow. I lived in constant fear that my mother would die. Only when Mother reached her 51st birthday did I shake the terrible anxiety. My mother died four years ago at the age of 91. Please print this letter for Mrs. L. D. because I know so well what she is going through. — — BEEN THERE, TOO.

DEAR BEEN: Hundreds wrote to relate similar experiences. Thank you all. Palmistry is purely superstitution, of course. I, too, hope the worried mother sees your letter.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I enjoy your column and respect your mature judgment, but I feel obliged to correct a statement you made recently. When the teenager who complained that her father's denture-clicking was driving her crazy, you said, "Noisy dentures mean a poor fit." This is wrong.

The only time a person's upper and lower teeth (true or false) normally touch is while eating. The rest of the time, the muscles keep the lower jaw open. This is called freeway space. The dad with the clicking dentures does not have enough freeway space. He should tell his dentist about the problem. It can be remedied. — W. L. NATIONAL SCHOOL OF DENTAL TECHNOLOGY, PHILADELPHIA.

DEAR W. L.: Thanks for the correction. My dental consultant tells me you are right. But he added, "Upper and lower teeth do touch about 2,0000 times a day — when a person swallows."

Security-guard Agencies Prosper

Honest Ed Says Some Parents Take Kids Out for Nice Shoplifting Evening

TORONTO (CP) — Theft is becoming so casual, says Toronto businessman Ed Mirvish, that some parents take their children out "for a nice evening of shoplifting."

Experts in the security business say this casual attitude about shoplifting is one reason that security-guard agencies now do about $60 million worth of business annually, more than double the amount five years ago.

Mr. Mirvish, who owns a discount department store, is one of many businessmen who use security guard services to protect merchandise.

The size of the problem is enormous. A United States survey showed one in 15 shoppers going into a department store walked out with something they didn't pay for.

Women were the worst offenders. The average item stolen was worth $5.26. One large U.S. store estimates that its known losses run to about 40 per cent of net profits.

Security-firm duties include protection against shoplifting in retail stores, fire prevention and guarding against theft and vandalism in large apartment buildings. A Vancouver company even guards against log thieves.

Robert Burns, general property manager for Belmont Property Management Ltd., a Toronto apartment-house owner, says vandalism is a major reason for rapid growth of employment of security agents.

In the nine years he has been with Belmont, says Mr. Burns, he has seen a tremendous increase in vandalism.

Tenants "will steal anything that is moveable . . . light bulbs from the halls, decorations, rugs."

Belmont has increased its use of security guards to cope with rising theft and vandalism.

"The people plead for them," he says. "They feel more secure."

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: I took my car to a garage to fix the ignition and when I came back to pick it up I was told it needed a lot of other repairs, and got a bill for $100. I didn't authorize these other repairs. Do I have to pay this whole bill?

ANSWER: Yes, or they can keep your car until you do. You should have signed a written work order stating exactly what repairs you wanted done and the price it would cost. A car owner should never neglect to do this. If other repairs are needed the garage can call you later and you can decide then if you wish them to go ahead with further work at additional cost.

QUESTION: Where do I get a work permit for the United States?

ANSWER: Contact the U.S. Consul, 360 University Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

QUESTION: When is the Winter Carnival in Quebec City?

ANSWER: This year's carnival in Quebec City from February 4 to 23 will have its usual dog-sled derby, International Peewee Hockey Tournament, motorcycle, car and canoe races on ice, two balls and two parades, a queen and her six duchesses and Bonhomme Carnaval, the big, walking, talking snowman who runs around ordering everyne to enjoy himself. Hundreds of thousands watch the parades, and the streets of the city are thick with decorations and ice monuments — including, this year, an ice palace 94 feet long and 39 deep built of 1,200 blocks of ice.

The big visitors' weekends are Feb. 12-14 and Feb. 19-21 — with the latter having a big edge in interest if you have a choice of times.

This weekend features a spectacular night parade, with two dozen brightly lit floats and some 1,500 bands and marchers, and the now famous ice canoe race across the floes of the St. Lawrence River to Levis and back.

This is one of North America's most gruelling and exdays of the rivermen who were the only link with civilization for some isolated Quebec communities. Contestants push and paddle their craft over a frigid two-mile course, battling a raging current that can put them out in left field in minutes.

The Feb. 12-14 weekend features the beginning of the peewee hockey tournament, which runs to the 20th; the rgency ball, which you won't likely attend; a night parade; motorcycle races on ice and the Grand Prix auto race.

Headquarters for the carnival is a palace constructed of ice and ruled over by a seven-foot animated snowman named Bonhomme Carnival. He's the symbol of carnival and he's hot when everyone else is cold. His shell weights something like 40 pounds and it gets so hot inside that he can last only 20 minutes at indoor events.

Hotels have been fully booked for weeks and motels will be jampacked on the two big weekends of carnival. But a housing committee has been set up and it can get you accommodation in a private home for $5 per person. To arrange this, write to the Quebec Tourist Office, 60 D'Auteuil St., Quebec 4.

Quebec city is 400 miles from Belleville. You can go almost all the way by major highways so it's an easy one-day drive.

MANDALA by Pearl S. Buck.

"Mandala" is one of Pearl Buck's rare novels about India. It is the story of Prince Jagat and his wife Moti. When their son is killed, Moti, believing in reincarnation, sets off in search of his spirit. In varying ways Jagat, Moti and their daughter Verra become involved with Westerners and the clash of philosophies. The author brings to her writing rare insight into Asian ways of life.

A STRANGE CLIMATE by R. P. Jhabvala.

Here we have nine stories set in India, this time by an Indian author. She writes of the experiences of Europeans in India and how they fit into the Indian scene. She divides them into the "Seekers" and the "Sufferers". The former want to enrich themselves emotionally and spiritually. The latter are Europeans who have stayed too long and find the country alien to them. Characters brilliantly portrayed with compassion and understanding.

THE HOSPITAL by Agatha Young.

A sympathetic story of a doctor — a woman, the first ever to be admitted to the staff of the prestigious Joseph Linklighter Memorial Hospital in New England. Dr. Sue Ward encounters all the prejudices against emancipated women that pervaded the latter days of the nineteenth century. Her struggles to resolve the conflict between her profession and her personal life are complicated by conflict within the hospital. A well - researched novel of American medicine.

THE PROJECTS SECTION by Tom Lilley.

Tom Lilley is a new author who writes in the style of John LeCarre. His chief character is Ralph Carter of the British Armed forces in the fictitious Malayan state of Kepayan. Carter's orders are four Communist terrorists gangs operating in the state. In addition to authentic background and engrossing action, Mr. Lilly makes the point that in today's world the price of liberty must be paid in very dirty in-fighting.

A HYDRA WITH SIX HEADS by Josephine Bell.

When Dr. Roy Cartwright takes a post in London he discovers that his predecessor had been the target of false accusations and had later been discovered lying dead in Southampton Water. Roy is dragged into a morass of corruption and danger and is lucky indeed that his uncle Henry has friends in Scotland Yard.

THE PUPPET-MASTERS by Willim Garner.

Lander Baxx is a financial giant with a passion for privacy. Has he something to hide? This is what Jenny Cato plans to find out. The interview in a sumptuous Mediterranean Villa has unexpected results for both. Against a background of international financial manipulation, the story accelerates to a thrilling climax.

PC Ridings Must Pick Young PCs

TORONTO (CP) — Three Progressive Conservative riding associations were ordered Tuesday to replace two of their leadership convention delegates with members of the Young Progressive Conservatives.

Sean O'Sullivan of Niagara Falls said the decision by the party's credentials committee will be used as a precedent to try to get eight other riding associations to follow suit. Next week, the Ontario party meets here to choose a successor to Premier John Robarts.

After a four - hour discussion Tuesday, the credentials committee ordered the associations in Ottawa East, Carleton and Toronto's York-Forest Hill to drop two of their 10 delegates in favor of YPCs.

The association's constitution requires each 10-member delegation to include two members of the local YPC association if it is recognized, or appoint two people under 30.

Some of the 117 riding associations took the regulation to mean they did not have to include YPCs if they did not recognize them.

Reorganization Bill Is Flayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition threw some of its sharpest tongues into the fray Tuesday before stopping to catch its breath in Commons debate over the government's reorgahization bill.

The bill received second reading after six days of withering criticism from all opposition parties, but not before Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and former prime minister John Diefenbaker delivered some last-minute shots.

The wide-ranging piece of legislation would allow the government to create up to five new ministries without the approval of Parliament.

Mr. Diefenbaker said it was another step towards turning Parliament into a "decorative nullity."

It would also permit the government to add a dozen or more parliamentary secretaries—Liberal MPs who receive an extra $4,000 a year for helping ministers—to the government's current list of 16.

Mr. Stanfield called them "jobs for the boys."

Another section would give pensions of varying sizes to public servants retiring or being laid off after the age of 50.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) called it "mean, ugly and despicable" because it meant the government could get rid of employees at 50 by paying them only 20 per cent pensions.

Even what has been called the motherhood section of the bill —creation of a department of the environment—fell on barbed words. Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) called it "window-dressing."

The bill will undergo clause-by-clause analysis in committee of the whole, starting today.

Mr. Stanfield said the bill symbolizes the attitude of the government because it deals with structures and forms that can be manipulated rather than the substance of problems.

"I say that what needs to be reorganized is not so much the structure of government but rather the priorities of this government."

As for the government's attempt to discontinue Parliament's current function of giving approval to the establishment of ministries, the opposition leader was "totally opposed to any move that would lessen parliamentary supervision."

"This government has downgraded Parliament already more than enough."

Mr. Diefenbaker, glowering and pointing with menace aforethought to the government front benches, called the bill "another step in the direction of a deliberate and calculated degradation of Parliament."

Not satisfied with the largest cabinet in Canadian history, the government was now setting up "the greatest political gravy train in Canadian history."

Those Liberal backbenchers who would be rewarded with positions as parliamentary secretaries would be "those who practice obsequious cringing and servile flunkeyism." Independence of government MPs would lose more ground to "that supine majority that bows to the prime minister."

"The sun will not shine for those who disagree."

The government, he said, had tried to deceive Canadians by introducing such Machiavellian legislation connected to an anti-pollution measure, but he would not be bamboozled.

Firm Fights Pollution Curbs

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Bethlehem Steel Corp. is threatening to take its business out of the Buffalo, N.Y., area unless the pollution control agency there goes easier in applying air pollution standards, former U.S. Representative Richard McCarthy (Dem. N.Y.) said there Tuesday.

Besides lashing out at Bethlehem as "the prototype of the arrogant industry," McCarthy said that prosperity is only "disguising rising decay and discomfort" in aggravating environmental deterioration.

McCarthy said pollution from Bethlehem's Lackawanna, N.Y., plant was responsible last month for an air pollution alert that forced children to stop outdoor sports and adults with respiratory problems to remain indoors.

Hoffman Ousted

TORONTO (CP) — Abbie Hoffman, a U.S. radical convicted of crossing state limits with intent to incite a riot, was detained at Toronto International Airport Tuesday for six hours and then ordered out of the country for the second time in three weeks.

A board of immigration officials said Mr. Hoffman was refused entry to Canada because he had been convicted of an offence involving moral turpitude and because he had been deported before on the same grounds.

Trudeau Takes Heat Out of Francophone Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau appears to have taken some of the heat out of a red-hot debate over a $2 million government proposal aimed at hiring 250 French-speaking university graduates in the public service this year.

The prime minister, fielding questions on the issue for the first time Tuesday, faced a formidable display of Commons opposition before running headlong into curious reporters following a later cabinet meeting.

The opposition accuses the government of conceiving and carrying out in secret an unannounced plan to spend $2 million of the taxpayers' money on a special program to recruit 250 French-speaking graduates this year.

Mr. Trudeau gave the same basic reply in the Commons that he later gave reporters.

The government had decided last November—in secret—to make up to $2 million available if an acceptable program for recruiting French-speaking graduates could be developed. The plan was kept secret because it would take effect only if suitable recruitment procedures were found.

The public service commission then began carrying out cabinet's decision by issuing a confidential memorandum asking how this plan could best be executed.

The memo, which contained a caution that the plan was not to be announced, was leaked to a reporter, seized on by the opposition and used as ammunition against the government last week while Mr. Trudeau was returning from the Singapore Commonwealth prime ministers' conference.

Mr. Trudeau told reporters that the issue was not a "very good wicket" for the opposition. A total of 1,250 graduates would be hired in the public service this year and only 250 French-speaking graduates were covered by the proposal.

The opposition was "either against the government trying to hire this proportion of francophones . . . or they are against the fact that the public service commission should be trying to implement cabinet decisions or they are against the fact that cabinet ministers don't intervene at every moment of the public service commission's actions. . . ."

A reporter told Mr. Trudeau that in his absence last week cabinet ministers did not seem to know anything about the plan.

"Well, I didn't either, and no minister—God, you don't understand anything. The ministers didn't know anything about the plan. The plan was a secret document of the public service commission trying to work out a suitable arrangement."

Earlier, the Commons broke into angry name-calling when the recruitment issue surfaced near the end of the daily question period.

The shouting started when Mr. Trudeau told New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas that the cabinet had approved an expenditure of up to $2 million for the plan if a suitable program was worked out.

Donald MacInnis, the fiery Conservative from Cape Breton-East Richmond, shot to his feet to say government ministers had told a different story last week and "quite a few should resign."

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North), all took parting shots at Mr. Trudeau before the 40-minute question period closed.

Their questions were based on what they said seemed to be a discrepancy between Mr. Trudeau's statement that the plan followed a cabinet decision and statements by ministers last week that the memo did not have cabinet approval.

Pelletier Thinks Quebec Views Not Badly Split

OTTAWA (CP) — Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier believes use of the War Measures Act last October may leave public opinion in Quebec less badly split than it was following the provincial election six months earlier.

"Polarization of opinion" has been a theme recently emphasized by Quebec critics of the War Measures proclamation and attendant police action.

In an interview this week, however, Mr. Pelletier answered that most Quebec citizens appear to have accepted the government action as an exceptional response to an exceptional situation.

"I don't think the trauma will have consequences," he said. "The damage was not of a major nature."

Even the critics, he suggested, are finding that "the danger to freedom was not as serious as they believed."

At the same time, he added, the danger remains that the Front de Liberation du Quebec —"or whatever's left of it"— will attempt to force the government to maintain emergency police powers beyond the April 31 deadline set by Parliament.

The minister said he had heard that young university theoreticians now are talking of the need to prevent the fall crisis from disappearing into history as merely an episode and to provoke a continuing climate of repression.

"If there should be a new flair-up of terrorism, forcing the government to prolong the emergency powers, then we could reach a danger point," he said.

The possibility is there if only because it is easier to organize a political kidnapping than it is to solve unemployment, he said.

But meanwhile, federalism in Quebec might be in an even stronger position than it was following the election victory of Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa last April 29.

At that time the separatist Parti Quebecois won close to 24 per cent of the popular vote. An election held now, Mr. Pelletier said, might show the separatists to have lost voters.

Condominiums Urged

EDMONTON (CP) — Canadian homeowners of the future will buy a complete community, not just a home, the Housing and Urban Development Association was told Tuesday.

R. J. Macleod, vice-president of Greenwin Construction Co. in Toronto, said the future of housing in high-density areas such as Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, Winnipeg and Edmonton rests in multi-unit dwellings for individual ownership — condominiums.

These units can take the form of high-rise apartments, town houses or garden apartment developments.

Anglicans Will Give $10,000 to Fight Racism

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada, at a 10-day meeting that ended Tuesday, committed the church to a program involving some political action at home and abroad.

The synod pledged an initial grant of $10,000 through the Primate's World Relief and Development Fund to the World Council of Churches to fight racism during 1971.

Through the same fund it pledged an amount not yet decided to support "the fighting priest"—Very Rev. Gonville ffrench-Beytagh who has been charged under South Africa's Terrorism Act for his activities against apartheid. The dean of Johannesburg was released on bail last week after spending 10 days incommunicado in police headquarters.

Synod also approved a motion asking the church's 2.5 million adherents to refrain from buying or consuming any goods produced directly or indirectly in South Africa.

The church will ask the federal government to end preferential tariffs for South African products such as sugar and to refrain from encouraging business with that country as long as it continues its apartheid—racial separation—policies, even if this means a slower economic growth for Canadians.

The synod pledged five years of support for its self-help program for native people which provides money to Indian, Eskimo or Metis groups at their request and with no strings attached

The programs came out of a report at the last synod in Sudbury, Ont. in August, 1969 when Charles Hendry of the University of Toronto recommended an entire new approach to dealings with native peoples.

The synod approved requests by 12 native clergy and lay delegates to continue implementing the Hendry report for five years even if budget cuts have to be made in other programs.

The church this year is involved in two court cases for which Indians requested financial help.

In one case, a group of Nishga Indians from the Nass River area in British Columbia is seeking recognition for its aboriginal land rights. The band received $10,000 for its legal battle, the first time the church has intervened in a court case against the government.

In another case the church gave $1,500 to Chief Noll Dericksan to fight three charges laid under the Fisheries Act following a mass "fish-in" by 150 Indians at Deep Creek near Peachland, B.C. The case is a test of the Indians' aboriginal right to hunt and fish. A week ago the case was postponed until June at the request of Dericksan's lawyer, former justice minister Davie Fulton.

United Church Opposed to 'Abortion on Demand'

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The United Church of Canada faced up squarely, if reluctantly, to reality and the times. It gave qualified approval to legalized abortion.

It stipulated three conditions: "In certain medical, social and economic circumstances."

There was a fourth, not spelled out but implicit in its resolution: No abortion on demand.

Never before had a Christian church gone so far in expressing itself affirmatively on the theological and moral issue: Has a woman the right not to bear her unwanted child?

The church said yes—if a qualified doctor approves.

In taking its stand, the United Church also said it recognized that the unborn child has a right to be wanted.

Of the issues that came up at the 24th general council of the United Church, and there were many, that of legalized abortion was the hardest to face. A clerical commissioner, strongly opposed to abortion, said he approved the decision after an "agonizing night."

The 24th meeting of the general council ended Tuesday as its moderator, Rt. Rev. Arthur B. Moore, in his closing address, expressed hope for the church of the future.

"We don't need to worry about our faith or our finances," he said. "The church will be equal to the tasks ahead, ready to face the challenges around us."

One of the challenges, expressed in the list of priorities for the church to face, is the population explosion. The general council accepted a report from its board of evangelism and social service which said mankind is facing a crisis and which said that contraception not only is essential but is a Christian duty.

But it went on to say that abortion is not the way to solve that problem. It was the lesser of two evils.

The general council made up a list of priorities of concern: justice, peace, poverty, population growth, hunger, pollution, family life. These were issues to be faced despite diminishing membership and declining finances.

The financial health of the United Church was reported by the finance department as not well. It is running at a deficit and the $10 million stabilization fund, set up 25 years ago to meet contingencies, would be dipped into to the extent of $400,000 this year.

Two-Fisted Art: An Intent Michael Hunter Switches Hands With Ease During Play Painting Session At Loyalist

Play Is Not Just A Child's Game at Loyalist College

Child's play is not so simple. Pastime, in fact, despite surface appearances, can be a serious business for children, an integral part of the individual's maturing process.

"People are becoming more aware of the fact that play is not just play per se, but a very involved process for children," says Betty Exelby.

It's an awareness she's now imparting to students on a regular basis.

Mrs. Exelby is supervisor of Loyalist College's early childhood education — a course designed to skill students working with younger children, and one which drew overwhelming response when announced last fall.

The program comes complete with its most important resource — children.

Youngsters of preschool age are part of the enrolment. In fact, the program is actually a complete nursery school, says Mrs. Exelby, permitting the students to work in a total education setting.

The course runs two years. After that the graduate must work a year in the field before becoming a teacher certified by the Early Childhood Education Association of Ontario.

However, the study process is not totally confined to a classroom setting. The program's students also work abroad in the community, becoming involved with various volunteer and school programs for youngsters.

The program also is attracting attention from the community itself, says Betty Exelby. Interested observers of its techniques include teachers, social workers and volunteers already active with community groups involving preschool youngsters.

In fact, she says, "the whole community seems most responsive."

The children who are the program's vital element are enrolled according to normal nursery school registration practices.

Enrolment fees are charged and the children divided between morning and afternoon classes. The morning classes run five days a week, the afternoon sessions three days.

Usually, most of the children come from families "who want to provide them with wider experiences."

Others are registered by working parents, or those on Canada Manpower retraining courses at the college.

When first announced, the course drew a heavy response, but students were interviewed to discover if they were "truly interested" in such work.

"It seems to be a popular course, not only at this college but elsewhere," says Betty Exelby.

Career opportunities for graduate play therapists include private nursery schools, community day-care centres, hospitals and various social projects.

As yet, it's a career that has attracted few men — one reason being that, as yet, salaries may not be high enough for a man with a family.

However, the presence of men in such programs, she says, is important for their father image.

Chores for the Day

The youngsters, involved in Loyalist College early childhood education program seem seriously intent on housekeeping project. But then, says program's supervisor, a child at play is engaged in a serious learning process.

Education Costs Are Issue

Observers Suggest Candidates Closing in on Bill Davis

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mill rates in municipalities across Ontario will begin going down within 18 months as education costs at elementary and secondary school levels become "stabilized," Education Minister William Davis said Tuesday night.

Mr. Davis, whose opponents for the leadership of Ontario's Progressive Conservatives had repeatedly hit at the high cost of education, warned, however, that "serious questions" have to be answered regarding post-secondary education.

He indicated that there the costs to taxpayers are likely to rise.

He was speaking to a meeting at Hamilton of five of the six candidates for the post that Premier John Robarts is relinquishing. About 300 delegates from 12 ridings attended.

Mr. Davis is widely acknowledged to be leading his opponents in the leadership race. However observers recently have argued his support could falter at the Feb. 10-12 Toronto convention which will choose the new permier

They say one of the best indications that Mr. Davis's organization is worried was the recruitment last week of William Gold, 34, a professional government consultant, to write speeches for their candidate.

What is said to worry the Davis organization is the nature of his support. Although he has the public commitments of a majority of the Conservative caucus and cabinet, this commitment does not seem to extend into outspoken or enthusiastic support at the grassroots level.

With his aggressive campaign Allan Lawrence has established himself in the eyes of most observers as a strong runner-up to Mr. Davis.

Tuesday night Mr. Lawrence was applauded eight times by the delegates as in a hard-hitting speech he attacked socialists, the federal government and a Conservative party establishment which thinks it can name the next leader and premier of Ontario.

Mr. Davis got three rounds of clapping.

Said Mr. Lawrence:

It is the grassroots and not the brass that really controls our party. Some would tell you otherwise. that the result of next week's election is already cut and dried. We know that is not so."

However, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch was applauded when he said Conservatives should not be "carried away on generalities and the rhetoric of poor people getting off their butts."

"There may be abuses of the system but we have a social conscience and a responsibility which we must honor."

Mr. Davis, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough and A. B. R. Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, made similar criticism of Mr. Lawrence's remarks.

Mr. Davis attacked federal creation of a Canada Development Corporation that will "sell to the Canadian people a number of Crown agencies they already own, agencies like Polymer Corp. and Eldorado."

Mr. McKeough and Mr. Welch suggested programs to combat pollution.

Mr. Welch suggested a council on environmental quality, made up of people from government, industry and citizen groups, advising government and industry on pollution matters. Mr. McKeough wanted a cabinet co-or- ings.
dinating committee, answering to the premier, with responsibility for all provincial pollution-abatement programs.

A. B. R. Lawrence said the Conservative party has been losing its share of the popular vote and if the "drift" continues it could be disastrous at the next provincial election.

Ottawa graduate student Robert Pharand, the sixth candidate, was not present. The candidates will speak from the same platform at Toronto on Thursday winding up a series of seven all-candidates, meet-

Area Planning Nominees Forwarded by Municipality

The council of Sidney Township, designated municipality for the new Quinte Area Planning Board, last night passed a bylaw incorporating the appointments from the nine municipalities included in the new planning area.

The bylaw will be forwarded to the minister of municipal affairs for Ontario.

At the Thursday night meeting of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board, Mayor J. Russell Scott found fault with the fact that some of the municipalities did not know the full details concerning the appointments to the Quinte Planning Board.

He questioned the lack of appointments and placed the onus on Sidney Township as the designated municipality, questioning their failure to announce appointments.

Reeve Jack Bush took exception to the Mayor's comments, suggesting that Dr. Scott had not known the full details.

"Our clerk is the only one who needs to know about the appointments. This is what is burning up Mayour Scott," the reeve chuckled.

Deputy Reeve Gordon Wilman suggested the "mayor is still burned up about the appointment of Sidney Township" as the designated municipality.

The reeve suggested that the subject of the appointments was "none of his business."

Listed as appointees to the planning area were received from Belleville on Jan. 6. They are: Mayor J. Russell Scott, Aldermen Paul Russell, Robin Jeffrey, Arnold Orr, Jack Ireland and Arthur Keegan.

Sidney Township appointees, received Jan. 14 are Reeve Jack Bush, Councillor Reg McCurdy and Horace W. Knight (3-year term).

Murray Township representatives, received Jan. 21, are Reeve Harry Lafferty and Councillor William R. W. Ellis.

Village of Stirling board appointees, received Jan. 21, are Reeve Robert Anderson and Donald W. Rodgers (2-year term).

Town of Trenton made their appointments Jan. 29. They are Councillor Paul Tripp, Dr. W. R. Patrick (2-year term) and Robert Carleton (3-year term).

Brighton village has appointed Reeve H. Norman Roberts and Earle Chatten (2-year term).

Appointments made last night and expected to arrive today from the village of Frankford were Reeve W. F. Rose and Leonard Reid (2-year term); townships of Thurlow, Reeve Horace Casey and Deputy Reeve Borden Forsythe, and Brighton township, Reeve Roy Chatten and Edward R. Mound (3-year term).

Belleville's Brown Rink in Second-round Consols' Draw

GUELPH (CP) — This city's hopes of winning the Ontario curling championship, which opens at the Guelph Curling Club today, rest on the broad shoulders of Cam Davidson, 39, and his crew of three 20-year-old university students.

"You might think there is a bit of a generation gap," said vice-skip Dean Patzer, "but out on the ice, age doesn't mean a thing."

The other two crew members are Jim Dempsey and Dave Kulka.

The first round of the 18-rink double - elimination championship begins at 1 p.m. today with four games. There is another round at 8 p.m., three rounds Thursday, two Friday and probably three Saturday, depending on how many rinks are still in contention.

Pre-tournament title favorites are Bruce Munro and Alfie Phillips, Jr., both of Toronto.

Phillips has been successful in the past having won the Ontario and Canadian championships in 1967.

Munro made the provincial finals the past two years but each time was knocked out by losing his first two games.

A business trip to Hawaii was to have prevented Ted Clarke of Toronto from skipping his rink in the playoffs but his company reconsidered his schedule and allowed him to return home in time for the start of the bonspiel.

Bill Creber, who skipped the rink last year before retiring, had agreed to take it over again after Clarke, formerly of Regina, skipped it into the provincial final.

Davidson, who started curling at his home at Ayr, Ont., when he was in school, skipped a rink in the 1958 provincial finals.

"I think we won one or two games," said the six-foot, 200-pound truck driver.

Patzer and Kulka are second-year marine biology students at the University of Guelph and Dempsey is in his second year of fish and wildlife.

The winner will represent Ontario at the Canadian championships at Quebec City March 1-5. A Northern Ontario rink will be named later.

The 1 p.m. draw has Bob Charlebois of Toronto playing John McCrae of Lindsay, Cam Lewis of St. Catharines against Tom Steen of Oshawa, Louis Turner of Elmvale, against Earl Hushagen of Toronto, and Davidson against Keith Forgues of Ottawa.

All games are 12 ends.

In today's second round, Dave Brown of Belleville plays Turner, Claude Rosborough of Newmarket, plays John Winford of Ottawa, Davidson faces Percy George of Wiarton, Jim Waite of St. Thomas plays Phillips, Munro faces Clarke, Hushagen meets Henry Hagey of Brantford, and Ron Tracey of Dundas plays Forgues.

Beliveau Still Shows Class Around Net

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A couple of class players with entirely different approaches to the game pulled Montreal Canadiens out of a jam Tuesday night for a 5-2 National Hockey League victory over Vancouver Canucks.

Jean Beliveau, in the twilight of a superb career but still a commanding figure for the Canadiens, scored twice as did John Ferguson, unofficial fight champion of the big leagues who has been in somewhat of a scoring slump since ending a brief retirement.

Beliveau, 39 and the Canadiens' all-time scoring leader with 1,143 points in 1,055 games, notched No. 14 of the season 36 seconds into the game and scored again early in the third period after Vancouver had wiped out a 3-0 Montreal lead with two second-period goals.

JEAN BELIVEAU

Lacking the classic moves of Beliveau, Ferguson makes up for it with a rugged style of play that has been invaluable to the fast-skating Canadiens in recent years.

Since joining the club seven years ago, Ferguson has not only logged plenty of time in the penalty box but has emerged as a respectable scorer.

He scored 48 goals in the two seasons before this one. But after retiring early in the season, he has had problems returning to form and his output Tuesday gave him six for the year.

Tonight, St. Louis Blues are in Toronto against the Maple Leafs, Chicago Black Hawks visit New York Rangers, Boston Bruins are hosts to Los Angeles Kings, Detroit Red Wings visit Minnesota North Stars and California Golden Seals meet the Penguins at Pittsburgh.

The Canadiens got some bad news Tuesday when it was learned that injured winger Claude Larose would be unable to rejoin the team during its western swing through Vancouver, Oakland and Los Angeles.

Larose, who suffered a severe concussion 10 days ago, said he still feels nauseous on occasion and vowed he'll wear a protective helmet for the rest of his career.

"You know that this is the first time in my life I have been knocked unconscious, completely out," said the 28-year-old native of Hearst, Ont. "It's not a nice feeling. . . ."

At the same time, the bone-graft surgery on defenceman Serge Savard's left leg, scheduled for Tuesday morning, was set back another 24 hours. No reason was given for the change.

Savard, who returned to the Canadiens' lineup Nov. 7 after being out since last March because of a multiple fracture to his left leg, broke the same leg Saturday in Montreal's 5-4 loss at home to Toronto.

Canadian Way?

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Winnipeg hockey school, which operates under the motto "learn to play the Canadian way," has signed Al Sparks, Canadian light-heavyweight boxing champion, to its roster of instructors.

But Jake Flemming, who operates the school, says there's nothing sinister about the move and that the reason for adding Sparks to a list of half a dozen National Hockey League players is because "boxing teaches balance, and hockey is all a matter of balance."

"This is not a fighting school."

Sparks will be mainly in charge of conditioning.

Europe Out of Snow

DENVER (AP) — The International Ski Federation World Cup commission has agreed to hold the fifth World Cup women's downhill races at Sugarloaf, Me., Feb. 18, the U.S. Ski Association announced here Tuesday.

The selection was attributed to a lack of snow in Europe and the cancellation of the women's downhill in the Arlberg Kandahar races in Murren, Switzerland.

BUFFALO (AP) — The Erie County legislature Tuesday rejected a proposal to seek new bids for construction of a domed sports stadium in suburban Lancaster. The proposed stadium originally was to have cost $50 million, but bids received last spring and summer totalled $72 million. Supporters of the revival said they had received a pledge from building-trades unions that the stadium could be built within the $50 million limit if new bids were taken immediately. The legislature, which next meets Feb. 16, is working against a 60-day deadline for action set by Ralph C. Wilson Jr., owner of the National Fooball League's Buffalo Bills. Wilson three weeks ago threatened to move the team to another city unless officials make a firm commitment on a replacement for the aging War Memorial Stadium.

DETROIT (AP) — Janet M. Wilson, 47, divorced wife of millionaire sportsman Ralph C. Wilson Jr., received a $2.5 million final divorce settlement Tuesday which court attaches said was the largest in Michigan history. Wilson, 51, owner of Buffalo Bills of the National Football League, a Topeka, Kan., television station, and Florida horse-racing stables, also agreed in the final divorce arrangement to give his wife their $140,000 home in suburban Grosse Point and $350,000 for her lawyer's fees. Although Mrs. Wilson relinquished all interests in the Bills as part of the settlement, Wilson agreed to give her two 50-yard line season tickets to Detroit Lions games. Frederick Buesser, lawyer for Mrs. Wilson, said she had specifically requested the Lions tickets.

TORONTO (CP) — Bobby Orr and Bev Boys, Canada's outstanding athletes in 1970, lead a parade of star performances to the head table for Thursday's sports celebrities dinner sponsored by the Ontario Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association. The $50-a-plate dinner, with all proceeds going to the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, launches the 1971 Easter Seal campaign.

London CFL Pitch En Route

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A spokesman for a group of business and professional men seeking a Canadian Football League franchise for London, reiterated the group's claim it will guarantee full repayment for funds borrowed from the city to build a 30,000-seat stadium.

Bob Harris, who last week said the group would approach CFL owners in Winnipeg Feb. 11 seeking the franchise, was replying to a recommendation by finance commissioner Orton Logan that the city not provide $3 million until the group proves its financial backing.

Mr. Harris said the group would put up any guarantee the city required-mortgage insurance, bonds, or otherwise-to insure full repayment of the money they want the city to borrow because it could get it at a lower rate than the group could.

Kingston's 5-3 Win Question of Appetite

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

KINGSTON — Last night's 5-3 Kingston senior hockey verdict over Belleville Mo-Hawks was largely a question of appetites.

The Aces were hungry for the puck, goals, and body contact after losing six of their first seven meetings with their eastern Ontario rivals.

The Mo-Hawks, on the other hand, continued on a low-calorie scoring diet until it was too late to alter the course the game had taken in the opening 40 minutes.

What the Acees accomplished in those first two periods were a 3-0 lead, on two goals from Rod Graham and one by Pat Driscoll; and a general attempt at intimidation of the Mo-Hawks in four separatee sparring tests.

None of the bouts, involving the Mo-Hawks' Greg Marchen, Lionel Botly, Ralph Plane and Les Colligan and Aces Graham (twice), Bob Olajos and Bill Burega amounted to much, but all offences were launched by Kingston players, which said something about the tone of the game.

Plane, Colligan, Olajos and Burega were still cooling their heels when George Godson started an apparent Mo-Hawk comeback with a pretty unassisted effort 35 seconds after the final period's opening faceoff.

Godson, who would have reached back home to Peterborough if his night's skating had been put in a straight line, couldn't do it all himself, but he gave it the old college try.

At the four-minute mark the little centre dug the puck away from the Kingston defence and handed Lorne O'Donnell a gift goal to narrow the Aces' edge to 3-2.

But then the Mo-Hawks started looking gift horses in the mouth.

GEORGE GODSON

While they went unpenalized throughout the final 20 minutes, the Mo-Hawks enjoyed a seven-minute stretch of manpower advantage after Kingston bad boy Pete Ford butt-ended Ray Johnston and drew a major and high-sticking minor on the play.

Kingston goalie Mike Lovett stopped everything the Mo-Hawk powerplay could muster until Bill Burega joined Ford in the penalty box and Al Ferguson blasted his 17th goal of the season on a screened point shot.

Ford, who along with Ken Reid and Ron Graham, formed the Aces' most effective line, had scored the eventual winning goal on a neat passing play from his linemates at 9.45.

Pat Driscoll's second goal of the night went into an empty Belleville net at 19.30 after the Mo-Hawks lifted goalie Bob Moon for an extra attacker.

Moon played the last two periods after the Aces bombed Steve Rexe with 15 first-period shots and Rod Graham charged the redhead twice when he strayed from his crease to clear the puck.

The two goals that beat the Belleville back-up were both one-on-one situations — Graham on a second-period breakaway, and Ford — uncovered to one side of the net.

Kingston delighted their 1,859 paid customers by winning their first Belleville game in four home-ice tries. They did it with three Napanee intermediate recruits in the lineup — winger Gary Harte, and defencemen Lee Paradise and John Hartwick.

The win vaulted the Aces into a fourth place tie with Oakville, one point ahead of the Mo-Hawks.

Fairways Climb Out on Playoff Limb

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Some hockey coaches have superstitions about black cats or grey fedoras, but Belleville Fairways mentor Floyd Crawford is more worried about chain saws at the moment.

The reason for Crawford's phobia is that the usually cautious pilot has placed himself firmly out on a limb and has three Eastern Ontario Junior B opponents hoping to do a hatchet job.

"We are going to win our next four games, and that's a Crawford after his team had dropped a tight 4-2 decision to the league leading Peterborough Lions in Belleville last night.

The loss left Belleville six points behind the third place Kingston Frontenacs and two ahead of the Cobourg Cougars. The Fairways have a game remaining with each of their competitors for the final pair of play-off positions, as well as two contests with the last plaec Trenton Golden Hawks.

Despite the fact that they were outshot 38-23 by the visiting Ontario Games champions, Belleville had a much greater margin of the play than the total indicated.

The game's turning point came in the third period with the Lions playing two men short. Belleville kept the puck in the Peterborough end for a minute and three seconds while enjoying the manpower advantage but were unable to push the puck past goalie Don McFadden.

The Fairways' best scoring opportunity during that span came when point man Terry Meagher rattled a shot off the goal post and blasted another drive that hit McFadden.

Seconds before McFadden had come up with a key save on Dave Smith, who was attempting to convert a Meagher rebound.

The Fairways utilized two Western Tire Juvenile all-stars for the game, with wingers Mike Geogan and Bill Bunnett seeing regular duty. "They were terrific. That's the only word you could use," said Crawford of the minor hockey replacements.

Danny Lupenette scored the only goal of the first period on a low 25-footer to give Belleville the lead, but Peterborough came back with tallies by Jim Johnston and D'Arcy Jenish to take the lead.

DOUG JAMES

After only 42 seconds of the third period left winger Doug James tied the score, stealing the puck from defenceman Rick Kemp and scooting in to beat McFadden with a backhand shot.

Both teams missed some good scoring chances in the final frame. Belleville's Rod Palmer backhanded a shot into McFadden's pads when left unchecked in front of the Peterborough goal and Ron Jury came up with a scintillating glove save on a labelled blue line drive by Dave Cooper.

Rick Nobes tallied what proved to be the winning goal at 15.37 of the final period digging the puck out from behind the Belleville net and jamming it past Jury.

The winners added their final goal when Jim Jones fired a long shot into the empty net after Jury had been lifted for a sixth attacker.

Defensively, Peter Ackerman rebounded from a head injury incurred Sunday played his usual outstanding effort.

The strong defensive showing by the Fairways was greatly aided by the team's fine backchecking, particularly the Dave Smith - Doug James - Mike Goegan combination, and some sharp netminding by Jury.

HAMILTON (CP) — Developer Nick Durbano said Tuesday plans for a $1-million downtown sports arena will be ready to go before board of control in a few weeks. Durbano said a site for the arena, which initially would seat 5,600, would be up to the city to determine. He said plans for developing the new arena hinge on his being able to sell the 50-year-old Forum which he purchased last year for about $400,000. Durbano is manager of Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, who play their home games at the Forum.

It was a big night for Rick Adelman and Portland Trail Blazers in the National Basketba'l Association. They upset Milwaukee Bucks 123-111. Adelman made three steals in the closing minutes to set up the Tuesday night heroics at Portland. At the end, the crowd of 9,040 gave the Trail Blazers a standing ovation for their first victory of the season over the Bucks. In other NBA action. New York Knicks turned back Cincinnati Royals 115-108, Philadelphia '76ers nipped Boston Celtics 108-115, Detroit Pistons shaded Baltimore Bullets 116-113, Chicago Bulls pounded Seattle SuperSonics 118-101, San Francisco Warriors edged Atlanta Hawks 101-99, Los Angeles Lakers crushed San Diego Rockets 133-105 and Cleveland Cavaliers humbled Buffalo Braves for the sixth straight time, 101-91.

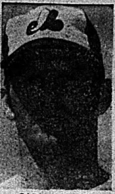
Arms Get Workout

Half a dozen pitchers made up the prize catch in baseball's signing sweepstakes Tuesday while a pair of sluggers indicated they might prove more difficult to land.

Montreal Expos' right-hander, Carl Morton, the National League's Rookie of the Year last season, signed his 1971 contract. So did pitchers Tom Seaver and Jerry Koosman of New York Mets, Jim Kaat and Luis Tiant of Minnesota Twins and Jim McGlothlin of Cincinnati Reds.

Morton, 27-year-old converted outfielder who posted an 18-11 record for Montreal in 1970, received a substantial raise over last year's estimated $15,000 salary.

Seaver, the 1969 NL Cy Young Award winer who slipped from 25 to 18 victories last year, accepted a slight boost in pay that put him close to the $90,000 bracket. Team-mate Koosman, 12-7 in 1970 after an early-season siege of arm trouble, signed for about $60,000.



CARL MORTON

Seaver, 18-12, was the National League's ERA (2.81) and strikeout king (283) last season.

Kaat won 14 of 24 decisions for the Twins. Tiant, plagued by arm problems, was 7-3.

McGlothlin, 14-11 for the Reds, signed with the NL champs along with two rookies.

Meanwhile, Cincinnati's Tony Perez and Reggie Jackson of Oakland Athletics, a pair of long-ball hitters playing for Santurce in the Puerto Rican Winter League, said they are angling for pay increases.

Perez, who swatted 42 homers and delivered 122 runs for Cincinnati, said he wants $110,000 for his signature.

One Who Knows Only Predicts Dozen

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Carl Morton, an 18-game wining pitcher for Montreal Expos of the National Baseball League last year, won't win more than 12 games this year says a man who knows his capabilities well, Expo catcher John Bateman.

In an interview Bateman made it clear that he wasn't trying to downgrade the ability of Morton, chosen rookie-of-the-year for the National Baseball League last season, but said he hasn't enougm experience as yet.

"He's three or four years away fro m being a complete pitcher," Bateman said. "His breaking stuff isn't good."

Bateman was in London to attend a sportsman's dinner to raise money for crippled children.

Judge Asked To Quit Trial

MONTREAL (CP) — Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet will rule Thursday on motions asking him to withdraw as presiding judge in the trials of five well-known Quebecers on seditious conspiracy charges arising from Quebec terrorism.

He heard argument on the motions Tuesday.

In another court, it took the whole day to select a third juror for the trial of Paul Rose on a charge of murdering Pierre Laporte, former Quebec labor minister kidnapped Oct. 10 and strangled a week later. Rose also faces a kidnapping charge.

Labor leader Michel Chartrand, lawyer Robert Lemieux, author Pierre Vallieres, teacher Charles Gagnon and Jacques Larue-Langlois, former CBC radio producer, have all told Mr. Justice Ouimet of Court of Queen's Bench he has preconceived opinions about them and cannot be impartial.

All five are also accused of membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec.

End Urged To Jailing Of Drunks

OTTAWA (CP) — All legislation making public drunkenness an offence should be repealed, a report to the Canadian Criminology and Corrections Association says.

Entitled Drain the Drunk Tank, the report proposes instead detoxication centres under health and welfare rather than law enforcement authority.

"Until now the criminal justice system has failed to provide any hope of improving the situation of the public inebriate," says the report, released Tuesday.

It estimates that close to 100,000 jail sentences a year are served for drunkenness, costing the public for detention alone $10 million to $20 million. Most of those picked up were chronic drunks

The report is the result of a one-year study by Real Jubinville, associate director of the association. A committee including a judge, a policeman, treatment professionals and former alcoholics helped compile it.

It recommends that police continue to pick up public drunks, but, instead of taking them to jail, should take them to "detoxication centres."

There they could be held a maximum of 24 hours. The next stage would be "post-detoxication care."

Public health and welfare authorities should establish the centres or buy services from private organizations.

Quebecois Voters May Back NDP

TORONTO (CP) — John Harney, a candidate for the federal leadership of the New Democratic Party, said Tuesday there could be no "formal relationship" between the NDP and the Parti Quebecois.

"I don't envisage any relationship in a formal sense between the PQ and the NDP, but I can certainly see a common ground in that we'll be getting many of the same voters," he said.

Mr. Harney was asked at a news conference about the possibility of a link between the two parties in an effort to capture Quebec votes in the next federal election.

He said the person who voted PQ in the last Quebec provincial election will be looking for an alternative in a federal election. The NDP would offer that alternative.

Mr. Harney also announced the formation of an Ontario 10-man campaign committee in support of his candidacy.

Head of the committee is Dr. Gordon Vichert, president of the Ontario NDP. Other members include Ald. Karl Jaffary of Toronto, Kealey Cummings, general vice-president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Elmer McVey, an executive of the United Steelworkers Union, and John Brewin, Ontario NDP treasurer.

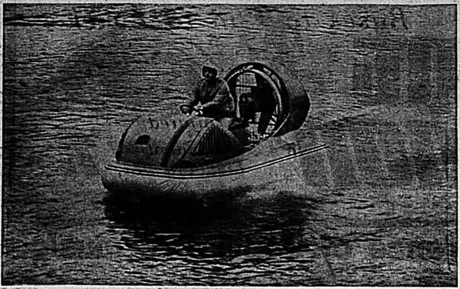
Belleville's 2nd Annual WINTER CARNIVAL



Hovercraft Is Newest Attraction

This Spectra I hovercraft is the newest attraction scheduled for the 1971 Belleville Winter Carnival. Pilot Henry Tom of Belleville will demonstrate the versatility of the machine at speeds of up to 50 miles per hour.

Hovercraft Added to Activities Of 2nd Annual Winter Carnival

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Chairman Jack Trembley yesterday announced that a hovercraft will be joining the festivities at Zwick's Island on the weekend for the second annual Belleville Winter Carnival.

The craft, a Spectra I manufactured in Ottawa at MHV Industries can reach speeds of 80 miles per hour on glare ice and from 40-50 mph on packed snow.

Pilot Henry Tom of Belleville will be giving demonstrations and according to Mr. Trembley, chairman of the Winter Carnival Committee, no rides will be offered but a full demonstration of the machines abilities will be offered.

The carnival chairman predicted that "with good weather, we can expect, in the neighborhood of 3,000 people on both days".

"The only thing that will mar the events will be the weather, but reports find us hopeful."

Bigger and better things were predicted for the 1972 carnival.

Mr. Trembley explained that "subject to next year's committee suggestions have been received asking for a carnival over a period of a week.

"Bowling, basketball, water polo and other indoor sporting events have been suggested."

He stated: "if the new arena had been ready this year, we could have had tournaments for the youngsters . . . it was a big disappointment."

Asked about the approximate cost Mr. Trembley predicted a total expenditure of between $1,800 and $2,000.

Funds are being provided from the sale of stocking toques, carnival badges and programs, proceeds from the snowmobile draw and supplementary donations from merchants and private sources.

He took the opportunity to thank all departments of the city for their "great help".

One of the major attractions for the carnival, the snowmobile races, were recently cancelled due to the cost of insurance for the event.

It is Mr. Trembley's hope that races might be included in next year's carnival.

For the third time in the past nine years a student from the Belleville General Hospital has been gold medalist at graduation exercises of the Ontario Society of Radiological Technicians (Eastern Section).

Robert Blewett, a graduating student from the radiological school at BGH received the Society's gold medal at Kingston on Saturday.

The medal is awarded each year to the member of the graduating class considered best to combine outstanding scholarship, technical ability and professional conduct.

Mr. Blewett was one of two students from Belleville in the 1970 graduating class. Miss Linda Wilson was the other class member from this city. Both are now on BGH staff.

There were 24 students in the graduating class including 10 from Kingston General Hospital, five from Hotel Dieu Hospital in Kingston, two each from Belleville and Cornwall, four from Pembroke and one from Lindsay.

As top student in the class, Mr. Blewett also received the Belleville General Hospital staff prize presented to the best all-round student in X-Ray technology from Belleville.

Certificates were presented by Dr. B. T. Jarzylo, chairman of the committee on certification for the Canadian Society of Radiological Technicians. Pins were presented by Dr. B. T. Colwell of Kingston, and prizes by Dr. N. D. Reid, radiologist at Belleville General Hospital.

Class valedictorian was Mrs. Cheryl Grills, Ross Memorial Hospital at Lindsay.

House Destroyed

Fire, last night, completely destroyed the Hillier Township home of Ronald Mastin and his family.

The frame, tenant house, located on Highway 33, south of Consecon, burned to the ground despite the efforts of the Wellington Fire Department.

A wood heater was believed to be responsible for starting the blaze.

Mr. Mastin carried no insurance on his household effects.

Owner of the home, Richard Baldwin, is reported to have partial coverage on the house.

A highlight and the opening event of the carnival will be the crowning of the 1971 Snow Queen at Centennial Secondary School at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. A total of 23 young women between the ages of 16 and 19 have entered the competition.

A torchlight parade at 7 p.m. downtown will open the actual festivities on Friday.

The clubs and committees will be meeting sometime in March to plan the 1972 event.

Oscar Voters Wooed Before Nominations In

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Academy members: your card admits you and a guest to any performance Monday through Thursday."

Such notices appeared in no less than 20 movie ads in recent Sunday issues of Los Angeles newspapers.

It's all part of the annual charade surrounding the awards—familiarly known as Oscars—of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

During a three-month period, the 2,986 voters of the Academy are wooed. Estimates are hard to come by, but it's safe to say that between $500,000 and $750,000 is spent annually on Oscar campaigning.

The public might wonder why such sums are spent to make friends and influence Oscar. The answer is simple: Oscar's smile can be truly golden.

Last year Midnight Cowboy earned $11 million in its first release. That, presumably, would have been all for the film. But then it won the Oscar as best picture. United Artists again released Midnight Cowboy and made an additional $5.3 million.

The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie affords another example.

Twentieth Century-Fox released the film to critical praise, but it failed to draw crowds. After Maggie Smith scored her surprise win as best actress of 1969, Miss Jean was again released and brought the company $1.9 million.

How do you conduct an Oscar campaign?

"First of all, you've got to get your picture seen by the Academy voters," says a veteran publicity man. "If the picture was released early in the year, you get it booked into a local theatre during the nomination period. Sometimes you have to guarantee the theatre against any losses.

"You arrange to have Academy members present their cards for admittance. You also set up showings of the picture at the Directors Guild and Academy theatres, where members attend free."

The common method of calling attention to pictures and performances is through trade paper ads. From late December through March Daily Variety and Hollywood Reporter thrive on them. The cost is about $1,000 for full pages in both papers. Some hard-sell films run double-page ads every day.

"Actors generally have to pay for their own ads, although they may appear to be sponsored by the studio," says the publicist. "A full-scale campaign can cost a performer $10,000."

This year the nominations close Feb. 12 and will be announced Feb. 22. The Oscar winners will be announced April 15.

Police Like Folksy TV Sheriff

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joe Higgins doesn't ride a horse, never has arrested anyone and doesn't foresee shooting any chicken thieves.

But as the burly character actor who plays the role of a southern-talking sheriff in a television commercial, Higgins is one of the most recognized law enforcement officers in the United States. More than 50 police and sheriffs organizations have made him a member.

Two years ago a car manufacturer—Dodge—was looking for a "Rod Steiger Heat of the Night-type" for a commercial and had run through 26 applicants before Higgins appeared for an audition.

"Most southerners are sensitive to a fake southern accent," says Bill Brinkley, 32, creator and writer of the commercial.

Wearing a 10-gallon hat, a badge and a pair of 25-year-old yellow-tinted skeet glasses, Higgins arrived at the set.

"Y'all looking for a sheriff?" he asked.

"That's him," one man shouted. Brinkley calls Higgins "a fantastic dialectician."

The commercials are still being made. Higgins has done seven for network use and several regional ones, earning around $50,000 a year.

Higgins is cast as a folksy, hard-nosed sheriff named J. W. He is 5 feet 10 and weighs 238 pounds, and talks with a drawl saying: "Boy, y'all in a heap o' trouble, y'all drive careful now, heah" and "How in the blue Susie are you?" The setting is Bristol, a bustling Tennessee-Virginia border town in the foothills of the Smokey Mountains.

Most law enforcement agencies enjoy Higgins's humor. As one Alabama official said: "In today's uptight world, if we don't have the ability to laugh at ourselves, our future is bleak."

But two departments—the Wisconsin Sheriff's Association and the Ohio highway patrol—threatened to stop buying the sponsor's cars if Higgins wasn't taken off the air.

They felt he was "demeaning law enforcement at a time when law enforcement has enough problems."

Things were smoothed out. Higgins now is a lifetime member of the Wisconsin Sheriff's Association and both departments are still buying the cars.

Higgins has been a night club entertainer, singer and actor for 30 years, the last 17 in Hollywood where he appeared in more than 650 television shows and movies. He was the blacksmith in the Rifleman series.

TV Took Public Into Apollo

NEW YORK (AP) — Television and radio made it possible for the public to participate vicariously in the difficulties aboard Apollo 14 during the anxious hours Sunday.

There were television pictures from the command module, some of them live, broadcast during frequent interruptions of regularly scheduled programs. They showed the lunar landing craft in close to docking position as the space vehicles raced toward the moon. Then, in close-up, we saw the successful manoeuvre.

Earlier the three networks, with skill born of long practice, had provided their usual well-organized informed coverage of the start of a moon mission. This part went smoothly since the news teams were prepared with filler material for possible delays.

Cape Kennedy weather conditions provided the first element of suspense, with some speculation about a long delay. Then the rocket soared into space, with some especially dramatic color pictures shot by a TV camera many miles down course from the launching site.

Addition of former astronauts to the network reporting teams —Walter Schirra once again on CBS, Allan Bean on NBC and Frank Borman on ABC—gave some extra authority to the coverage on lift-off. Unfortunately, none of them was still around to help when the networks were patching together their emergency coverage of the docking problem.

WILL STAR

Singer Barbara McNair is to co-star with Sammy Davis Jr., and Dyan Cannon in Speak No Evil to be filmed on the Isle of Capri.

Briefs Oppose Market Boards

WINNIPEG (CP) — Twenty briefs were presented to the Commons agriculture committee in bearings Tuesday; 20 briefs turned thumbs down on the proposed national farm product marketing legislation.

Victor Fulton, representing the Manitoba Stock Growers' Association, reversed the flow of questions when he asked the committee why the legislation had even been proposed since "no one wants it."

The stock growers' association was alone among the producer, consumer and marketing groups presenting briefs in rejecting completely the bill. The legislation includes provisions for national marketing agencies for certain agricultural groups as well as a national farm product marketing council.

Most organizations told the hearing, the first of four in Western Canada during the committee's cross-country tour, that the legislation would be acceptable with some amendments. They suggested changes to safeguard western interests. It should ensure producer control of the council, prevent production quotas from becoming themselves valuable, and to allow farmers recourse to the council in negotiating quotas.

Agriculture Minister Sam Uskiw of Manitoba said the marketing council should have equal representation from regions to prevent domination by one area.

He said production quotas, to be allocated under the act, must go to areas in relation to previous production.

Mr. Uskiw said any national marketing act must ensure "the one-Canada concept in terms of interprovincial trade."

A. M. Runciman, president of United Grain Growers, said the act can be interpreted as protection for eastern producers.

He said UGG feels the West's natural advantage in producing wheat and beef should not be negated by artificial barriers to larger eastern markets.

Manitoba Pool Elevators agreed, saying provisions of the act, allowing the cabinet to appoint the marketing council, would not prevent domination of eastern consuming areas by producers who look only to those areas.

The pool said the act must contain guarantees of "adequate representation to the surplus producing agricultural areas."

Mr. Runciman also told the committee the western producers survive on export markets. He said farmers must be allowed to produce as efficiently as possible for these markets.

"The council should be controlled by farmers."

He said the act in its present form could lead to increased food prices, limited export growth, migration to eastern production areas, further interprovincial trade restrictions and international retaliation for import restrictions.

Ontario and Quebec producers, "with a potential captive market of some 12 million people," are understandably agreeable to the act, he said.

The National Farmers Union and other producer groups cited fear that quotas would become valuable as prime objections to the act.

Survey Shows Layoffs Swell Jobless Totals

By IRVING C. WHYNOT
Canadian Press Business Editor

Where do Canada's half million unemployed come from?

A Nova Scotia plant making push-button tuners for car radios cuts its staff by one-third. Two hundred are left without jobs.

A pet food company closes an uneconomic operation in Ontario and 76 are left jobless.

A mine in northern Alberta announces plans to lay off 78 workers.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows scores of scattered closings and work-force reductions in a wide range of industrial operations such as these.

In total, they contribute heavily to the 538,000 workers without jobs in December, as reported on a seasonally-adjusted basis by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Business lagged during 1970 as the federal government fought inflation and many companies found themselves caught in a squeeze on profits.

Some cut staffs or reduced product lines. Others closed completely.

All told, more than 2,200 businesses failed in Canada during 1970 compared with 1,860 a year earlier. It was the highest failure total since 1966.

Dun and Bradstreet credit-reporting service says the collapsed firms left liabilities of $264.9 million, up from the previous high of $215.7 million in 1966. In December alone, failures totalled 200, up 18 per cent from December of 1969.

Some workers saved their jobs by agreeing to wage freezes for a year or more. Two recent such settlements in Ontario involved about 1,500 workers.

A University of Toronto professor says the wage-freeze deal may be requested by still more financially-troubled companies as a way out of their problems. Labor unions are wary that it could be the start of a trend.

Some industries were hit harder than others. Generally, the textile, chemical, shoe, electronic and aerospace industries were among those reporting work-force reductions.

Across the country, these layoffs and reductions are samples:

General Instruments of Canada Ltd. at Sydney, N.S., reduced its work force to 400 from 600. The company said the reduction would allow management to seek solutions to productivity and quality problems.

Buckingham Mills Ltd. at Springhill, N.S., laid off 64 employees due to a slowdown in orders in the carpet industry. But an official said it is expected to go back into full production this week.

A Point Edward, N.S., plant making abrasive ore and grains for grinding wheels and sandpaper went out of business because of high costs and slow sales.

Canadian Marconi Co. laid off about 1,500 in 1970 and has no idea when they can be rehired. Northern Electric Co. laid off 800 or more in Ontario and Quebec and RCA Ltd. laid off 400, mainly in Montreal.

About 1,500 have been laid off in the pulp and paper industry in Quebec, about 10 per cent of the entire force represented by two major unions.

Canadair Ltd. of Montreal says the Canadian areospace industry is having a rough time. From January, 1970, to Feb. 1 this year it laid off 3,900 people.

Clif Fastener Corp., a Montreal zipper manufacturer, announced intentions to lock out 200 union workers after the union raised its wage demands, and then rehired all 200 the next day on a non-union contract.

CIL said it fared better than most chemical firms because it is diversified. It closed a paint plant in Toronto, although it plans to open another one to replace it.

DuPont of Canada Ltd. laid off 574 workers in its Kingston, Ont., plant and 269 at Maitland, Ont. Both plants are involved with nylon manufacturing and a company spokesman says as far as he can see the textile industry is still in trouble.

Massey-Ferguson Ltd. reports a Canadian work force of about 2,000, down from about 4,500 a few years ago. A major plant at Brantford, Ont., which normally employed 1,100 went through a series of staff reductions, extended vacations and production shifts. It now employs about 600.

At least one grocery supermarket chain cut its staff after outbreak of a discount war. Some brokerage houses cut staff and reduced salaries of partners during the slow market period of 1970.

Manitoba hasn't been hard hit but Art Coulter, executive secretary of the Manitoba Federation of Labor, says a couple of steel construction and fabricating firms "have been down somewhat."

Saskatchewan labor leaders report no major shutdowns or reductions but there is some softness in the construction industry, highly seasonal at the best of times.

In Alberta, about 180 of 680 workers in three mobile-home plants have been laid off "because of economic conditions." A labor spokesman says the steel fabricating industry has been "hard hit with some reducing staff by 50 per cent." Chemcell laid off 110 of its more than 1,000 employees last fall and Sherritt Gordon Mines Ltd. at Fort Saskatchewan announced plans to lay off 78 of its 1,100 workers.

In British Columbia, there have been heavy cuts in the forestry and construction industries, blamed mainly on th slow economy and soft expo markets for lumber.

Conditions in the forestr dustry change rapidly bu labor leader estimates there a between 8,000 and 10,000 35,000 members of the big Va couver local of Internation Woodworkers of America out work.

The manufacturing end of th forestry business reports abou 1,000 unemployed out of a wor force of 8,000. Some firms hav cut to two shifts instead three.

B.C. Forest Products Ltd. cu a shift from its Point Ellice an Victoria plants, affecting clos to 250 men. MacMillan Bloede Ltd. cut one shift of 160 men a Vancouver plant.

Two plants employing 12 men closed permanently in De cember, less than six m after the IWA won a co calling for wage increases.

Nalos Lumber Ltd., employing 200 men, closed late las year but is expected to reope about March if lumber deman improves.

Two cases in Ontario wher companies asked their unions t accept wage freezes caught th attention of labor leaders.

Canadian Acme Screw and Gear Ltd. told its 870 workers the plant would close unless they agreed to a freeze. The employees accepted an 18-month extension of their old contract.

Employees of Dunlop Canada Ltd. at Whitby accepted a one-year freeze of their salaries after union officers were allowed to examine the company's books. The company originally asked its 750 em ees to accept a 10-per-cent cut, hinting that it might have to shut down the plant or lay off some workers if something couldn't be worked out.

Some union leaders saw this sort of company request as a "new national pastime" but thee were no reports of similar situations across the country.

Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said the two Ontario situations "can't be magnified into a pattern."

He suggested that only a weak and ineffectual union could be bluffed into accepting a pay freeze or wage cut without knowing for sure that the only alternative was a shutdown of a plant.

Munitions Plant Blast Kills 24

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — A worker injured in an explosion at a munitions-making plant that killed 24 persons Wednesday says she saw fire before the blast

Lillie Mae Rainey, 18, one of the 34 in hospital with injuries, said: "There was all this fire and a loud blast, and everything started falling—boulders, the roof and everything around us."

Her statement provided a clue for representatives of the Thiokol Chemical Corp., army and FBI who probed the ruins of the Thiokol complex in the Georgia marshlands seeking the cause of the blast.

Apollo Whirls Around Moon

HOUSTON (AP) — The three Apollo 14 astronauts moved into a "roller coaster" orbit around the moon today, swooping within eight miles of jagged mountain peaks as they prepared to land Friday in the lunar highlands.

"We're here!" shouted commander Alan Shepard as Apollo 14 skimmed over the craggy landscape at the low point of the orbit. "I think we can make it down from here tomorrow."

"It's an unusual sensation flying this low," commented Edgar Mitchell.

As Shepard, Mitchell and Stuart Roosa circled the moon, they were struck by its desolate beauty, describing it as "wild," "fantastic," "stark," and "incredible."

Shepard and Mitchell could hardly wait to become the fifth and sixth humans to set foot on the surface to further explore this new but ancient world.

The stage was set for another great lunar adventure when the astronauts fired the command ship Kitty Hawk's engine on the backside of the moon at 2 a.m. EST to zip into an initial orbit 67 to 195 miles high.

Four hours later, they again fired the engine to shift into a path 11 to 68 miles above the surface, the closest approach yet by an Apollo command ship. The lunar module Antares still was hooked to its nose.

While the low point was 11 miles, Mission Control reported that some mountain peaks over which Apollo 14 passed reached three miles above the surface. Thus, the distance between spaceship and landscape was only about eight miles at times.

On Apollos 11 and 12, the lunar ships were released at altitudes above 65 miles. Antares will be cast off late tonight at the 11-mile altitude in a manoeuvre intended to improve landing accuracy and to give the astronauts extra fuel to use in the search for a smooth touchdown site.

Shepard and Mitchell said before the flight they expected to experience the sensation of a roller coaster ride as they hurtled downward in the low orbit, with the rugged features of the moon seemingly rushing up to meet them.

The astronauts were exuberant after attaining the initial orbit.

"Wow, this is really a wild place up here!" exclaimed Shepard. As they passed over the Fra Mauro landing site, Mitchell said: "It sure looks rough down there. As interesting as this is from orbit, it just whets your appetite to get down there."

"Fantastic!" said Roosa. "You're not going to believe this. It looks just like the map."

As Apollo 14 swooped to the 11-mile altitude on the front side of the moon, Mitchell reported the features were much sharper close up.

"Out my right window there are some barren rocks which look like they have a nice soft blanket on them," he reported. "They look very harsh."

The rocket burst that shot them into the first orbit occurred behind the darkside of the moon, out of radio contact. It was not until 20 minutes later when Apollo 14 reappeared around the edge of the moon that orbit was confirmed.

Shepard's voice broke the silence with a subdued: "We had an extremely fine burn."

Thrust Began Last Week

SAIGON (CP) — The United States and South Vietnam waged one of their biggest campaigns of the Vietnam war today with a combined force of nearly 50,000 men but they met little opposition.

Nearly 30,000 South Vietnamese and American troops were committed to the front near Laos and another 11,000 South Vietnamese moved in a new thrust into Cambodia today.

So far it was a two-front operation, with 9,000 American troops sweeping the jungle in the northwest corner of South Vietnam, 20,000 Saigon troops poised in that area for a possible thrust into Laos, and a total of 20,000 South Vietnamese advancing through Cambodian territory west and northwest of Saigon.

U.S. officials said no U.S. ground troops were in Cambodia or Laos. But American warplanes were giving full support to the Saigon troops in Cambodia, and U.S. bombers kept up their pounding of North Vietnamese supply routes through southern Laos.

The South Vietnamese operation in Cambodia began a week ago.

Little fighting was reported so far. South Vietnamese headquarters said there was light contact today in the Cambodian drive, with 11 Communist and one South Vietnamese soldier killed and seven South Vietnamese wounded.

Details of the large campaign came to light as the U.S. command lifted a six-day news blackout on the northern portion of the operation, including reopening of the abandoned U.S. marine combat base at Khe Sanh.

South Vietnamese military headquarters in Saigon said it had no information that its forces had advanced into Laos to strike at North Vietnamese troops and supplies moving down the Ho Chi Minh trail. But a Communist Laotian spokesman in Vientiane claimed more than 3,000 Saigon troops had crossed the border, and heavy

Rocket Hits Moon

HOUSTON (AP) — While scientists on earth watched and listened, Apollo 14's spent booster crashed into the moon today, sending a shudder through the lunar crust detected by a seismometer erected on the Apollo 12 mission.

The signals transmitted to Mission Control by the Apollo 12 instrument were similar to seismic signals recorded when the spent booster stage from Apollo 13 crashed 10 months ago.

"It's significant in that we are getting the same pattern for all the things that are happening on the moon whether they're meteorite impacts, natural events or made made," said Dr. D. W. Strangeway, chief of the geophysical science branch of the Manned Spacecraft Centre.

This indicates the moon's crust is probably uniform in its makeup over large areas.

The S-4B booster, one of the stages which rocketed astrnauts Alan Shepard, Edgar Mitchell and Stuart Roosa away from the earth Sunday then followed them toward the moon, crashed at 2:40 a.m. EST about 115 miles south-southwest of the Apollo 12 landing site in the Ocean of Storms.

Scientists estimated it dug a crater 30 feet deep and 180 feet wide with an impact equivalent to exploding 11 tons of TNT.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A storm centre moving northeastward has spread snow into parts of southern and western Ontario. As the storm moves across the central Great Lakes Friday the snow in southern regions will change to rain while snow will spread across all northern regions by early Friday. Warm air ahead of the storm centre will raise temperatures this afternoon to between 25 and 35 in southern Ontario. Further warming Friday will give maximum temperatures in the south between 35 and 45.

British Government Takes Over Vital Rolls-Royce Assets

LONDON (AP) — The British government announced today it will take over assets of Rolls-Royce essential for national defence and international co-operation. The giant auto and aerospace company had announced earlier it was going into receivership

Despite the announcement that it intended to continue Rolls-Royce's international ties, the government specifically left in doubt the future of the company's multi-million dollar stake in America's Lockheed Tristar jetliner project.

"The government has no liability in respect of the contract between Rolls-Royce and Lockheed," said Aviation Supply Minister Frederick Corfield told Parliament.

"The government will explore with the receiver the future of the RB-211, (Tristar engine)."

Corfield said the British government will enter urgent discussions with the U.S. government and Lockheed on the Tristar, for which Rolls-Royce contracted to build 600 engines—a tieup which the company today blamed for its financial crash.

The announcement appeared to ensure Britain will continue to share in the Anglo-French Concorde supersonic airliner project. Rolls-Royce is building the Concorde's engines.

It also cleared the way for continued Rolls-Royce involvement in such European military projects as the Anglo-French Jaguar strike aircraft and Europe's multi-role combat strike aircraft for the air forces of Britain, France, Germany and Italy.

In announcing that it planned to go into receivership, the company named accountant E. Ruper Nicholson the receiver. "My objective will be to preserve as much as I can," he told reporters.

Nicholson now takes over control of the company and decides its future.

The announcement sent a shock wave through the towns of Derby and Bristol, which together provide 35,000 of the company's 90,000 work force.

A statement by the company's board of directors said the loss of resources committed to developing engines for the American Lockheed Tristar jetliner "are on such a scale that they are likely to exceed the net tangible assets of the company."

It added that under the circumstances it cannot go on with the Tristar engine development, thus incurring heavy termination costs.

Trading in the company's stock was halted on the London Stock Exchange today at the company's request.

Rolls-Royce said "whatever arrangements are to be made" there will be substantial layoffs among its 90,000-man force.

The company is the Western world's third largest manufacturer of aircraft engines, after Pratt and Whitney and General Electric.

Prime Minister Heath's cabinet held an emergency meeting Wednesday night to discuss the finances of the firm, which is a symbol of British engineering skill.

The company's crisis is the result of its agreement to develop and deliver 600 RB-211 engines for the Lockheed Tristar at a fixed price. Costs soared and Rolls-Royce announced expected losses on the deal of £45 million $112.5 million.

Rolls-Royce said it had discussed the implications of the receivership with the government. Rolls-Royce is heavily tied up with important projects in Britain's defence program.

Rolls - Royce, in addition to making what is considered the best automobile in the world, supplies engines for 110 airlines and 32 armed forces, nuclear submarine reactor plants, rocket power plants, diesel engines for road rail and water transport in 100 countries and gasoline engines.

Airplane engines account for almost 80 per cent of its business.

Going Up -- One New Industrial Sign

Mobil Pilot Plant Is Started

Officials this morning dug a pathway through a snowdrift for the groundbreaking ceremony heralding the arrival of Mobil Plastics, a division of Mobil Oil Canada, as the newest industry in Belleville's northeast industrial park.

Mayor J. Russell Scott sledged the stake into the ground and offered the "best wishes of a grateful community" to Michael Foy, project manager for Mobil's pilot plant, and Bert Taylor, vice-president and treasurer of Mobil Oil of Canada.

Construction of the $1.5 million pilot plant is expected to begin immediately with the production of plastic packaging film under way by late summer of this year.

The Belleville plant, Mobil's first plastics facility in Canada, is expected to employ 30 men and women at first. The company is optimistic concerning future expansion.

Ald. Gerald Joyce, industrial commissioner, dated Mobil's interest in a Belleville site to early last summer.

Interest in the Mobil project came from private business sources, not from any association from provincial government industrial incentive loans.

The 18,000-square foot plastic packaging plant, situated on an 18-acre site east of the present Allied Chemical plant was officially welcomed as a member of the industrial park with inclusion of their company name on the new Industrial Park sign at the corner of Cannifton Road and Adam Street.

Cambodia Invaded

fighting was under way in southeastern Laos.

The United States threw the full weight of its air power and logistics support into the operations.

Troops from three U.S. divisions were on the hunt for Communist supply buildups and infiltration routes reported in the northern quarter of South Vietnam.

The Ho Chi Min trail, down which Hanoi sends men and supplies into South Vietnam, runs a few miles west of advanced American positions on the Laotian border.

Although U.S. officials in Washington and Saigon said there was a major North Vietnamese buildup of supplies in the Laotian panhandle and the adjacent northwestern corner of South Vietnam, Western military sources in the Laotian capital said they knew of no unusual buildup.

American troops have dug in again at Khe Sanh, 425 miles northwest of Saigon, on a bleak plateau of sodden red loam surrounded by mountains.

The name Khe Sanh was etched indelibly on public memory in early 1968 when North Vietnamese troops laid siege to it for 77 days with heavy losses to both the U.S. marines holding it and the two North Vietnamese divisions attacking it. It was finally abandoned in July, 1968.

The main thrust to date has been spearheaded by the 1st Brigade of the U.S. 5th Division (mechanized) whose tanks have opened the headquarters at Quang Tri, 420 miles northeast of Saigon

Urban Renewal's Contents Known Feb. 12—Hopefully

Belleville city council won't get to see recommendations coming out of the city's $82,000 urban renewal study until some time after the middle of February.

And City Manager J. R. Reynolds says the report's recommendations on the study done by Toronto consulting engineers Procter, Redfern, Bowesfield and Bacon could be delayed much later than the February date.

"It all depends on what happens on Feb. 12," said Mr. Reynolds.

Feb. 12 is the date when the Toronto engineering firm will present their conceptual report to the co-ordinating committee consisting of representatives from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the Federal Government Planning Branch. Mr. Reynolds will sit in at the meeting as the city's representative.

"I don't know what will happen at the meeting — the committee might not accept the report and could ask for changes," the city manager said.

Following the Feb. 12 meeting if there are no unforeseen circumstances committee members will report back to their respective headquarters with Mr. Reynolds to report to city council.

But regardless of the acceptance of the conceptual report, there is little likelihood that any costly urban renewal project will be undertaken by the city in the near future.

Mr. Reynolds says there are no government funds currently available for urban renewal projects and any program approved would have to be carried out at city expense.

Under the former program approved urban renewal projects were subsidized 50 per cent by the federal government and 25 per cent by the provincial government.

However, Mr. Reynolds feels there could be some facets recommended in the report which the city might proceed with on its own.

He says the traffic surveys to be included in the report will be of value to the city in coming to a decision on its north-south arterial roadway problems.

Mr. Reynolds said the city would get its money's worth out of the report.

The city's share of the $82,000 cost of the urban renewal study is approximately $19,000, the balance being paid by the two senior governments.

Authorization for the urban renewal study was given by the senior governments prior to federal and provincial assistance for such projects being suspended.

No Action Taken On Condominiums

TRENTON (Staff) — A Toronto firm, Sack Construction Ltd., proposes to build 63 units of condominium townhousing in northeast Trenton this spring.

Speaking for Sack, Sam Diamond of Toronto, told the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board last night "this type of development has come on quite strong in Toronto and other metro areas". The board took no action on the proposal.

The planned townhouse blocks would be built on a 4½-acre site east of Sidney St. opposite Alfred St. Entrance to the property would be through a right-of-way between houses on Sidney.

Planning board member Mrs. Harriet Simmons, asked if there would be "only one little entrance".

"This is standard for such a development," Mr. Diamond told her.

Member Paul Tripp expressed concern over the nature of soil in the area and asked that it be tested adequately before building begins.

Mr. Diamond agreed that the soil needed careful examination but contended "this type of development (row house units) would be best suited on that kind of property".

Units built by Sack would be approximately 1,050 sq. ft., and finished in brick veneer and wood, Mr. Diamond said, adding that each unit would sell for about $16,000. On-site parking would be provided in a lot for 79 cars.

Maintenance of the condominium park would be in the hands of a management committee of homeowners but the developer "would stay on for five years or so to help them out" Mr. Diamond explained. He said Sack would not want to have streets handed over to the town.

Upkeep of the commune would be borne by a monthly fee levied against owners by their management committee. Its responsibilities would include securing snow removal and garbage collection for the property owners.

"We do not want regular subdivision procedure" Mr. Diamond told the planning board. A regular subdivision agreement would prevent building of many units on the site because of rigid road pattern, we could not get two rows (condominium blocks) in and there would be a lot of waste space" he concluded.

Ameliasburg Is Host To Volunteer Firemen

AMELIASBURG — Visiting firemen from 15 Quinte centres experienced Ameliasburg hospitality in generous proportions here last night.

Township firemen at the end of business proceedings transformed one side of the new firehall into a virtual horn of plenty to the delight of all present. The special effort was the way Ameliasburg showed appreciation to other members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Mutual Aid Association they entertained for the first time since establishing a volunteer department in the township.

Guest speaker Gerald Brennan of Belleville explained the possibility of maintaining insurance rates by reducing the cost of firefighting and salvage work that follows.

"Minimum danger left for the clean-up afterwards reflects as much a part of firefighting as putting out the fire," he said.

Centres represented included Belleville, Batawa, Trenton, Stirling, Bloomfield, Wellington, Frankford, Picton, Tweed, Marmora, Madoc, Thurlow, Sidney, Marmora and Rawdon townships.

Five-store Plaza Endorsed By Trenton Planning Board

TRENTON (Staff) — The Trenton and Suburban Planning Board decided last night to seek council's approval for a five-store shopping plaza to be built on Sidney Street at Barbara.

Initially, the developer, Sidney Homes Corp., proposed construction of a 10-store centre to serve subdivisions springing up in the area but the board rejected plans for this.

It featured apartments over each store and the planning board requested these be left out and the building be only one storey high.

Jerome Shipley, Markham barrister and principal of Sidney Homes, told the board last night that he had "exhausted" himself "trying to come up with plans" but he managed a new one — a two-storey complex, five street level stores with six apartments on a second floor.

He said this was superior to any one storey option and "it would be one of the necest developments in the community . . . the ultimate for this area". It will feature decorative outdoor lighting that he said is fit "for millionaires".

Expansion of the plaza to the south was a possibility for the future, Mr. Shipley indicated. For the porposed five-store unit, he asked only that the board allow flexibility in the fixing of internal partitions.

Referring to the possibility partitions might be fixed according to the draft plan, he said "to handcuff us to such a thing would be absurd".

In agreeing with the new plan in principle, the planning board stipulated the project contain at least four stores, that none be used for manufacturing and that each apartment contain only one bedroom. The board told Mr. Shipley expansion of the plaza to include more stores in the future appeared "unwarranted".

HALSEY — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother Rosina Halsey who passed away two years ago today, Feb. 4, 1969.

We do not need a special day,
To bring you to our mind,
For the days we do not think of you,
Are very hard to find.
If all this world were ours to give,
We'd give it, yes, and more,
To see the face of mother dear,
Come smiling through the door.
—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by her daughter Flossie and son-in-law Allan.

DAVIDSON — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother Julia, who passed away Feb. 4, 1964.

Quietly remembered through all the years,
With silent thoughts and unseen tears.
—Always lovingly remembered by the family and grandchildren.

SWEET — In loving memory of my dear husband Erastus Sweet, who passed away Feb. 4, 1963.

Since you've gone first and I remain,
One thing I'd have you do,
Walk slowly down the path of death,
For soon I'll follow you.
I want to know each step you take,
That I may walk the same,
For some day down that lonely road,
You'll hear me call your name.
—Never forgotten by his loving wife Ina Sweet.

SAMAIN — In loving memory of my father who passed away Feb. 4, 1970.

Within our hearts he liveth still.
—Ever remembered by son [illegible] and family.

SAMAIN — In loving memory of my dear father who passed away Feb. 4, 1970.

Of the loss of one we loved so well,
While he sleeps a peaceful sleep,
His memory we shall always keep.
—Never forgotten by daughter Peggy and son Norm.

SAMAIN, Joseph — In loving memory of a dear dad who passed away one year ago today Feb. 4, 1970.

You suffered with courage,
We knew not your pain,

God took you home,
To His garden to rest.
It is true what they say,
He takes only the best.
—Sadly missed by daughter Dolly son-in-law Shud.

SAMAIN — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Joe Samain who passed away one year ago today, Feb. 4th, 1970.

You didn't say goodbye to us,
Perhaps it's just as well,
We never could have said goodbye
To one we loved so well.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by daughter Gladys, Norman and granddaughter Carol Ann and family.

BARNHARDT — In loving memory of our dear grandmother Mrs. Mary Barnhardt who passed away Feb. 4th, 1963.

Wildlife Caterer

Suburban growth doesn't necessarily eliminate all wildlife — not if someone like Doug Burns is around. A Harris Crescent householder, Mr. Burns years ago turned his backyard into a daily feeding station. The result has made it a rendezvous several times a day for rabbits, squirrels, bluejays, red cardinals and a myriad of other small wildlife species.

Mayor Scott Claims Superior Electric Offered Industrial Land for Sale

Mayor J. Russell Scott claimed last night at the annual meeting of the Belleville Industrial Commission that land owned by American Superior Electric Co. Ltd. in the northeast industrial park has been offered for sale.

He contended Superior had recently offered five acres of their land to Marathon Realties for a total of $30,000 per acre. Marathon Realties is a subdivision of Canadian Pacific Railways and handles their property holdings.

Industrial Commissioner Gerald Joyce stated this morning: "I personally phoned Mr. Summerville (manager of Superior Electric) and asked if they were selling property and he said emphatically not."

"Every time they were contacted through the Industrial Commission, they have said their land was not for sale," said Mr. Joyce.

Dr. Scott commented on what he called the "significance" of Superior's recent announcement of their curtailment of operations.

He explained that "up to five years after purchase, if they offer the property for sale, they must offer it to the city at the same price they paid for it, plus costs.

"After that they can sell to anybody.

"It's obvious that they've dragged it on . . . the termination of the five-year covenant is not too far off," he said.

The mayor stated that with the five-year covenant clause expiring, "they could sell without a kickback to the city."

According to the mayor, Superior located in Belleville shortly before a municipal election and offered employment for more than 65.

Ald. Joyce informed the Intelligencer this morning that: "the Industrial Commission was told the other day that they (Superior) would have two employees in their plant which will become a warehouse operation . . . if anything."

He remarked that similar clauses are written into contracts concerning sale of city - owned land for industrial use.

"There's no need for industry to have more land than they need . . . industrial prospects have expressed interest in this choice land (owned by Superior) but they have said their land was not for sale," he concluded.

Superior Electric manager A. B. Summerville offered "no comment" this morning regarding a possible sale of their property.

Ald. Joyce Re-elected Chairman

Ald. Gerald Joyce, 1970 Belleville Industrial Commission chairman, and Bruce Nixon, vice-chairman, were re-elected by acclamation at last night's annual meeting

Mayor J. Russell Scott, Ald Joyce and Ald. Ben Corke, are city representatives to the board and will serve for the 1971 season.

Elected to the board of directors were Bruce Nixon, Bruce Curtis, Ken Soden, George Zegouras, Jim Driscoll and Jim Marker.

The only new member of the board is Mr. Zegouras who replaces Dr. J. Hartt.

Ald. Joyce expressed appreciation for the interest shown by the 25 members of the commission.

"You stick out in your presence here," he said.

"Those of you who will be offering yourselves for service on the 1971 directorate have an important part to play. You must have a positive attitude. We must continue the enthusiastic course we have been following.

"A city must want new investment to deserve it. New people must know they are welcome here."

He concluded his report by stating that "in 1970 we broke the construction record in Belleville. "Building permits ran to 15 million dollars. It was the first time in our history."

Industrial Expansion Said Excellent for 1971

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

The prospect for industrial and commercial expansion in 1971 "is excellet" said Ald. Gerald Joyce, chairman of the Belleville Industrial Commission.

In his annual report, tabled last night, the re-elected chairman stated that "we currently have some 17 open files."

He indicated that "Belleville has a good chance of landing at least two of the five prospects that have eliminated many other cities.

"Two companies have employee requirements of 250 each."

"I'm satisfied that we get more people out of metro communities; they want to get out of smoky areas to a nice, clean atmosphere."

He informed the commission that a letter of intent had been received from city council regarding a new industrial prospect that would reach a decision about locating by the end of February.

"This plant would be located on city property on Dussek Street," he reported.

He stated last night that "council has provided funds for the purchase of two more properties in the north east Industrial Park.

"These two parcels contain 138 acres with a total purchase price of $198,600 . . . the new sewer program service will be available to these sites.

Price of land has played an important role in attracting industry. Ald. Joyce said that the "attractive price" of between $1,500 and $3,000 per acre has been provided by the city. A suitable site "has been very elementary in attracting industry."

Philip Ends Short Visit At Base

A small crowd of forces personnel and dependents gathered to greet the prince's RAF Andover when it arrived here at 5:25 p.m. Wednesday, 15 minutes ahead of schedule.

The Prince will travel by the royal yacht Britannia from Freeport to Panama, through the canal and down to Commonwealth islands in the south Pacific. He will preside at celebrations marking the 50th anniversary of the Royal Australian Air Force before returning to Britain in April.

Madoc School Seeks Spirit With Leadership Course

It takes more than firm control and a rulebook to run a large modern secondary school.

Unless the students themselves take a hand in running things, the institution falls apart into fragmented groups — or the roof blows off.

But the burden of leadership falls heavily on young shoulders unless some formal training is added to bolster the load.

For Centre Hastings Secondary School students, a leadership training course gets underway today at the Ontario Forest Technical School at Dorset. Students involved in school government, or who are prefects or have other leadership roles in the school will spend a long weekend away from the school studying the most effective ways to fill their roles.

Co-operating in the weekend course are the staff of CHSS, personnel from the department of education and the youth and recreation branch of the department.

Centre Hastings is unique among county secondary schools in the growing pains it has experienced this year. The new addition opened in September almost doubled the size of the school and brought together students from the closed high school in Tweed and those who had been accommodated in the Madoc armories while construction was going on.

Earlier, the school had experienced an infusion of new students when Marmora and Stirling-Rawson high schools were closed.

Melding over 1,000 students from all points in the wide geographic area of Centre Hastings into a unified whole has depended largely, this year, on the student leaders.

The importance and complexity of the task has been recognized by the producers of education television. Film crews will be recording the weekend course at Dorset and wil go to CHSS March 4 to do further filming. The results are expected to be shown on the TV program Chalkdust.

Patrick Heads Planning Board

TRENTON (Staff) — Dr. W. R. Patrick replaced Robert Carleton last night as chairman of the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board. Dr. Patrick, nominated by George Greer, was elected unanimously to the post.

Mr. Carleton told the board he would not be able to carry on for another year as chairman because of business commitments. He said he would continue to serve as a board member.

New vice-chairman for the coming year will be Douglas Livingstone, while Arie Hornweg will serve as secretary - treasurer.

Spitfire Returned

TRENTON (Staff) — A disassembled Spitfire fighter, principal Royal Air Force fighter in World War II, arrived at CFB Trenton this week from Palam, India.

Transported by the Canadian Forces, the aircraft will be moved to Toronto shortly, where it will go on permanent display in front of the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

The Spitfire, found by Canadian High Commissioner to India, James George, was purchased by an anonymous Toronto donor for $1,000. The man, a one-time RCAF pilot had searched for five years to find one of the aircraft in suitable condition.

Britons Get By

Britons, according to modern misconception in this country, are rather poorly off financially and materially; so much so for example that they cannot afford to buy cars, boats or whatever, or tour abroad, even dine out of an evening.

That of course is not the case. For one thing there would not be the thousands of cars and excellent eating places that there are, if there were no money around — elegant city establishments for instance, and fine old country mansions where you can eat and have a drink in equal style, or the traditional British pub offering similar facilities.

Alderman Ben Corke evidently is a party to such misconception, for he told fellow Rotarians recently that since the income of the average Briton is about one-third what it is here he was surprised at the amount of dining out and entertaining enjoyed over there.

But Mr. Corke, perhaps unwittingly, provided the answer to his own puzzle when he noted that a round of golf in Scotland, the country he was speaking of, and which he visited on a Rotary curling expedition, may be played for a week on what Canadians pay for a daily round at home.

In his racy way, the Belleville alderman told of his travels and the people he met in Scotland. He stayed with nine families and noted that there are affluent Scots just as there are affluent Canadians, people used to money and with children educated in private schools and so on. He regretted too that the tour was so tightly-planned there was not time to really get to know his hosts, who were often busy anyway. A lot of time was spent in cars and buses and frequent reference was made to "driving through" to such and such a place — a term, incidentally to which New Zealanders are also very partial and who knows maybe they got it from the many Scots who live down there. And speaking of golf, Mr. Corke confessed to being rather glad he missed a round (because of bad weather) at the famous Gleneagles course, since his hosts were scratch or near-scratch golfers.

Other attractions noted in Scotland by Mr. Corke: all-night stores . . . an elaborate indoor bowling establishment with beautiful murals in Dundee . . . and in Kircaldy (population 52,000) a £380,000 swimming pool downtown which is the beginning of a downtown redevelopment plan. So much for the "poor" British!

Headache Anyone?

As a nation of "pill poppers," and including of course in this category the United States, one would think people would need no further encouragement to use aspirin or its many variations. But day after day, and particularly night after night Canadians and Americans are subjected to overkill plus in the realm of advertising for pain relieving agents, sleep inducers, everything in fact short of (sshh) pot, hash and all that stuff. One would think that 200 million Americans and 20 million Canadians are in a permanent state of prostration from headaches, fever, insomnia or whatever. And it has got so that one cannot remember which pill has the most "ant-acid" and consequently is the one we should rush out and buy.

Now You See It...!

Last week Opposition leader Stanfield was suggesting that Finance Minister Benson should resign and Prime Minister Trudeau prolong his career as a world traveller if neither were able to do more about unemployment than at present.

On Monday, by way of contrast, Mr. Stanfield congratulated the Prime Minister for what he termed his part in preventing a breakup of the Commonwealth over the issue of British arms sales to South Africa.

Such are the contradictions and eccentricities of politics!

Carnival Ready

Belleville's big winter blast is off to a happy start today. Yes, the four-day Winter Carnival gets under way this evening with the official opening by Mayor Russell Scott and the crowning of the 1971 Snow Queen. The program is brimful of interesting and exciting activities and these have all been listed in this newspaper. It represents another fine piece of organization by the sponsoring Chamber of Commerce and promises to be the best winter festival ever seen locally.

Commission's Recommendations Badly Timed

Members Are Stalled on Issue of More Pay

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Sure, it will cost money — there is no firm estimate because there have been no hard decisions — but there are few, if any at all, better ways for the taxpayer to "invest" in government than by spending more on Parliament.

The word "invest" is between quotation marks because while what the taxpayer puts into the federal Treasury is supposed to be for his own good, he is given no option.

It is a hard-nosed case of pay — or else.

But so much of what be pays often seems to go down the drain of waste, extravagance, reckless government spending.

Even if it is carefully spent with studied prudence, it often seems to go for things and services at home and abroad that he does not want, cannot use, and more often than not regards as a burdensome and costly personal imposition.

Quick now: think of something you are convinced the Government is throwing away your money on in the bureaucratic belief there is always more where that came from — straight out of your earnings.

No easier exercise, eh?

Well, if there is to be an increased measure of reality injected into government spending, Parliament is the only instrument capable of working such an administrative miracle.

And to better do the job, Parliament must be adequately paid and equipped — which it is not.

Who says so?

A no-nonsense special commission headed by big businessman T. N. Beaupre who, as chairman and president of Domtar, must know the value of the buck.

His commission, you will recall, instantly, recommended an increase in MP pay from $12,000 plus $6,000 in a tax - free spending allowance to a flat, all-taxable $23,000 at once and $25,000 after the next election with fully accountable expenses.

But it was made just before Christmas and the Honorable Members went home for the holidays looking like they were in a mood to go ho-ho-hoing their way deeper into the public purse, playing Santa Claus for themselves and Scrooge for the old age pensioners who were being awarded an increase of a monthly 43 cents.

So they are back in their places, humbled, asking "What raise?" and "Who, me?" like it never had happened.

They have been scared silly. Which is too bad. Too bad, not just for them, but for us taxpayers.

For they urgently need and, most of them, deserve the dough.

Look at it this way. Just the one point. That $6,000 tax-free nest-egg they would have to give up for payment of strictly accountable expenses.

They all got that $6,000 regardless. The MPs with their constituencies right here in the National Capital which they can walk around and cover at no expense; the Toronto and Montreal members who, with rail and air passes, enjoy the same easy, small cost access to their ridings; and the MPs from distant, sparsely-populated regions such as some areas of Northern Ontario, the upper fringes of the West and the Northwest Territories which sprawl over frontier real estate larger than the whole of the rest of the country.

If the fully-taxable pay-change is made, the MPs for the first time in eight years will not only be made to feel the tax-pay the rest of us suffer — but the free-loaders will be separated from the honest-to-Pete, hard-working dedicated MP.

And there are the free-loaders, not many, but a few, who shirk the job — there was one who sat in the Commons for years and never once spoke — who dodge all constituency responsibility, regard the House as a rest-home if not a gentlemen's club, but who, still and all, get that $6,000 tax-free for not lifting a finger or turning a hair.

And there are the dedicated — many of them desperately — who do the best damn job they can and hang the personal cost and sacrifice, and who are going broke.

Under the proposed new system there will be a work incentive; the more the MP hustles to his constituency — and, incidentally, his own re-election — the more it is going to cost, but his riding, his electors, Parliament itself and the country are going to get value for the money. Or that is the business theory of big-league businessman Beaupre who should know.

One more — among many other things that argue for more MP money — the equipment and help an MP gets.

It is even more inadequate than the pay.

In Ottawa he must be on top of the legislation, and in his constituency he must be a general ombudsman for a riding which may cover more than 100,000 voters.

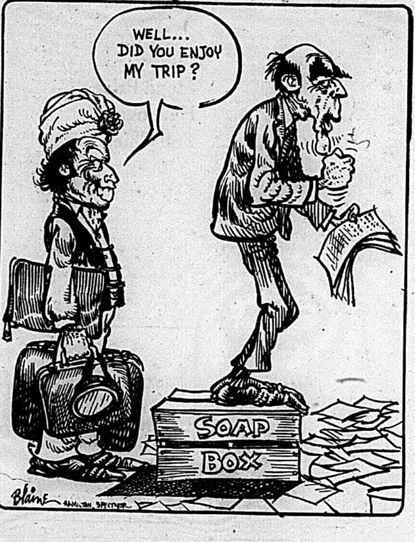
To do this he has one small, cramped, ill-equipped office here in the Centre Block staffed by one secretary who expects to keep the nine-to-five hours which he can not.

Inadequately paid, inadequately equipped, inadequately staffed, the honest-with-himself MP knows he can only do a less than adequate job.

But in the face of unemployment, hardship and poverty for so many many voters — what lousy timing these disasters have — and accusations that he is greedy, the MP, frightened stiff, remains silent.

Speak up for him, speak to the poor guy and tell him "speak for yourself, John MP."

You may be glad you did.



LeDain Report on Drugs Questioned by Scientists

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The LeDain Commission Interim Report on the Non-Medical Use of Drugs has been lauded by some members of the community. Your readers might also be interested in knowing that there are, however, respected members of the scientific community who have serious reservations about it. Here is a partial list of criticisms which I have run across since the report was first published.

". . .The Commission has demonstrated, as presently structured, that it has not approached its responsibilities without bias, and has not demonstrated a capability of making valid deductions and reaching valid conclusions from the national and international material available to its members". (Herbert F. Hoskin, former Director of the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of British Columbia. Source — Brief On The Need For A National Plan For The Control of Drug Abuse In The Interim Period.)

". . Serious adverse reactions (from use of marijuana) do occur with greater frequency and severer consequences than suggested in the LeDain Interim Report . . ." (Dr. F. W. Lundell, Associate Professor of Psychiatry, McGill University. Source—the statement presented by the late Attorney-General and Minister of Education and Justice, Prince Edward Island to the Commission of Inquiry into the Non-Medical Use of Drugs, November 6, 1970.)

"I believe that the quality and quantity of cannabis research, upon which the Commission based its report, is so limited, poorly designed and controlled, and generally inadequate that it is difficult and premature to make scientific, legal or sociological recommendations based upon the marijuana research so far available." (Dr. Edward Truitt, Jr., Senior Fellow in Pharmacology, Battelle Memorial Institute of Columbus, Ohio. Source — Prince Edward Island statement referred to above.)

" . . . Their (the LeDain Commission's) report does not contain enough evidence to support even tentative answers offered . . . The Commission does not yet seem to have made any serious attempt to obtain up-to-date information from those countries in Asia and Africa which, after having had cannabis around for centuries, are now intent on getting rid of it. In addition, some of studies of cannabis which are given prominence in report are of doubtful scientific validity." (Dr. Conrad J. Schwartz, MB, Ch.B., Consultant Psychiatrist, University Health Service, University of British Columbia. Those Studded Tires

Winnipeg Free Press

The Ontario government's announced decision that its ban on studded tires will definitely apply to out-of-province motorists as well as residents of the province seems to be a less than sensible move.

Theoretically, Ontario has a case. The law should apply to everyone driving in the province; the purpose of the ban is to save Ontario highways from excessive wear and tear.

But how is it going to be enforced? Are Manitobans, Quebecers, Americans, to be picked up by the Ontario Provincial Police and hauled into court if they are found to have studded tires on their car?

Builder and Carpenter State Their Views On The Construction Picture

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I would like to state the conversation at the Quinte Home Builder's Association meeting, which led up to my making the statement quoted in The Intelligencer, January 21.

Our speaker that evening was listing various courses available at Loyalist College which relate to the construction industry. I in turn asked the speaker what courses were offered to students seeking trades in the residential or house building industry, and mentioned my difficulty in finding skilled help.

He named several technical courses such as drafting and surveying, but had nothing in the way of carpentry, bricklaying, or plastering. He also stated that all it took to get such trade courses started was a list of 15 names of men or boys interested, then he could put the trade up to the government and ask for a course.

The point I tried to make that evening was that there are not enough young people taking up these trades; therefore, who is going to take over in the next decade or so when all the elder tradesmen retire.

I was not criticizing the ability of a 60 or 70 year old man to do a full day's work, but they learned their trade at a time when the pace was far slower than it is today. We need younger men to pick up the elder's skill but with today's equipment, method and pace.

MIKE DeMARK

• • •

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The gentlemen at Quinte Home Builders are grossly misinformed about availability of construction workers.

To secure workers — skilled carpenters and laborers — is actually very simple: contrary to having a "terrible time", just call Canada Manpower or the Union of Carpenters. They will be more than pleased to help. Of course they would not discriminate against the workers 60 years of age or older.

As for the weather, nobody but God can help you there. We all know the slowness of building in winter. That is why at times and in some cases builders are subsidized by the government.

True, some people do not know how to work; you just cannot leave them on the field — that is where the fair and effective supervising comes in.

Home Builders truly have many community and other responsibilities, one of which is to give the right pay for the right work and trade. If Home Builders' working conditions and pay scale are level with other industries, no man is going to leave before the age of 60.

Stirling Sewage Lagoon Concern of Councillor

STIRLING — Councillor Douglas Bensley of this village claims that the Ontario Water Resources Commission has made a miscalculation in connection with Stirling's lagoon sewage treatment system.

He says that in August, 1970, the OWRC reported the two sewage lagoons covering an area of 13 acres were adequate for a population of 2,500 persons.

But at this week's council meeting, Mr. Bensley said a preliminary report in November to the OWRC by an engineering firm hired by the village rates the treatment system as inadequate.

As a result he feels that the OWRC will now be condemning a treatment system that six months ago it considered as being adequate.

The engineering firm retained by the village recommends the construction of an aeration pond to treat nitrates and phosphates at a cost of $87,600.

However, Councillor Bensley pointed out this recommendation did not consider other pollutants nor that a further chemical treatment of sewage would be required within a few years if the present progress trend of the village continues.

He outlined the ultimate financial savings which might accrue by looking ahead and planning a chemical treatment stage along with an aeration pond.

Tracing VD Contacts Like Detective Work

Alarm over the increase in veneral disease around the world is not reflected in the Quinte area.

Although the World Health Organization reports a 15 per cent increase in gonorrhea cases in Canada last year, the number of cases in the Quinte district increased by only one in 1970.

According to figures released today by Dr. C. R. Lenk of the Hastings and Prince Edward counties health unit, 31 cases of gonorrhea were reported in 1970, one more than the 30 cases reported in 1969.

However, the number of cases of syphilis decreased — from five in 1969 to four in 1970. The total number of venereal disease cases among the 110,000 people reached by the health unit remained the same during the two years reported.

But the number of cases is out of proportion to the amount of time that must be spent by health unit personnel on VD.

By law, doctors are required to report every case of VD coming to their attention. Then the health unit must go to work to trace all the patient's contacts, determine the source of the infection and get that person in for treatment.

"It's Sherlock Holmes work," says Dr. Lenk.

"Sometimes the patient reveals the contact by name, sometimes by description and sometimes only by the place he or she hangs out."

Nurses and health unit inspectors must then track down the contact, tell him he must go to a doctor of his choice and obtain treatment.

The health unit has the legal power to force an infected person to take treatment, but seldom summons the police to enforce the law.

To track down the contact of a recent VD case, the nurse concerned had to work four evenings, after regular hours, Dr. Lenk relates.

If the patient is over 16, health unit personnel are not allowed to disclose the information that he or she is infected to the parents. Parents must be informed if the patient is under 16.

In the case of a married couple, the health unit has the legal right to tell a wife that her husband is infected and vice versa. But in practice, doctors and nurses usually leave it up to the patient to tell his or her spouse, checking only to make sure the spouse has followed up with a medical examination.

"We have never failed to bring a contact to a doctor, but we have failed to trace contacts because of insufficient description," Dr. Lenk says.

Once diagnosed, syphilis and gonorrhea are easily cured, says the medical officer of health.

In the case of syphilis, the treatment is daily injections of an antibiotic for a 10-day period.

Some strains of gonorrhea are resistant to certain antibiotics, but so far doctors have a sufficient battery of antibiotics in reserve that they have been able to find one capable of knocking out the germ in each case.

Sidewalk Building Authorized

Bylaws authorizing the construction of four sections of sidewalk totalling nearly 6,200 feet were given third reading by city council yesterday.

All four walks — on Bridge Street between Wellington Street and Palmer Road, on Palmer road south from Bridge to Leland, and on Herchimer Ave., between Victoria Ave. and Southview, and between Bridge and Dundas, are included in the city's 1970 capital works budget.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said the year's delay in construction of walks is a recognized procedure as there is seldom sufficient time following capital works budget approval to do the necessary engineering, and get specific approvals from the city and the OMB to commence construction the same year.

Tenders for the four walks, and also possibly for a fifth walk on Victoria Ave. east of Farley to which there is still objection, are expected to be called in the early spring.

Council has also been informed by the Ontario highways department that it will pay a 50 per cent subsidy toward the construction of Bell Boulevard from North Front Street to Sidney Street.

Before the 50 per cent subsidy is paid on such new roadways they have to be designated as main thoroughfares by the highways department.

Bell Boulevard will run along the southern limits of the Cambridge Leaseholds property where the new Quinte Mall is now under construction.

The city engineer said that only 1,200 feet of the new roadway to the western limit of the Cambridge Leaseholds property will be constructed this year.

Vancouver Nurse One of First TCA Hostesses

LONDON (CP) — A dare from a fellow nursing graduate in Vancouver 32 years ago put Pat Eccleston into the Canadian skies as a pioneer for women—that of air hostess.

The infant Trans-Canada Air Lines was inaugurating its first "milk run" service between Vancouver and Seattle and had taken up the idea of C. R. Curis, president of United Airlines, of recruiting nurses as flight stewardesses to attract more passengers.

Pat Eccleston, a vivacious brunette then in her early 20s, won the job against considerable competition. Now the wife of John Maxwell, recently retired European sales manager for Air Canada, she recalls: "I felt as if I'd been given a million dollars."

In 1938 the 122 miles from Vancouver to Seattle took 50 minutes in the tiny Lockheed Electra—a 10-seater which skimmed along a bare 2,000 feet above the Strait of Georgia and Puget Sound. It carried nine passengers, mostly businessmen, and the stewardess took the 10th seat.

So tiny was the plane that even the five-foot-three Pat could not stand upright in it. Her first job was assistant to chief stewardess Lucille Garner of Regina, now Mrs. J. A. Grant of Lachine, Que. The girls worked alternate flights, making two round trips a day. Later Pat became supervisory stewardess of TCA, in charge of the new recruits.

In those pioneering days of passenger flying, hostesses had to cope with questions that don't even occur to today's sophisticated jet travellers. They studied aerodynamics and meteorology to explain how a plane stays in the air and what causes turbulence.

The personal atmosphere of the time is reflected in Mrs. Maxwell's nostalgic scrapbooks, such as a treasured photograph of Lancashire entertainer Gracie Fields posing in Pat's uniform hat while on a Canadian tour. In those days too, the adventure of flying was unmarred by hazards like hijacking.

Meanwhile, passenger planes were getting bigger all the time. The Lockheed Electra was followed by the 14-seater Lodestar, the 20-seater North Star and the 90-seater Super Constellation, which only went into civilian service after the Second World War.

Canada's transcontinental passenger air service was inaugurated April 1, 1939, bringing Vancouver and Montreal much closer. At first there was no oxygen over the Rockies and the pilots, who had gained their transcontinental experience flying the mails, had to keep to a maximum height of 11,000 feet one way and 12,000 feet the other.

Reminiscing in her cosy London apartment on those threshold years, Mrs. Maxwell recalled how the early passenger planes had a centre of gravity and had to be carefully loaded. Every time the stewardess moved up and down the aisle with coffee or lunch-boxes, the pilot had to trim the aircraft.

The transcontinental trip initially was made in seven hops — Vancouver - Lethbridge, Lethbridge-Regina, Regina-Winnipeg, Winnipeg to the paper-mill town of Kapuskasing, Ont., Kapuskasing-North Bay, North Bay-Toronto and Toronto-Montreal.

It was a laborious itinerary by today's standards, but Mrs. Maxwell recalled: "People thought it was wonderful to have breakfast in Vancouver and get to Montreal in time for dinner next day—that was less than half the time of the fastest train journey."

Pat left the service in 1941 when she married, but made a nostalgic pilgrimage back to the past in 1962 when Trans-Canada Air Lines celebrated its 25th anniversary. The airline located one of its original Lockheed Electras, still in service with a mining company in Matane, Que., and rented it back for a commemorative Vancouver-Seattle flight Sept. 1 that year.

The little plane was flown across Canada from Moncton, N.B., to Vancouver and the mayor of each city along its route added his name to the fuselage. The commemorative run brought a reunion of the original Vancouver-Seattle crew, including Mrs. Maxwell, who flew from England for the occasion.

In a way, transportation has always been in Pat Maxwell's blood. Her father was a Royal Navy officer in the Pacific Fleet who chose to settle in Vancouver, and her maternal grandfather was a clipper captain with the Sierra Line, trading between Liverpool and the Caribbean.

Following John Maxwell's retirement in the fall of 1970, the couple, who have three daughters in their early 20s, planned to winter in Florida and then head for their home in West Vancouver, after more than a decade in London.

To Mrs. Maxwell, who has an abiding affection for the English way of life, the move back to Canada brings mixed emotions. She says Canadians who come to Britain for a limited term and find themselves irritated by the slower services here don't give it enough time.

"After the first three years you settle down to a new pace and accept that things are different—not necessarily worse, but different.

"In the fourth year you get time to relax and look around and by the fifth year you're having a wonderful time and just hope they'll forget about you and leave you over here."

Springbrook Couple Wed 50 Years

RAWDON — On Sunday January 31 at noon Mr. and Mrs. Orrie Barton were honored at a dinner party in Springbrook church hall on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary. The guests who included members of their family and friends gathered in the church where they were received by Mr. and Mrs. Barton.

The hall was artistically decorated with gold streamers and bells. Floral arrangements were placed on the dining table and gift table. The highlight of the table arrangement was a white and gold tiered anniversary cake, a gift from their niece Mrs. Raymond Begg. The master of ceremonies was Roy Tucher.

During the program Russell Sargent read congratulatory messages from Prime Minister Trudeau, John Robarts, Clarke Rollins and Russel Rowe. A framed certificate from the province of Ontario was also received. Charley Batt proposed a toast to the bride and groom of 50 years and their son Lloyd Barton replied on behalf of his parents.

Mrs. George Ingram gave a humorous reading. Mrs. Isabel Seymour of Ottawa was the guest soloist and also took the place of the bridesmaid who was unable to attend. Messages were read and gifts were presented by Mrs. Russel Sargent on behalf of the family, by Mrs. Burton Heagle on behalf of the brothers and sisters and Mrs. Lorne Bailey on behalf of the Springbrook UCW. Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Barton received several guests at their home from the Rylstone and Springbrook area.

Mrs. Barton is the former Ida May Hay, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Hay of Seymour township. Mr. Barton is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Barton of Rawdon township.

They were married on January 25 1921 at the bride's home by Rev. J. J. Black. The attendants were Carman Hay and Miss Essie Lorne now Mrs. Cecil Heatherington.

Mr. and Mrs. Barton who have lived in the Springbrook area for many years are members of the Springbrook United church and Mr. Barton was a choir master until recently. Mrs. Barton is an active member of the Springbrook UCW and the Springbrook WI. They have four children and ten grandchildren.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I think Tommy is old enough to start using a toothbrush to clean his teeth with water."

Father: "No, he's too little for that. Wait until he's a couple of years older."

Mother: "Here is your very own toothbrush, Tommy. I'll show you how to keep your teeth shiny and white. You can brush them every day."

Good health habits are started early. A child of two can start brushing his teeth with water once a day to get into the habit although at first he may not seem to get the job done properly.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

A Main Course Using Eggs

By MARY MOORE

Since I am making a determined effort to help you stretch your food money it struck me forcibly yesterday that I was missing one of the most obvious economies — eggs. At the supermarket I put two dozen eggs in my basket. To my surprise I paid 46 cents a dozen for extra large and found six of them had double yolks.

While eggs remain plentiful and cheap make a good main dinner dish from them. The amount I made served four and roughly calculating the cost we summed it up at 75 cents. Can you think of any rich protein dish to top that?

EGGS DIVAN (serves 4)

6 large eggs
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup flour
1 tsp. salt
2 1-3 cups hot milk
2 cups fresh frozen peas (OR broccoli OR spinach OR asparagus)
½ lb. (about 2 cups) shredded mild or medium Cheddar cheese
paprika

Put the eggs in a pot, cover with cold water, cover, bring to boil, stand off heat for 20 minutes. Flood with cold water and peel and cut in halves lengthwise. While they cool make a sauce by blending the butter or margarine with the flour and salt and stirring in hot milk until boiling. Remove from heat.

Arrange peas (or other green fresh frozen vegetables suggested above) in shallow medium - large baking dish. Over them place the halved hard cooked eggs in single layer. Pour hot sauce over all. Cover with generous layer of shredded cheese. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 20 minutes. As you can discern this dish may be made in advance and refrigerated until near meal-time Eggs Divan has a lot of plus factors.

We served ours with baked potatoes that had been put in the oven to bake one hour before the Eggs Divan.

THURSDAY

Dinner Menu

Sausage Rolls (see Wednesday); Creamed Broccoli; Mexican Corn; Bibb Lettuce and Endive Salad with 1000-Island Dressing; Baked Cinnamon Apples; Cereal Cream; Coffee.

Ann Landers

Many Suggestions For Wetting Problem

DEAR READERS: Recently I printed a letter from a 13-year-old bedwetter who signed herself, "Night Floater." At present I am floating in a sea of suggested cures for what I now realize is a major world problem. Mail has come from 50 states, plus Auckland, New Zealand, Guam, Caracas, Venezuela, Kamloops, British Columbia, Panama, Singapore, Tokyo, Saigon, Hong Kong and Samoa. Here's a sampling but first this word of caution: Before taking any of these suggestions seriously please read the last paragraph in this column.

ANN LANDERS

Troy, Ohio: I had four children in six years. They were all bed-wetters — the oldest was ten, the youngest was four. You can imagine what my washing was like. A neighbor told me she dried her kids up by cutting off liquids after 4:00 p.m. I took her advice and within 30 days all bed-wetting in our house stopped.

New Rochelle, N.Y.: If anyone suggests to "Night-Floater" that she cut off liquids, tell her not to listen. Children need liquids. The sure cure is to buy four alarm clocks and set them two hours apart. After a week of getting up every two hours there will be no more night-floating.

Palestine, Texas: My grandmother's cure for bed-wetting has been a family formula for years. Tell "Night-Floater" to put copper pennies between her toes when she retires and keep them there all night. This will prevent the deep sleep during which bed-wetting occurs.

London, Ky.: "Night-Floater" has a weak bladder. The best way to strengthen it is to do the Royal Canadian Air Force Exercises. Tell N.F. to write to the Toronto Police Department. They all do it there. (The R.C.A.F. exercises, I mean.)

LA CROSSE, Wis.: "Night-Floater" should take her problem to the Lord. I will start a Novena for her tomorrow.

Olathe, Kansas: Children who wet the bed do not get enough minerals in their diet. They should eat cabbage, beans, broccoli and Brussels sprouts.

Muncie, Indiana: Our five-year-old niece came to live with us when her mother was ill. We were warned that she was a night-floater. Her father brought along rubber sheets and extra bed linen. I told him we wouldn't need it because I didn't stand for bed-wetting in my house. Betsy and I had a long talk.

I told her if she ruined my mattress I'd tan her hide. The next morning she was soaking wet. I gave her the spanking I promised. The next night the same thing happened. I spanked her again. The third night she was dry as the Sahara desert and she's been that way ever since.

Oakland, Calif.: Tell "Night-Floater" to take one teaspoon of honey at bedtime. Honey has a moisture attracting ability that holds fluid in the body during sleep.

Poughkeepsie, N.Y.: Our 11-year-old twins were both night-floaters. Our family doctor suggested counseling. I wasted a whole year before I finally took his advice. Within 3 months both boys were not only cured, but their grades improved and they began to behave like human beings.

Tampa: Bed-wetting is no emotional problem. It's laziness and habit. I know of two electrical devices that work. The minute a drop of water hits the sheet an alarm rings and all hell breaks loose. It cured both my girls in seven weeks.

And now, as usual, Ann Landers will have the last word: It is essential that a competent physician rule out organic disease before trying home-grown remedies or counseling. Bed-wetters with untreated kidney or bladder ailments often develop uremia and this can be fatal. If all organic reasons are ruled out, what remains is an emotional problem and professional counseling is infinitely better than "family formulas."

Successful Living

Sometimes Helps to Look at Oneself

By DORIS CLARK

A few days ago a mother of three active youngsters said to me: "When I was a little girl my mother told me I should never let her do what her mother was doing to her." She was referring to her mother's constant butting in and and interference with the way she managed her home, her husband, her children.

She continued: "Now she is doing exactly the same thing to me — and I don't know how to tell her."

Isn't it strange how little we are able to see ourselves? And it is almost impossible for a courteous young woman to tell it like it is when the news sounds critical, and the person she is talking to is a person she has loved and respected all her life.

Surely the older woman has some responsibility for looking at herself!

Dear Doris: If your research is reliable on medical information, would you please send me all you can on chemical therapy and on hypnotic drugs used by doctors in treatment, why and how used.

I do not mean the drugs taken by teen-agers. I understand they are the same, but I would like to know why doctors are using these same drugs to treat patients. — Puzzled

Dear Puzzled: Bless you! What you ask would fill —does fill — several libraries. I do not do medical research.

It is when someone presents me with a personal problem partly related to some type of ill-health that I turn to a medical consultant.

Drugs of various kinds are indispensable in medical treatment of disease. People are living longer. One reason is that doctors know how to use drugs to make them well.

Now it seems that people who are quite well have discovered some so-called psychedelic effects which carry them into a never-never land. The drugs they use and the way they use them may even cause brain damage and eventual death. This is definitely "drug abuse" and its dangers are great.

If you have this type of problem on your hands, I can lead you to literature and counsellors to help you tackle it.

Duke Files Suit

TORONTO (CP) — A damage suit has been launched by George Clinton Duke against Southam Press Ltd., Dr. Morton Shulman, a Hamilton Spectator reporter, two former Spectator employees and Elizabeth Citron of Burlington.

Harvey Daiter, lawyer for Mr. Duke, told a news conference the suit is in connection with statements made by Dr. Shulman, New Democratic member of the Ontario legislature for High Park.

Allegations by Dr. Shulman in a speech to a legislature committee June 4, 1970, sparked a judicial inquiry into provincial police.

Mr. Justice Campbell Grant of the Ontario Supreme Court, who headed the inquiry, found no ev-
In his report released Dec. 17, idence of improper relationships between any personnel of the Ontario Provincial Police and persons of known criminal activity.

Dr. Shulman said in his speech that Mr. Duke, an Oakville, businessman received special treatment "because of his special connection with certain senior officials of the OPP" and associated with three men, whom Dr. Shulman described as having Mafia connections.

Mr. Daiter said the suit alleges The Spectator and Dr. Shulman conspired to reveal information about Mr. Duke which had been collected by the newspaper under the cloak of Dr. Shulman's legislative imunity.

Members of the legislature can not be prosecuted for statements made in the legislature.

In addition to Dr. Shulman and Southam, which owns the Spectator, the suit names Spectator reporter Gerry McAuliffe, Warren Barton, former city editor of the Spectator, T. E. Nichols, recently-retired publisher of the paper, and Mrs. Citron, who testified at the inquiry.

Brock Chisholm Is Dead

VICTORIA (CP) — Dr. Brock Chisholm, who rose from a small-town doctor to director-general of the World Health Organization, has died in Victoria at the age of 74.

He died in the veterans hospital Tuesday after three years' confinement.

George Brock Chisholm was the psychiatrist who told parents they should not lie to their children about Santa Claus and who said that North American hospitals turn out neurotic babies kept under glass and separated from their mothers.

It was Dr. Chisholm who helped explain to the anxious and perplexed world of the 1940s and 1950s that the state of good health, as it has been perceived through human history, is a mirage.

He said the worst thing in store for younger generations was the prospect of "turning out like us" and maintained that if man continued to behave as in the past he would probably destroy the human race.

As a general in charge of the Canadian army's medical services during the Second World War, Dr. Chisholm devised tests for recruits to screen out the mentally unstable. Then he became Canada's deputy minister of health, a post from which he stepped into the world's top health job in 1948. He held it for five years.

After he retired from WHO to a wooded, four-acre property at Sooke on Vancouver Island, near Victoria, in 1953—a spry 57—he continued to speak on his beliefs that man's ills stem more from emotions than from faulty functioning of the body. He spent much time lecturing in Canada and abroad.

After each lecture, his letter box at home or his desk in Ottawa or Geneva suddenly had an avalanche of demands for his official head.

He counselled parents against "lying" to their children about Santa Claus or anything else. He urged that the basic concepts of previous generations be discarded for a new thinking to fit a new kind of world—a world in which his generation held a veto power over the continued survival of mankind because of new scientific weapons, nuclear and biological.

Brown Rink Over First Consols' Hurdle

DAVE BROWN

GUELPH (CP) — Bruce Munro of Toronto took a long time to do it but Wednesday he advanced into the next round of the Ontario curling championship.

Munro, who was knocked out of competition after two games in the 1969 and 1970 competition, took four hours and 10 minutes to beat Ted Clarke of Toronto 7-6 in the second round.

In other night games, Dave Brown of Belleville beat Louis Turner of Elmvale 9-7, John Wynford of Ottawa defeated Claude Rosborough of Newmarket 12-7, Alfie Phillips Jr. of Toronto trimmed Jim Waite of Toronto 10-5, Earl Hushagen of Toronto defeated Henry Hagey of Brantford 10-8, Keith Forgues of Ottawa beat Ron Tracey of Dundas 6-5 and Ron Charlebois of Toronto beat Tom Steen of Oshawa 7-6.

In the first round, played earlier Wednesday, Davidson, 39, defeated Forgues 9-4 but had to rely on the strength of his three youthful players.

In other first-round games, Hushagen defeated Turner 9-5, Charlebois dumped John McCrae of Lindsay 15-3, and Steen dumped Cam Lewis of St. Catharines 13-9.

The winner will represent Ontario at the Canadian championship in Quebec City March 1-5. A Northern Ontario rink will be named later.

The 12-end games are being played before a capacity crowd at the Guelph curling club, built three years ago at a cost of more than $300,000. Some fans were being turned away.

Today's 9 a.m. draw had Munro going against Steen, Brown against Clarke, George aginst Charlebois, Winford against Tracy, Phillips against Lewis, Rosborough against Hagey, Waite against McCrae and Hushagen against Davidson.

Scheduled for the 2 p.m. draw were Brown and Winford, George and Phillips, Forgues and Charlebois and Munro and Hushagen.

Some Senior Ears Perk Up

AL FERGUSON

Belleville Mo-Hawk ears perked up last night after Owen Sound Crescents began to make senior hockey noises.

The seventh - place Crescents, still eight points behind the Mo-Hawks in the battle for the OHA Senior A league's sixth and final playoff berth, knocked off third-place Barrie Flyers 5-4.

Those were the same Flyers who humbled the Mo-Hawks 9-4 in their own Memorial Arena backyard Sunday.

It's still an uphill struggle for Owen Sound, who would have to win five of their eight remaining games and hope Belleville lost all theirs to sneak into the last playoff spot.

Fourth place is still there for the Mo-Hawk asking. Oakville Oaks, who share that position with Kingston, both with 31 points, are in town Friday night for a 9 p.m. game. With 30 points, a Belleville win would move the Mo-Hawks from undisputed possession of sixth to fourth place.

There is a drawback. Fourth - place holders at the end of the regular schedule draw the league pennant-winners in the first playoff round. Second and fifth - place clubs meet, and third and sixth.

This Sunday, the Mo-Hawks travel to Barrie with their next home game being a Kingston affair Friday, Feb. 12.

Winger Al Ferguson has the best chance to achieve individual distinction in the remaining Mo-Hawk games.

The husky right - winger scored his 17th goal of the season in Tuesday's 5-3 loss in Kingston and could reach the 20-goal club for the second time in as many full seasons with the club.

Last winter, Ferguson's 22 goals were tops among Belleville snipers.

Both Ends Meet

It's nice to have a car that has performance AND appearance.

Belleville motorsport enthusiast Dave Benn can vouch for that.

Benn's "Gentle Benn" took top Super Stock hoors at the Autorama 1971 Speed and Sport Show held at Toronto's Canadian National Exhibition Automotive Building.

The Mustang, which Benn drags in United States meets as well as entering in auto shows, was judged over four other entries from across Canada.

Western Winners

Western Tire Juvenile manager Marsh Hopkins and coach Lou Smrke flank standout performers Fred Stickle, Bill Bunnett and Mike Goegan. The Belleville all-stars captured the "B" championship trophy at the Picton Juvenile Tournament last Saturday. The club defeated Picton 4-0 in the championship game after dropping a 5-4 squeaker to Napanee in the opener. Sunday, Western Tire begin their best of five OMHA playdown series with the Trenton Junior Ranks Juveniles, winners of the "A" title at Picton.

Gardiner Farms Has Inside Track On Circuit

TORONTO (CP) — The Gardiner Farms thoroughbred racing stable has been king of the Ontario racing circuit for the last three years, and a look at its current racing stock indicates it will lead again in 1971.

Horses owned by Toronto businessman George Gardiner and trained by Lou Cavalaris won more than $450,000 last year. It was the third year in a row the stable was leading money-winner in Canada.

Gardiner's horses won a total of $306,645 in 1968 and $354,940 in 1969.

Gardiner stock, befitting a stable of such performance, is trained in luxury. While Cavalaris, Ontario's leading trainer in 1970, has a modest string of horses at Hialeah in Florida, the bulk of the stock is going through conditioning paces at the main farm northwest of here.

The farm, one of the most modern training facilities in racing, boass a quarter-mile training track completely enclosed.

The stalls are spacious and finished in pine. Adjacent to the training track is a large room with an automatic "walking machine" to cool out the horses.

A total of 34 thoroughbreds, 11 of them promising two-year-olds, are being prepared on the farm for the Ontario season. Farm manager Mike Byrne oversees their conditioning in Cavalaris's absence.

Gardiner has five horses eligible for this year's running of the Queen's Plate, the only major stakes race in Ontario never won by a Gardiner thoroughbred.

Chatty Cavalier, a stocky bay colt, is given the best chance out of the Gardiner eligibles to win the 1¼-mile test. The colt won six races as a two-year-old in 1970 and is third choice in the winter book selections.

Other Gardiner horses eligible for the Queen's Plate are Meadowblade, Oktoberfest, Old Stoneface and Francophile.

And Two Violins, everybody's favorite to win last year's Plate until he was injured two days before the big race, is ready to return to action.

"He looks just great," says Byrne. "He didn't put on much weight during his recuperation and he's been galloping right along for four weeks now."

Two Violins suffered a muscle injury in his left foreleg but has completely recovered and could be the scourge of the handicap ranks this year.

Another veteran who should win her share of races this season is Gardiner's Mary of Scotland, the best grass-running filly in the country last year. She earned $70,652 in 19 races in 1970.

The Gardiner stable also includes some horses purchased last fall from England and Ireland. Among them are Lark Rise and Ringsend, a pair that finished one-two in the Irish Free Handicap Stakes last season.

A Hockey Tip: Let Rest of World Go By

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Will Buck Houle, bossman of Hockey Canada go down in sports history as one of the greatest savants, seers, yogis, swamis or soothsayers in Canadian hockey.

Or is he doing some wishful thinking?

The tonsils - typewriter pundits quote Houle as saying, "I believe Canada will be back at the top level of international hockey competition before 1971 is over . . . I am sure Canada will be prepared to send a 'simon pure' hockey team to Tokyo for the 1972 Olympics."

Simon pure hockey players in Canada, according to the standards of Bunny Ahearne, chief poobah of the International Ice Hockey Federation, and Avery Brundage, the top Zeus of the Olympics, went out with spats and high-button shoes.

In fact, they are as rare as professionals in Russia, Sweden, Czechoslovakia and other play - now-pay - never countries of Europe. Some claim there is no yen for shinny in Japan.

If memory is correct, European countries select their top players weld them, and send them as a representative club to all international competitions.

All except Canada. Why shouldn't the dean emeritus of the world school of hockey send her top grads to compete with foreign students who play only pro patria, with no filthy lucre attached.

Houle confided in a speech down east that "Canada may be back in international hockey before year end and pretty much on our own terms".

Breathing simon pures for Olympics in one breath, he opined "it would be ridiculous for Canada to pursue world competition with anything but top-notch professionals."

And Houle believes, he says, that a top American Hockey League team would do "reasonably well" as Canada's representatives to world hockey competition.

If so, what concessions does Houle have from the Ahearne gang regarding the use of western world professional players?

I do not believe Canadian hockey fans as a whole want a team pro or otherwise which would do "reasonably well" against European competition to represent them in world hockey.

The Russians, Czechs, Swedes and what - have - you in the world, know that if Canada, like the rest, sent its best players to represent the country, what the result would be. Any one of the former Big Six clubs of the National Hockey League would bring home Ahearne's bacon.

And if they want pre-tournament proof why not arrange a game between one of the NHL All - Star teams and a clutch of Europe's best?

I don't imagine Comrade Tarasov, the Russky coach, would break an arm in his haste to sign such an agreement. He has seen NHL teams in action over here and he once saw a top Canadian junior "A" squad scare the wits out of his bladeshod tovariches.

I do not believe Canadian fans get into a tizzy over what country wins the so - called world hockey title. When Canada dropped out of world competition there were no furores over the decision. In fact a great many agreed with it.

They know, as do the Ahearnes, Tarasovs and others across the pond, which country produces the best hockey players in the world.

And if they want future proof let them pit their best against our best — and prove it once and for all.

Otherwise, I do not believe Houle or any other Canada hockey organization should bend over backwards or let Ahearne and company dictate to us what player personnel we should use.

Goldham Still Familiar After 15-Year Absence

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

He hasn't played professional hockey for 15 years, but Bob Goldham will be one of the most recognized faces on the ice when the National Hockey League Old-timers play a Feb. 26 Belleville exhibition.

"Goldie" who played on the bluelines of five Stanley Cup winning teams in a 12-year NHL career, is today widely recognized as the analysis expert on the Toronto-based CBC productions of "Hockey Night in Canada".

Goldham handles that job as efficiently as he stymied opposition forwards when in his heyday with the powerhouse Detroit Red Wings of the early Fifties.

Prior to that, Goldham, who earned a reputation as one of the best shot-blockers among NHL defencemen, also played for Chicago Black Hawks and Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Georgetown native, 49 in May, broke in with the Leafs in sensational style in the 1941-42 campaign, collecting four goals and seven assists in 19 regular - season games, then added four more points in the playoffs as the Leafs went on to win the Stanley Cup.

BOB GOLDHAM

Service in the Canadian Armed Forces interrupted Goldham's career for three years, before he returned with Toronto for the 1945-46 season.

After retiring in 1956, Goldham's second "comeback" took a while longer.

The popular sports personality joined up with the NHL Old-timers fund - raising hockey unit when it was formed a couple of years back, and will join them here Feb. 26.

The Belleville game, against as many former McFarlands as can be mustered and assorted other city shinny veterans, is a joint project of the city's OMHA teams and the Junior B Fairways.

Advance tickets are priced at $1 for adults, and entitle the buyer to a chance at a draw for a watch.

All children's tickets will be 50 cents for the exhibition, scheduled for 9 p.m. on the night of Feb. 26.

Savard in Cast For Three Months

MONTREAL (CP) — Defenceman Serge Savard of Montreal Canadiens underwent a 90-minute bone graft operation to his left leg Wednesday.

Savard fractured his leg here last Saturday night in a National Hockey League game.

Following the bone graft, team physician Dr. D. G. Kinnear said Savard will be able to leave the hospital "in about a week, but that he will be in a cast for three months.

The bone graft was done in order to ensure that Savard will be able to return to hockey when this injury heals completely, the doctor said.

Mikita Invisible Man On Two Chicago Goals

Stan Mikita's name didn't appear in the National Hockey League summaries Wednesday night, but his fancy skate work in front of the New York Rangers' goal was responsible for ending one of the longest unbeaten streaks of modern times.

The Chicago Black Hawks centre screened Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin perfectly on two goals, including the winner by defenceman Paul Shmyr, to pave the way for a 4-2 Chicago victory, snapping New York's unbeaten string on home ice at 26 regular-season games.

The string runs back to New York's last two scheduled games of the 1969-70 season and through the first 24 home games of the current schedule.

The string was ended just two shy of the record set by Montreal Canadiens 17 years ago.

In other games, Boston Bruins extended their winning streak at home to 18 with a 7-3 win over Los Angeles Kings, Pittsburgh Penguins remained unbeaten at home in the last five games with a 6-1 conquest of California Golden Seals, Toronto Maple Leafs tripped St. Louis Blues 6-2 and Detroit Red Wings scored in the final minute of play to tie Minnesota North Stars 4-4.

New York moves into Detroit in one of three scheduled games tonight. The others find Los Angeles in Buffalo against the Sabres and Chicago visiting Philadelphia Flyers.

Mikita, a four-time winner of the NHL scoring title in the mid-1960s, isn't having one of his productive seasons.

Ailments early in the year curtailed the usually fluid skating of the Czechoslovakian-born star and a league limitation on the curve in the hockey stick blade hampered his offensive manoeuvrings.

A four-goal scoring outburst in a Dec. 16 rame against St. Louis was the first sign this season he had given any indication of reverting to the form that won him eight all-star awards, six to the first team.

Since then, however, he has managed only three goals although his play 1 making ablity has set up 32 others for 44 points and places him among the top 20 scorers in the league.

Team-mate Bobby Hull scored his 30th goal of the season 24 seconds into the secnd period to give the Black Hawks a lead they held for the rest of the game.

The goal, Hull's 540th career goal in regular-season play, left him just four behind Montreal's great Maurice (Rocket) Richard, whose 544 is second only to Detroit's Gordie Howe, with 779.

At Boston, Johnny Bucyk and defenceman Bobby Orr scored two goals apiece in prolonging the Bruins' winning way on home ice. Centre Phil Esposito picked up two assists to give him a league-leading 98 points.

STAN MIKITA

Boston's win, combined with the New York loss, moved the Bruins eight points ahead of the Rangers in their battle for first in the East Division.

Rookie Rod Zaine, recalled from Amarillo Wranglers of the Central Hockey League two months ago, scored twice for the Penguins.

In addition to extending their home-ice win string to five games, it marked the fourth straight time they have defeated California this year.

Toronto had to overcome a sluggish start at home and two early goals by St. Louis' Bill Sutherland to pad their fourth-place standing in the East, climbing to within six points of Montreal and 15 ahead of Buffalo and Detroit, tied for fifth.

Nick Libbett's goal with 29 seconds remaining in the game and the Detroit goalie out in favor of a sixth attacker pulled the Red Wings into their tie at Bloomington, Minn.

Rookie Buster Harvey, back after an absence of 16 games while recovering from strained knee ligaments, had shot Minnesota into a 4-3 lead early in the final period.

The Red Wings lost rookie goalie Jim Rutherford in the first period when he took a shot on the face mask, bruising his forehead. He was replaced by veteran Roy Edwards. Rookie defenceman Mike Robitaille, recently acquired by Detroit from New York, also left the game after injuring his back.

Lost Hero Status In 30 Seconds

Bobby Washington was a hero with 37 seconds to go. Then, the young Cleveland Cavalier hooked up with veteran Lenny Wilkens and things changed.

Washington converted a three-point play to put Cleveland ahead 96-94, but then fouled Wilkens twice, and the Seattle player-coach made four shots to give the SuperSonics a 98-95 National Basketball Association victory Wednesday night.

Wilkens' last two foul shots, his 29th and 30th points, came with seven seconds remaining. Dick Snyder added 28 points for Seattle while Bobby Smith and Walt Wesley scored 25 and 24, respectively for Cleveland.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Cincinnati Royals trounced Boston Celtics 134-115, Baltimore Bullets belted Chicago Bulls 124-102 and Milwaukee Bucks tripped San Diego Rockets 108-101.

Flynn Robinson hit seven-of-10 field goals and scored all 17 points in the second quarter when Cincinnati scored 43 to begin its rout of Boston. Tom Van Arsdale scored 34 points and Norm Van Lier 32 for Cincinnati. Van Lier also recorded 11 assists and nine rebounds. John Havlicek led Boston with 28 points.

Cranston Has Canvas to Fall Back On

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Toller Cranston is the one competitor in the North American figure skating championships starting today who is not consumed by any overpowering desire to capture a title.

For that reason, the 21-year-old Toronto skater thinks he has a better chance than some to capture the men's singles crown.

"I don't skate just for the sake of winning a title," Cranston said Wednesday. "I skate because I enjoy it and that means I am not working under the pressure that some skaters have.

"There are a lot of skaters who get wrapped up in skating. Their whole life revolves around it and they feel they just have to win so that they'll have the title to help them get a job as a pro.

"It's that kind of pressure that can make some skaters give it up.

"There's more to life than just skating," said Cranston, who is an accomplished artist.

Already the sale of his paintings has helped pay some of his skating expenses.

"I have no ambition to become a professional or a skating judge later on. When I retire from competitive skating I'll continue it for my own pleasure only."

Cranston, the Canadian men's champion, says he doesn't see any competitor who stands out among the six in his class which begins today with the compulsory figures.

"I think we're pretty well all even. Any one could win it.

"It's the same in all the classes except in the women's singles where you have two favorites—Karen Magnussen and Janet Lynn."

Miss Magnussen, 18-year-old Canadian women's singles champion from Vancouver, faces Miss Lynn, the United States champion from Lockport, Ill.

TOLLER CRANSTON

Compulsory figures in the women's competition start Friday morning.

Cranston, besides his unpressured attitude, has the advantage of a good position in the draw. He drew fourth for the figures and sixth in the free skating.

"The draw is very important," Cranston explained. "If you have to start very early in the draw, the judges always mark you low to allow room to give higher marks to someone who might give a better performance later.

"Also, if you have to skate first, the judges might forget you by the time the last skater comes on the ice.

"But you get in the middle or near the end your chances are much better."

The other Canadians in the men's singles also have favorable positions. Paul Bonenfant of Vancouver drew sixth in the figures and second in free skating while Ron Shaver of Homilton drew second and fourth.

U.S. champion John Mishapatkevich of Great Falls, Mont., drew fifth in both with Ken Shelley of Downey, Calif., third and Gord McKellen of Lake Placid, N.Y., first.

Val and Sandra Bezit of Toronto, Canadian pairs champions, also picked good positions—third in figures and fourth in free skating.

The luck of the draw went against Canada's champion dance couple, Barry Soper and Louise Lind of Vancouver. They start third in the set pattern dances and first in the free skating.

Lombardi Among Seven Inducted to Honor Roll

CANTON, Ohio (AP)—Coach Vince Lombardi and six players—Jim Brown, Y. A. Tittle, Norm Van Brocklin, Andy Robustelli, Frank (Bruiser) Kinard and Bill Hewitt—were named today to the United States' Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The seven inductees, whose selection swells the Hall of Fame ranks to 70, will be honored at ceremonies in Canton on July 31.

Lombardi, who died of cancer last Sept. 3, gained lasting acclaim for leading Green Bay Packers out of the National Football League depths and into a dominance during the last decade. His Green Bay clubs won five NFL titles and the first two Super Bowl games.

The one-time member of Fordham's Seven Blocks of Granite moved on to Washington as coach, general manager and part owner in 1969. He guided the Redskins to their first winning season in 14 years before he was stricken with cancer.

Brown, elected to the Hall in his first year of eligibility, led NFL ball-carriers in eight of his nine seasons with Cleveland Browns, establishing an all-time career record of 12,312 rushing yards. He was named all-league fullback seven times.

Tittle, who played 17 pro seasons and ranks second only to Johnny Unitas on the all-time passing list, was the NFL's most valuable player in 1961 and tied for the honor in 1963 while quarterbacking New York Giants.

Van Brocklin, masterful quarterback for Los Angeles Rams and Philadelphia Eagles during his 12-year NFL career, paced the Eagles to the 1958 championship.

VINCE LOMBARDI

Robustelli was a hard-rock defensive end for 14 NFL seasons with the Rams and Giants.

Kinard earned all-NFL honors in his 1938 rookie year with the six subsequent NFL seasons and two more in the All-America Conference, established himself as one of the most durable and talented of all pro tackles.

Hewitt joined Chicago Bears in 1932, and was a standout all-around end for the next decade. He played without a helmet until 1939, when the league ordered him to don one. He died in 1947 from injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

Eskies Pay Debt To Als

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos said Wednesday they have sent veteran defensive halfback Joe Hernandez to Montreal Alouettes in payment for fullback Bob Houmard. The original deal called for the Eskimos to get Houmard in return for the rights to college running back Leon Burns of Long Beach State. However, a condition was that if the Alouettes couldn't sign Burns, they got Hernandez.

Yastrzemski Could Be Best Paid in Baseball

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Red Sox said Wednesday they have given manager Eddie Kasko a raise for the second year of his two year contract despite the club's disappointing 1970 third-place finish, 21 games behind the pennant-winning Baltimore Orioles.

"We said originally that if he did a good job we'd raise the figure in the second year," general manager Dick O'Connell said at the team's final winter news luncheon. "We think he did a good job."

The Red Sox also announced that 15 of the 38 players on their roster have signed their contracts for 1971. The list includes 17-game winner Ray Culp, the team's top pitcher for the third year in a row, and Luis Aparicio, obtained from Chicago White Sox in a winter trade.

CARL YASTRZEMSKI

O'Connell said Aparicio will accompany his old Chicago team to his native Venezuela for a pair of exhibition games this spring which he had arranged before being traded.

But contrary to earlier speculation, Boston's general manager said Aparicio would not play in the games. He said the Red Sox had made the decision, and that Aparicio had accepted it.

Star outfielder Carl Yastrzemski is in the second-year of a two-year pact which O'Connell says makes the 31-year-old player "around the highest" paid in baseball.

The second year of the contract is believed to be worth $120,000.

"Maybe he is the highest paid, maybe he isn't," said the general manager when asked if Yastrzemski is the highest-paid performer in baseball.

Black Stars Considered

NEW YORK (AP) — The way was cleared Wednesday for the inclusion of such outstanding stars of the old Negro baseball leagues as Josh Gibson and Satchel Paige in Baseball's Hall of Fame in a special category.

That became a reality when baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced the formation of a special 10-man committee to select the top Negro stars of the pre-1947 era "as part of a new exhibit commemorating the contributions of the Negro leagues to baseball."

They will not actually be Hall of Famers but Kuhn did not see that as any compromise.

"I wouldn't call it a compromise," Kuhn said. "The rules for selection to the Hall of Fame are very strict and I think those standards are correct. Through no fault of their own these stars of the Negro leagues didn't have major league exposure.

"The purpose here is to recognize the great contributions made by the Negro leagues and I think the stars should be identified and recognized by the public."

First Win No Cinch

VALLETTA, Malta (Reuter). — England opened its campaign to win the European Cup soccer championship with a stumbling 1-0 victory over Malta in unfriendly conditions at Gzira Stadium here Wednesday.

A capacity crowd of 30,000 watched a match regarded as the most important in the Island's history. England's victory left it second in Group III behind Switzerland and ahead of Greece.

Wills Would Manage

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Maury Wills, who made his managerial debut this winter in Mexico, says he wants to manage Los Angeles Dodgers. If successful, Wills could become the major leagues' first Negro manager.

The base stealing star, a 12-year major league veteran who batted .268 last year for the Dodgers, saw his club, the Hermosillo Orange Growers, clinch the Mexico Triple A Pacific Coast Club championship Tuesday night in a playoff.

In a telephone interview Wednesday, Wills said: "Next, I want to manage the Dodgers. But I'm afraid I may have to wait a few years until Walt Alston retires. In the meantime I will continue to play in the regular season and manage minor league teams in the winter."

Ottawa Is Urged to Act to Prevent Flooding of B.C. Valley

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should put the power of its proposed environment department to the test by preventing any further flooding of the Skagit River Valley in southern British Columbia, says Grace MacInnis (NDP — Vancouver-Kingsway).

She told the Commons Wednesday that the government has been reluctant to do anything about an agreement between Premier W. A.C. Bennett of B.C. and a Seattle power company that may permit flooding.

Mrs. MacInnis made the remarks as the Commons began detailed study in committee-of-the-whole House on the government's proposed reorganization bill, creating a new environment department and enabling appointment of additional cabinet ministers, among other things.

Everyone welcomed the new department and the choice of Fisheries Minister Jack Davis as the minister in charge, she said, but the government must show it means business by acting to save the Skagit Valley from flooding.

The measure, which already has received second reading, will be in committee-of-the-whole again today.

The Skagit issue goes back to 1942 when the city-own Seattle Power and Light built a dam on the U.S. side of the border, flooding part of the Skagit Valley.

The flooding was done with the approval of the International Joint Commission. The IJC said Seattle could raise the level of Ross Lake, formed from the flooding, another 125 feet if it received the approval of the B.C. government to flood another 6,000 acres of the valley.

Premier Bennett approved an agreement with Seattle in 1967 that would allow more flooding of the valley. Seattle now is short of power and would like to raise the dam and increase flooding.

Mrs. MacInnis said the federal government is the only body that can effectively save the valley. This would be the first real test of the government's seriousness in setting up the new department.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said the government appears to be fiddling while smouldering discontent with unemployment sweeps across the country.

He called for creation of a national credit council to distribute funds needed to stimulate the economy and provide new jobs. The government should not be concerned with reorganization when three were other pressing problems like unemployment.

New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas earlier accused the government of making misleading statements about a proposal to spend $2 million to hire 250 French-speaking university graduates in the public service this year.

Mr. Douglas moved in the House that the matter be referred to the standing committee on miscellaneous estimates. The motion was not allowed by Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux.

Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday a confidential memorandum dealing with the matter was circulated in the public service following a cabinet decision last November that $2 million would be spent if a suitable program could be worked out.

Ran Harding (NDP—Kootenay West) said the proposed environment department cannot carry out a successful campaign against pollution unless it also deals with the issues of population control and reclaiming used resources.

Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey) said he will press for more anti-noise pollution programs. He said one doctor estimated that ambulance sirens killed more people than ambulances saved.

Mr. Davis said there will be a maximum of inter-departmental co-ordination and co-operation at federal and provincial levels to make certain the environment is protected to the greatest possible degree.

Mr Davis said the government intends to establish uniform national pollution standards wherever the federal government had jurisdiction or wherever it was contributing funds to anti-pollution programs.

Mr. Davis said the federal government would have representatives on the water-quality management agencies responsible under federal-provincial agreements for cleaning up designated bodies of water.

There would be no federal participation in these agencies unless federal water-quality standards were agreed to.

The minister said the federal government has control over fisheries, navigation, flood control and other programs and could enforce national pollution standards in these areas.

The government would use consultation and reason in its dealings with provinces in an attempt to obtain co-operation in establishing national standards.

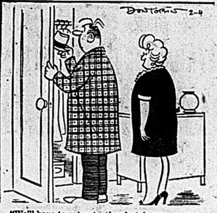
In the Senate, Senator Ernest Manning said regional alienation in any part of Canada should be considered as having national importance.

The former Social Credit premier of Alberta said federal and provincial governments should commit themselves to serious study of regional dissatisfactions.

Senator Arthur Pearson (PC—Saskatchewan) said alienation of Western Canada is largely a communication problem.

The remarks were made during Senate discussion of a recently-formed council of Prairie senators, of which both are members.

THE LITTLE WOMAN



"We'll have to eat out—the electric can opener is broken."

Ottawa-Quebec Rivalry Over

OTTAWA (CP) — Less than a year after Ottawa-Quebec rivalry nudged a flash-point at a conference of French-speaking governments in Niger, Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier feels that the competition for prestige and purpose in Africa is finished, at least for the time being

The main reason offered by the minister in an intreview this week is that the Quebec government changed in a provincial election last April, just over a month after the conference.

As evidence that tension has subsided, he cited the French communique which followed a related meeting he attended last month in Lome, Togo. The communique "noted with pleasure" the active role of the Canadian government in the development of francophone (French-speaking) Africa.

The note was in contrast to the tense manoeuvring by Canada, France and Quebec at the conference the Niger capital of Niamey. At the time, Mr. Pelletier was hard pressed to carry the Canadian position that the federal government had to have precedence over Quebec in the creation of a new agency for cultural and technological co-operation.

If the flashy constitutional issues are receding, however, the result has been to focus more attention on the rapid growth of federal assistance through the Canadian International Development Agency to francophone Africa. Quebec is continuing its role but with fewer resources at its disposal.

For example, federal allocations for grants, loans and food aid to the former French colonies reached $64.2 million in 1970-71. The total compares with a mere $1.5 million between 1962 and 1965 and with aid to Commonwealth countries in Africa this year of $60.9 million.

The new focus for aid has given many French-speaking Canadians opportunities for work outside the country that English - speaking Canadians more familiar with the ideology of the Commonwealth—have usually taken for granted.

Davis Has to Defend School Costs, While Rivals Are Critical

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister William Davis has been forced to remain largely on the defensive in dealing with the issue of spiralling education costs during the campaign for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

Given his early and strong showing in the bidding for support from delegates to next week's leadership convention it was, perhaps, inevitable that opponents would attack Mr. Davis' department.

As the campaign to succeed retiring Premier John Robarts got underway, Mines Minister Allan Lawrence became the first candidate to fire a shot at education expenditures which account for 41 per cent of the provincial budget.

Treasury department estimates for the fiscal year 1970-71 put spending on education at $1,527 million out of general nevenues of $3,740 million. This is about $193 million more than was spent on education in the previous fiscal year.

Criticism also has come from Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough and A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch has stayed away from the subject while Robert Pharand, a University of Ottawa graduate student and latecomer to the campaign, has not yet outlined his views.

Mr. Davis has answered the criticism by noting that the percentage increase of education costs has not risen as sharply as in past years; that Ontario spends less per pupil than Alberta or British Columbia; that costs are levelling off because of a declining birth rate; and that he has ordered "tough" new ceilings on spending by school boards.

He has proposed a year-round operation of universities community colleges and secondary and elementary schools as a means of saving the government money.

The education minister also says mill rates in municipalities will begin to decline within 18 months as education costs at the elementary and secondary school levels become stabilized.

However, he warns that "serious questions" have to be answered regarding post-secondary education. He has indicated costs to taxpayers are likely to rise in this area.

Allan Lawrence said at the outset of his campaign that he would not allow any government department to spend more than one third of the provincial budget—and made it clear education costs were his primary target.

He wants to freeze spending on education at the present level for three years, at a time when government policy is aimed toward assuming 60 per cent of education costs.

Present policy is "not the panacee many people seem to think; it only moves the cost burden from one pocket to another of the same taxpayer," the mines minister says.

He says a three-year freeze on spending would involve a freeze on teachers' salaries and much tighter controls on school board spending, both of which he acknowledges are "political dynamite."

However, "the real answer lies in a more efficient system of total taxation," he says.

Mr. McKeough has noted that the government's first concern had been pupil placement, but that "the second priority has got to be costs of education."

The municipal affairs minister calls for more efficient use of facilities and says school boards must improve their administrations by training people specifically for the job.

Financial Minister Lawrence says the public wonders what use are more facilities when students are dropping out of school, taking drugs and alienating themselves from those who pay the bills.

"I would propose that educational costs be completely reviewed—not on the basis of an arbitrary cut of a certain percentage of the cost of education as one candidate proposed, but on the basis of 'are we getting our dollar's worth in education?' "

He says the percentage approach suggested by Allan Lawrence is "unsound," and suggests that costs be held down by cutting out such waste as "flimsy research."

The candiates generally are agreed on one issue that would involve increased government costs—the controversial question of extension of financial aid to Roman Catholic separate schools to cover Grades 11 through 13.

All the candidates have supported present government policy not to extend such aid, at least for the time being.

Provincial Secretary Welch suggests discussions might be held in the future on the possibility of public and separate schools sharing facilities, teachers and transportation systems.

Financial Minister Lawrence, although saying it is "unreasonable and unfair" to leave the issue open, also suggests it be left for discussion by the new cabinet.

Four Rose Jurors Chosen

MONTREAL (CP)—The kidnap-murder trial of Paul Rose continues today with four of 12 jurors chosen while in another court a judge is to rule on motions asking him to withdraw from the trials of five persons facing seditious conspiracy charges.

The fourth juror was selected Wednesday in the trial of Rose for the October kidnap-murder of Pierre Laporte, then Quebec labor minister.

Proceedings were interrupted by the 27-year-old Rose who persisted in shouting at Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols during jury selection in Court of Queen's Bench.

In another court today, Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet is to rule on motions asking him to withdraw from the trials of five persons on seditious conspiracy charges arising from terrorism in Quebec during October.

Labor leader Michel Chartrand, lawyer Robert Lemieux, author Pierre Vallieres, teacher Charles Gagnon and Jacques Larue-Langlois, former CBC radio producer, have all told Mr. Justice Ouimet he has preconceived opinions about them and cannot be impartial.

Seditious conspiracy is punishable by a maximum of 14 years imprisonment.

All five are also accused of membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec which claimed responsibility for the Oct. 10 abduction of Mr. Laporte and the kidnapping of James Cross, Oct. 5.

Blind 56 Years — He Sees

Frank Leftly, 56, and his wife Betty, smile at their 10-month-old child Kimberley at their home in Toronto. For Frank Leftly, it is the first time he has seen either. Blind from birth, he recently underwent surgery to remove cataracts from his eyes. He now has 10 per cent vision, the same as his wife. (CP Wirephoto)

Loses Job, Regains Sight

TORONTO (CP) — For Frank Leftley, 56, losing his job turned out to be good luck—it resulted in his being able to see for the first time in his life.

A piano tuner, Mr. Leftley applied for a special allowance when a factory laid him off. Government specialists who examined him decided surgery could give him partial vision.

As a result he can now see his wife and five children, read newspaper headlines, and take a look at the world around him.

"Believe me, it's a wonderful world to see," he said Monday.

The operation to remove the cataracts obscuring Mr. Leftley's vision was performed last December and he now has about 10 per cent vision—about the same as his wife Betty.

Mr. Leftley is learning to distinguish colors now and setting up his own business repairing pianos.

"The world is a great place," he said. "I've got a lot to look forward to."

Superb Acting In the Price

NEW YORK (AP) — Arthur Miller's play, The Price, plus some superb acting gave television viewers a fine 90 minutes of drama on NBC Wednesday night.

The author was probing deep into ruptured family relationships, bringing together after their father's death two brothers who had been estranged for years.

George C. Scott, disciplined and believable, played the resentful brother who had assumed responsibility over the years for a dependent father, believing it had caused him to miss college and wind up as a policeman with a shaky marriage and bleak future. Barry Sullivan was the brother who followed his ambition and became a successful surgeon.

The confrontation came in a dingy furniture-filled room in a condemned Manhattan brownstone. The policeman and his fed-up wife were meeting a used furniture dealer in hopes of getting a few hundred dollars for the shabby furniture.

Gradually the weariness and defeat in the man was revealed, first in his attitude toward his wife, played sensitively by Colleen Dewhurst, a Montreal native and Scott's real-life wife, and finally spilling out furiously with the appearance of his brother. As emotions boiled, it became evident that behind the facade of success and money, the doctor's life was even more of a mess than his brother's. It also developed that the policeman's sacrifice was essentially of his own making rather than necessary.

Miller's way of revealing characters bit by bit is particularly effective in television's intimacy. It was a real television treat, a taste of good theatre, in the Hall of Fame series.

More Irritable

VERONA, Italy (AP) — Viper snakes in Italy are growing longer, more numerous, more aggressive and more irritable, snake expert Franco Gentili said. He said the poisonous reptiles bit twice as many people in the 1965-69 period as in the preceding 10 years.

Early VWs. Late VWs.
And every VW
in between.

Ever heard the theory that the nice thing about buying a used VW is nobody knows how used it really is?

Some of our owners tell us this. That's why we'd like to remind you we've a lot of good used VWs on hand right now.

Some are used a little. Some a little more. Come see us and confuse your neighbours.

Four Die In Fire At Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — Four bodies were recovered early today after a fire swept through a four-storey apartment building, sending scores of residents fleeing through windows into 10-degrees-below-zero temperatures.

Police and fire officials reported that 17 persons were injured, seven serious enough to be kept in hospital. Some of the injured were firemen.

The blaze raged for nearly seven hours in the 50-year-old building on downtown St. Jean Street in Upper Town. It was brought under control about 6 a.m.

Forty families lived in the apartment block and eyewitnesses said they saw occupants jump from the third floor, some of them in night clothes and some even with their clothes burned from their bodies.

One man was reported to have climbed down the irregular outside wall of the apartment. He jumped clear when he got down to about 20 feet above ground level.

Identification of the dead was not possible immediately.

The building contained a ground-floor restaurant and several business offices as well as apartment suites. The restaurant was Le Gourmet.

Cause of the blaze was being investigated.

Some of the fleeing occupants were unable to get to the front door and had to smash upper-storey windows. Smoke billowed from the building as firemen brought several down on aerial ladders.

Hubert Poulin, working in a store opposite the burning building, said he saw two young girls on the third floor throw themselves out a window.

One fell to the sidewalk while the other fell into a fireman's net.

Rev. Louis Pare, fire department chaplain, said what he saw terrified him. People were literally jumping out of windows with burning clothes on or almost naked, he said.

Cause of the fire was not known immediately.

Housebuilders Told They Face Record Year

EDMONTON (CP) — Economic indicators point to a record housebuilding year in Canada but the industry must study carefully the needs of Canadians for shelter.

Delegates to the Housing and Urban Development Association convention which ended Wednesday were told by Robert Andras, federal minister responsible for housing, that a record 220,000 units would be started this year compared with the previous mark of 210,000 units in 1969.

Mr. Andras suggested the industry must concentrate on providing accommodation for persons whose income is low or modest.

Delegates were told more money is expected to be available in the mortgage market.

During the three-day convention—during which the association changed its name from the National House Builders Association—speakers said builders must spend more money on finding out what people want, rather than millions of dollars on technological research.

There will be a swing to smaller units because of the dropping birth rate and, delegates were told, condominiums may be the answer to Canada's housing problems.

Mr. Hanford said many people now consider children a luxury and realize they are not a necessity; three-bedroom apartments will be doomed.

He said there will be trends away from single-family homes in major urban areas because of rising costs. These would be replaced by condominiums to make better use of available land.

But such new developments will have to be ecology-conscious because "no longer can we get away with providing" just swimming pools, sauna baths and recreation rooms.

In resolutions, the association called on Ottawa to foster creation of a central mortgage bank for the purpose of buying and selling residential mortgages.

This bank would stabilize financing for housing, make the supply of funds more elastic and create an improved climate for housing.

The association also took its perennial swing at the federal 11-per-cent sales tax on building materials, urging it be removed or rebated to the first purchaser of a new house.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

We All Get Sick Of Hearing 'Don't'

The teenager says to his parents, "I wish you'd stop preaching." The adult says to his doctor, "You told me to stop smoking the last time I was here. Why do you have to tell me again?" I suppose the obvious answer is that the patient is still smoking.

Many patients rebel against our advice because we are their parent - images. From infancy, through childhood and young adulthood they were plain sick of hearing, "Don't do this" or "You'd better not do that." Now that they are grown-up, they think: "I'm not a child anymore. I,ll do as I please, and nobody — but nobody — is going to stop me."

So it is that thousands go about killing themselves, sooner or later, by persisting in the cigarette habit although they know it has dangerous potentials. It's the human being's rationalization that "it may happen to the next fellow, but it won't happen to me."

I wonder whether smokers think often of the responsibilities to their families. But there I go, preaching again. Let a son tell it about his father in the following letter:

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I'd like to comment on Mr. U's note which you reprinted in your column recently. He seems to think that cigarette smoking will have no effect on him.

My father started smoking when he was a teenager. He chain - smoked all his life, at least four packs a day, and never had any serious illness or operations until he was 60 years old.

But at age 60, he became ill and died within six months of lung cancer and throat cancer. It was not pleasant for the rest of us to see him waste away to nothing before his death. Some just cheat death a little longer than others.

Seeing him and what cancer can do was enough to stop me from smoking. I prefer not to gamble with my life. Mr. U, it's never too late to stop. — Mr. T.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been taking three steambaths a week in an attempt to lose weight. Are they harmful? — Mr. A.

Comment: An occasional steambath is not harmful. But like many others, you're seeking a short cut to weight loss. You may think I'm being ironical, but all I can say for the steambaths is that you'll come out clean — but not necessarily thin. For most overweight people, the most horrible four - letter word is D-I-E-T. It's really not so bad as it sounds.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have deep pit marks after the terrible experience of suffering from acne for years. Will you give me the name of the operation that's supposed to help? You had it in one of your columns about a year ago. — Mr. M.

Comment: Probably you mean "dermabrasion." See a skin specialist. He will explain it to you. It is often quite effective, so be hopeful that you will look better.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My friends are criticizing me for not having gone to my husband's funeral. I did not go because to have seen mim in his casket would have been too much of an ordeal for me.

I have heart trouble, and am even too weak to walk around the house. Besides, I wish to remember him as he was when alive and at home. Please let me know if I should pay any attention to these friends. — Mrs. X.

Comment: Friends? Who is to judge whether or not you should live with guilt-feelings? Only you can answer to yourself. Don't depend upon friends' verdicts.

Swordfish Kills Man

FORT DE FRANCE, Martinique (Reuter) — A local fisherman was killed Wednesday when he was speared through the chest by a large swordfish.

Witnesses said the swordfish was dozing on the surface of the sea when it was awakened by the engine of the ship from which Francois Moreau and his friends were going to fish.

The fish suddenly jumped several yards out of the water and pierced the fisherman through the chest.

Police Don't Like Daisies

Thoughts at Large:

A lady tore the decal daisies off her station wagon and replaced them with an American flag decal; she reports that with the daisies on her car she was stopped at least twice a week by police squads; with the flag, she hasn't been stopped once in two months.

Most of us take it as a compliment when an old friend tells us our looks haven't changed much in 20 years; but I would construe it as an insult, for I want my face and bearing to show some signs of the struggle for self-mastery over the years.

Incidentally, there is another fine Napoleon - in - exile quotation, on the same subject, that hardly anyone knows: "The more I study the world, the more I am convinced of the inability of brute force to create anything durable."

Some people are congenitally unfair-minded that when they dial a wrong number they get mad at the vice that answers.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Be yourself; pay no attention to people distracting or trying to discourage you. Standard procedures, common courtesy go a long way in smoothing your progress.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): A run begins now of several weeks of interesting, encouraging, expansive social experience. Things are looking up for both personal and business action.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): This is a day of good opportunity — it's strictly up to you in what direction you wish to direct your energies, and how hard you wish to press forward. There is much to be gained.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Everybody seems to be on the move except you. Use the situation to organize your plans more precisely. Line up your budgets and accounts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Where you have anything to say about what is done, give everybody concerned a lot to do or something serious to think about. Use self discipline too.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Think twice before acting. Whatever you do may be more forcible than you'd planned. Keep work concerns out of your personal relationships.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Take a firm approach to everything outside the home. You find much to watch in the clashes between others, everything to gain by remaining out of them. Your mate deserves full co-operation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Positive action in your career effort is a must today. In most other areas, it is better to keep the peace and wait for further developments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): You may be on a personality collision course with almost everybody and not realize it. Consideration for others brings best results. You tend to wind up paying the bills.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Get rid of materials and objects which have no further use, outworn or outdated clothing, etc. Don't include too many people in your planned activities.

Two Astronauts Walk Moon In Spite of Faulty Computer

Shepard Flies Ship Manually

HOUSTON (AP) — Astronaughts Alan Shepard and Edgar Mitchell, ghostly figures in an alien world walked the surface of the moon today, after a bull's eye landing that came within minutes of being cancelled by false computer signals.

Shepard's footfall, the fifth human imprint in the ancient lunar dust, was recorded at 9:45 a.m. EST, nearly five hours after he and Mitchell rode their landing craft Antares to a touchdown in the rubble-strewn Fra Mauro highlands.

"It's been a long way, but we're here," were Shepard's first words as he tested the lunar soil, which he described as very soft.

"The soil is so soft that it comes up all the way to the top of the footpad," Shepard said.

"I can see now why we have a tilt. We landed on a slope." Gazing around at the bleak and barren landscape, he remarked:

"It certainly is a stark place here at Fra Mauro. I think it's made all the more stark by the fact the sky is completely black."

To get to the lunar surface, Shepard had to take over the controls and fly his spidery ship manually to overrule a computer that threatened to abort the mission. He set down in a bowl-like depression only 60 feet off target at 4:18 a.m.

The third man in the expedition, Stuart Roosa, orbited some 70 miles overhead in the command ship Kitty Hawk, waiting the return of his companions on Saturday.

Shepard's exit was an hour behind schedule because he had a problem with his spacesuit communications system. The trouble was cleared after it was traced to an out-of-position circuit breaker.

The hatch on Antares was opened at 9:49 a.m. EST and Shepard, clad in a bulky spacesuit that wrapped him in the life-sustaining environment of his home planet, backed out and stood on a platform at the top of the LM ladder.

"Starting out the door," he reported, before gingerly backing down the nine-rung ladder attached to one of the landing legs.

He stepped into a 37-inch foot pad at the base of the ladder and then planted the 14-inch boot on his left foot onto the powdery soil.

False abort signals in the computer threatened to cancel the landing. But ground controllers, working furiously, reprogrammed the computer so that it could not inadvertently abort the landing.

Experts on the ground unlocked the secret of how to outwit the computer just 10 minutes before the astronauts started their descent.

The landing carried man's quest for knowledge to the moon for a third time, following the Apollo 11 and 12 expeditions in 1969. It hopes to complete the mission of Apollo 13, aborted last April.

Shepard and Mitchell landed in a narrow valley and spent the hours after touchdown preparing for the first of two scientific excursions on the rubble-strewn surface.

Finally, Shepard, wearing a bulky spacesuit that wrapped him in the life-sustaining environment of his home planet a quarter-million miles away opened the hatch and climbed down the ladder.

Mitchell waited inside Antares' cabin to watch and photograph Shepard's progress before venturing down himself.

A black and white television camera relayed to earth Shepard's initial steps on the surface and then showed Mitchell as he descended to the surface 10 minutes later.

From the lunar lander, Shepard reported that they touched down in a bowl-like depression just about 60 feet short of the exact aiming point, an "X" on the map in the centre of a 400-foot circle.

Mideast Wells May Be Closed

LONDON (AP) — The oil countries around the Persian Gulf may shut down their wells after Feb. 15 if they don't get a big price increase, but Western Europe's major countries have reserve stocks to last them two to six months, a survey today showed.

Austria, Belgium, Spain and Switzerland are in the best shape, with six months' supply. France has enough for four months, Britain for three, and West Germany for 2½ months.

The 10 nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which supply 85 per cent of Western Europe's oil, warned Thursday at the end of a meeting in Tehran that unless the companies that buy their oil agree to price rises of around 36 cents a barrel in the next 10 days, they will adopt legislation imposing the increase.

The OPEC said its members will withhold their oil from the West if the companies hold out.

If the flow of oil is cut, some governments probably will move quickly to conserve dwindling stocks by rationing of gasoline and fuel oil.

Teachers' Strike Closes Schools

MONTREAL (CP) — About 50,000 students in the northern district of Montreal missed classes today as 2,400 French-speaking teachers continued their daily walkouts to protest job reclassification.

About 80 schools under the jurisdiction of the Montreal Catholic school commission were affected by the walkout.

Three high schools and 12 elementary schools with about 12,000 students in the west end of the city were also closed today in the first rotating walkout by 1,400 English-speaking teachers who decided Thursday to begin walkouts against the Protestant school board of Greater Montreal.

Egypt May Clear Suez

CAIRO (CP) — Egypt began observing a new 30-day truce along the Suez canal today after offering to start clearing the blocked waterway immediately in return for a partial Israel withdrawal from the eastern side.

President Anwar Sadat announced Thursday night that he was prolonging the six-month-old military standstill.

Sadat proposed that the Israelis, entrenched on the other side of the 100-mile long waterway since the 1967 war, should start pulling out during the month. In return, he said, Egypt would start clearing the canal for international shipping.

Closure of the waterway has cost Egypt more than $200 million annually in transit fees. This loss has been made up by Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Libya.

Brick-tossing Tots Taunt Tommies

BELFAST (CP — Reinforced British troops, attempting to restore peace to this riot-torn city, faced a new pattern of taunting violence: brick-throwing children.

The tots, some no more than five years old, appear around corners in the Roman Catholic ghettos, screaming and heaving bricks and stones at the lines of troops armed with clubs and protected by shields.

More serious are nail grenades which suddenly explode, shooting piercing nails into the bodies of the troops.

Periodically, the troops move forward to scatter the bands of youths or dive into a house to arrest men wielding gasoline bombs.

Maj-Gen. Tony Farrar-Hockley, troops commander, said the house raids have yielded an assortment of machine-guns, gasoline bombs, pistols, rifles and other weapons. He blamed the latest round of riots on Irish Republican Army "provisionals"—a breakaway guerrilla group.

During a 12-hour period which ended at dawn Thursday, seven soldiers and one police efficer were injured by automatic gunfire, home-made grenades, acid bombs and stones.

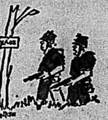
A few hours later a gang of youths, using women chanting anti-British songs as shields, threw a bomb at a hall used as army headquarters.

Before dawn broke today, 27 gas and acid bombers as well as stone throwers were arrested and added to dozens of others already in Belfast jails.

Reinforcing the 6,000 British troops on duty are 600 new arrivals including men of the Royal Scots Greys commanded by the Duke of Kent whose three children are under detective guard after receiving unidentified kidnap threats. The Royal Scots Greys are equipped with armored scout cars.

The British Army said in a statement that the duke, a cousin of the Queen, will lead his men wherever necessary.

"If this means action in the streets, he will be there."



'You sure this is the way out of Vietnam, Sarg?'

Forays Made In Laos

SAIGON (CP) — U.S. fighter-bombers attacked two anti-aircraft missile sites in North Vietnam, the U.S. command announced today. Meanwhile, small South Vietnamese reconnaissance units were making forays into southern Laos and other Saigon troops fought a hard battle in Cambodia.

The attack on the missile sites was the 10th "protective reaction" attack in North Vietnam this year to counter the threat of anti-aircraft fire against American planes bombing the Ho Chi Minh trail through southern Laos.

Although South Vietnamese reconnaissance units of perhaps 150 to 200 men were reported moving into southern Laos, there was no evidence that Saigon troops have crossed the border in sizable numbers.

Associated Press correspondent William Barton reported from the border west of Khe Sanh that Wednesday he saw about 20 troop-carrying helicopters cross the border into Laos. Such helicopters carry about eight soldiers each. And South Vietnamese sources said they were carrying South Vietnamese troops.

About 20,000 South Vietnamese troops are massed in the northwest corner of South Vietnam, poised for a major thrust across the border if President Nixon orders it. President Nguyen Van Thieu is reported to have left the decision up to Nixon.

Nine thousand U.S. troops are taking part in a big operation which has been named Dewey Canyon II, but U.S. officials have said repeatedly no American ground troops will cross the border.

No significant contact has been reported in the operation launched last Saturday to counter a North Vietnamese buildup which the U.S. command said is threatening the northwestern part of South Vietnam.

Another 20,000 South Vietnamese are pushing into Cambodia west and northwest of Saigon to keep the North Vietnamese from moving back into the base areas U.S. and South Vietnamese forces drove them out of last May and June.

Police Injured Fighting Students

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — More than 100 policemen were injured by stones today in clashes with several thousand Indian students who attacked the Pakistan high commission here for the third straight day.

Police fired tear gas shells and made several charges with truncheons to beat back the students as they launched their attack across the grass outside the Pakistani mission and set a police truck on fire.

Stokely-Van Camp to Close Down Plant

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Stokely - Van Camp of Canada Ltd. has announced it is closing its Trenton canning factory, one of the largest seasonal employers in the area.

As many as 170 were hired yearly in the company's manufacturing season that ran four to five months beginning in late June. An on-site warehouse employs 12 now on a year - round basis. Annual payroll was $700,000.

The firm, with head offices at Essex, Ont., ran a well-established operation on the bayshore at the foot of Dufferin St., canning Quinte crops annually for 30 years.

Product lines included canned corn, peas, lima beans and apple sauce under two labels, Stokley's and Van Camp's.

Only one reason was given by the company for its decision to close down the plant — "inability to economically supply a sewage system to conform to the Ontario Water Resources Commission specifications."

Referring to the shut-down decision a Stokely press release expresses regret that "this action had to be taken."

Plant manager, J. B. Harder, told The Intelligencer several methods of pollution control had been investigated by the company but none was feasible.

The Lower Trent Region Conservation Report released at Batawa Tuesday by the Department of Energy and Resources Management cites the waterfront operation as a polluter of the Bay of Quinte.

"Local warehouse facilities will remain open to service valued customers in the area" the company statement says. However, Mr. Harder explains that "this will close down too, in due time — two or three months" when 200,000 cases of produce stored there are removed.

The Stokely-Van Camp works canned varying amounts annually, ranging from 1,500 to 3,000 acres of local farm and orchard produce.

Trenton Mayor Duncan McDonald expressed concern over the Stokely decision. He said this morning that the loss to many family incomes through seasonal employment there would be sizeable, even more so to rural people who sold to the company.

"The whole matter goes back a couple of years . . . We met with Stokely people last summer and they were on an extension then from OWRC," he said.

Cost of feeding their effluent to the already overburdoned municipal treatment plant would have been prohibitive. A fee based on the large amount of waste leaving the canning factory would have been levied against the firm.

"They had hoped to solve the problem by less expensive methods," Mayor McDonald said, explaining that options considered were to spray the waste over land or to treat it in holding tanks into the bay . . . these were also uneconomical.

Impact on agriculture on Northumberland and Durham Counties will not be great, Morley Webster, food representative with the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Brighton, said this morning.

However, he said farmers in the Wooler area had been growing lima beans for Stokely and the prospect was good for this to develop into a substantial part of the agricultural economy.

The tomato business in the combined counties had been virtually wiped out through closure of other canning factories in the past and "the beans looked good," he said.

In Hastings, only a handful of contract farmers will be affected by the closure because the company had initiated a program of controlling lands for its own use, Doug Tipper, agricultural representative for the county at Stirling said today.

He said the number of farmers with Stokely contracts had fallen off so that impact will be less now than it would have been five years ago. Many former contract farmers are now growing grain corn for milling or livestock feed.

Stokely - Van Camp's Essex plant is also experiencing similar problems. The company announced Feb. 1 that they would discontinue processing at Essex because it was uneconomically unfeasible to meet OWRC recommendations relating to disposal of waste materials into the town sewage lagoon.

Town leaders will be supported by Richard Ruston, MPP (Lib., Essex - Kent) in their fight to retain the 30-year-old factory.

Trenton Industry Reacts to Report

Spokesmen for two major industries cited as polluters of the Trent River in the Lower Trent Conservation Report say they have taken action to control the effluent from their plants.

Dr. George Tomlinson, vice - president in charge of research and environmental technology said in a statement that it was unfortunate that statements made about the Trenton Domtar mill were based on samples taken more than two years ago in 1968.

Although the conservation report, prepared from department of energy and resources management data, calls Domtar "the major source of pollution on the Trent River", a company statement issued at Trenton today says "by paper mill standards, Domtar is a non-polluter".

Domtar admits polluting the Trent, but says its rate of pollution has been reduced by one third since the research team that surveyed the river finished its work two years ago.

Since then, the company has launched a $700,000 program to clean up its operation and expects to meet Ontario Water Resources standards by spring.

The report says tons of waste, much of it a dark, oily material, are dumped into the river each day by the Domtar cardboard-manufacturing mill.

It says the river's aquatic life does not recover from the effects of the poisonous waste during its short trip to the Bay of Quinte.

Dr. Tomlinson said he was surprised by the statement with regard to toxicity in view of the excellent fishing in the Trent River.

This morning, Cy MacDonald, chairman of the LTRCA, said "Domtar has done a great deal to reduce pollution since we (LTRCA) have been in existence."

No recent reports of water quality below the mill are available, he said.

"In all fairness to industry, we should be able to sample the water and get an analysis within a day or two so we can keep a running record," added Mr. MacDonald. "But provincial laboratories are swamped with water samples."

He commented that he had not noticed many fishermen fishing the east banks of the river near the mill.

The report said that "large quantities of suds were discharged with the effluent from the Bata Shoe operation at Batawa.

Lee Kersiwitz, a Bata senior executive, termed the statement "ridiculous".

However, there may be thermal pollution from the plant.

Mr. Kersiwitz said the 300,000 gallons of water drawn from the Trent for cooling machinery in the factory is returned to the river in the same state, but it may be "a little warmer".

Stokely-Van Camp announced today it would close its canning factory because of the cost of anti-pollution devices required by the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

Knox Gelatine, cited by the report as another industrial polluter of the Trent now is hooked into the town's sanitary sewer. William Lawson, secretary - treasurer for LTRCA said today "there is no local pollution around the Knox plant".

But he added that the Trenton sewage disposal plant frequently operates over its capacity, and at these times wastes have to be dumped into the river.

Commissioners Get $200 Raise

PICTON (Staff) — Town council has approved a $200 annual raise for Picton's three police commissioners. Members of the three-man police commission have previously received salaries of $100 a year and recently petitioned council for a raise to $500 annually.

Chairman of the finance and administration committee Bessie Ward, told council that her committee felt that $500 would be "too fast a jump," and decided to "go half way". Members of the commission originally seeking a raise were chairman Jesse Mason, County Judge Wilfred S. Lane and former mayor H. J. McFarland.

'Mounted' Police Envisaged

Government grants should be made available to municipal police forces to assist in the purchase of equipment necessary to enforce snowmobile regulations.

This is the feeling of Belleville city council who Monday passed a resolution asking that grants be made available to municipal police forces for the purchase of snowmobile equipment on the same basis as available to police for other motorized equipment.

The resolution was drafted by the city council resolutions committee.

Police Investigate Eight Break-ins

The Belleville Police Department was kept busy last night with a series of eight forcible entries. These break-ins are only a fraction of the rash of entries that have been occurring throughout the city for the past few weeks.

Firms and industries affected by these entries were the Brewer's Retail, Station St.; Canada Transport, Ashley's Service Station, Martinizing and Cleaning, Pinnacle St.; The Tabernacle Church, Belleville Collegiate Institute, and Lannings.

Because of the large number of incidents in the same night, the investigating officers are satisfied that the same party is responsible for them all. There was also a similarity in the method used for gaining entry into each of the buildings.

At the Belleville Collegiate the thieves made their way to the machine shop, stole a welding unit, and used this to cut their way into the school safe.

A police spokesman said that four of the incidents were spotted by the patrolling officers. The rest were reported that night by the individual proprieters.

Of the eight robberies, no clue was left to the identity or whereabouts of the criminals. The police urge anyone who might have information as to the identity of these people to inform the Police department.

Over the last few weeks, there has been an excessive number of forcible entries like this. For this reason, breaking and entering have been the chief concern of the Belleville Police department. This has led to the closing of 15 cases and the sending of nine juveniles and teenagers to court.

LINDA WILSON

ROBERT BLEWETT

Certificates Awarded

Two radiological technicians from Belleville General Hospital, Robert Blewett and Miss Linda Wilson, received their certificates Saturday at the 13th annual graduation exercises of the Ontario Society of Radiological Technicians (Eastern) held in Kingston. Mr. Blewett was gold medalist for the graduating class of 24 students from Eastern Ontario hospitals, the third time in which a Belleville student has won the honor since 1962.

Debbie Kerr of OSD Winter Carnival Queen

A blonde-haired, blue-eyed 18-year-old student at the Ontario School for the Deaf was Queen in the first official event of the carnival, held at Centennial Secondary School.

Debbie Kerr of 1 Eastwood Park Drive in Belleville was chosen from a total of 24 high school and business contestants ranging in age from 16 to 19.

First runnerup was Debra Saltus, an 18-year-old Bermuda girl studying at the Ontario Business College here. Second princess was Donna Guilfoyle, a 17-year-old student at Nicholson Catholic College.

A former carnival princess at OSD's own pageant, Debbie found her selection "very hard to believe" but surrounded by parents, friends and fellow students, her ever-present smile and obvious happiness attested to the thrill she experienced when she was chosen.

Both princesses informed The Intelligencer that last night was the first time they had entered such a contest.

Debra Saltus remarked that being chosen "came as a surprise," a fact echoed by Donna Guilfoyle, who added, "I was really scared."

Five judges from the Tweed Kinsmen and Kinette Clubs, Dave Coulter, Jerry Hughes, Shirley Ballantyne, Marion Cope and Corley Hughes; judged the girls on poise, appearance and their response to questions posed to them

Mrs. Gayle Burroughs, president of the Belleville Kinettes, voiced the judge's impressions that "the choice was difficult."

She explained that the club might consider restricting the number of entrants to no more than 30. "I don't think we could handle more than 30."

The carnival queen was presented with a tiara, queen's trophy, a bouquet of red roses and a complete ski outdonated by local merchants.

The two princesses also received trophies, ski outfits, and bouquets of red carnations.

Each of the contestants, in evening dress, were presented corsages by the Chamber of Commerce.

Following the judging the other contestants received an engraved souvenir coffee spoon from the Kinettes, together with tickets to the carnival teen dance and other small gifts.

The young ladies were introduced by Walter Wickett, each being escorted onto the Centennial Auditorium stage by a member of the Kinsmen Club.

Miss Kerr is eligible to enter into the 17th annual Miss Eastern Ontario pageant being held in Perth, March 27.

Contestants for this event must be single and between the ages of 17 and 24. The winner is automatically entered into the Miss Dominion of Canada Pageant.

Miss Kerr, when informed of her eligibility, said she "would be proud" to represent Belleville.

Mrs. Burroughs said that "plans are pending" for the carnival queen's entry.

Surrounded by guests, thoroughly enjoying the evening, the 1971 Carnival Queen will begin her many duties with the Winter Carnival at the torchlight parade tonight and later at the Memorial Arena for the Senior OHA hockey game between Belleville Mohawks and Oakville Oaks.

IN MEMORIAM

MITTS — This is a story thats being told
Of the boy who searched for the "Windows of Gold,"
The beautiful windows he saw far away,
When he looked in the valley at sunrise each day,
And he yearned to go down to the valley below,
But he lived on a mountain that was covered with snow,
And he knew it would be a difficult trek,
But that was a journey he wanted to make,
So he planned by day and he dreamed by night,
Of how he could reach "The Great Shining Light . . .
And one golden morning when dawn broke through,
And the valley sparkled with diamonds of dew,
He started to climb down the mountainside,
With the "Windows of Gold" as his goal and his guide . . .
He entered the peaceful valley town,
Just as the golden sun went down,
But he seemed to have lost his "Guiding Light,"
The windows were dark that had once been bright,
And hungry and tired and lonely and cold,
He cried, "Won't You Show Me The Windows of Gold?"
And a kind hand touched him and said, "Behold,
High On The Mountain Are The Windows Of Gold"
For the sun going down in a great golden ball,
Had burnish the windows of his cabin so small,
And The Kingdom of God with its Great Shining Light,
Like the Golden Windows that shone so bright,
Is not a far distant place, somewhere,
It's as close to you as a silent prayer,
And your search for GOD will end and begin,
When we look for HIM and FIND HIM WITHIN.

Potter's Write-in A Pleasant Surprise

Dr. Richard Potter — who is not even a candidate for the Ontario Conservative leadership — is the favorite for provincial premier among some rural residents.

The Quinte MPP was a surprise addition to a poll taken by Farm and Country — the province's biggest farm newspaper.

Dr. Potter polled 5.9 per cent of the 2,560 ballots received in the survey

"That's pretty good — considering I'm not even on the list," said Dr. Potter this morning.

The poll indicated a definite preference among rural residents for Allan Lawrence, as successor to the leadership.

Mr. Lawrence polled 24.2 per cent of the ballots.

By comparison, Education Minister William Davis received only 12.5 per cent and Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, 16 per cent, and Financial and Commercial Affairs A. B. R. Lawrence 12.9 per cent.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch was second with 19 per cent.

The poll draws interest from the fact that of the Conservatives' 68 seats in the legislature, about two-third are rural or have a big rural vote.

Many of the farmers blamed Mr. Davis for rising education costs and the matching increase in property taxes.

Mr. McKeough was sharply taken to task by many farmers over regional government and reassessment.

The poll suggested Mr. Lawrence's high showing results from his statement to cut education costs.

"Overnight, he must have become an instant hero in thousands of farm homes," said Farm and Country editor John Phillips.

His biggest liability is that he appears to have no power base, outside Northern Ontario.

The strong showing of Mr. Welch was described as another startling surprise."

"More than any candidate he has a tremendous power base — 12 per cent of his support came from the Niagara Region . . ." said Mr. Phillips.

"His strength is very weak in rural southwestern Ontario, but is fairly strong from Perth County in the west to Leeds in the east."

City Industry Growing --With A Few Setbacks

The expansion of 1969 industrial prospects became a reality in 1970. "Every new industrial citizen kept its commitment," said Gerald Joyce, chairman of the Belleville Industrial Commission in his report tabled at the Wednesday night annual meeting.

"Good faith was exercised by all concerned."

Mr. Joyce listed such successes as Brooke-Bond's employment of 108 people; Electronic Controls increase in staff by 20, with indications of further employment of 10 in the new plant in the northwest industrial park; AOCO employed 75 new people; Constellation Finishing Co. added 55 to its present staff of 65 with expansion of 20,000 square feet of building (previously scheduled for 1973); completion of Wilson Sporting Goods modern building in the northwest industrial park with 25 employees . . . there is a proposal for another 25 workers in 1971; Northern Electric's total work force of 960 with "no major change" in level of employees.

However, "some disappointments were experienced by us in 1970."

Amplifone's curtailment of production at its Belleville plant and the loss of Procter and Gamble's proposed plant in Sidney Township were singled out in the report as major blows to the community.

The success of landing the Mobil Plastics $1.5 million plant was attributed to the hard work of Mr. Joyce and Fred Bemis, who took over the position of Industrial Commissioner for Belleville, replacing Ray Brown.

Mr. Joyce explained that Mr. Bemis "carried (the Mobil Plastics) file through to its completion."

"This community is fortunate in having Fred Bemis on our team."

In an interview following the annual Industrial Commission meeting, Mr. Bemis explained that "we'll be telling it like it is . . . we'll be releasing only true facts" concerning industrial growth in Belleville.

Mr. Bemis informed the commission that he keeps a commercial resource file listing available commercial real estate.

We're urging "economic development" rather than restricting interests to industry.

"We're working for their benefit as well," he said.

Mr. Bemis also explained that for far-reaching effect, a new Industrial Commission brochure listing present industry, labor potential, transportation facilities; in fact, everything concerning industry, will be prepared in 1971.

Mayor J. Russell Scott, a member of the board of directors, remarked that there is "not another community in Canada that has the business opportunities Belleville has."

A surplus of $1,140 was recorded at the end of 1970 by the Industrial Commission.

Mr. Joyce explained that this was due partially to the "ad budget not being used" but it will be used for promotional material in 1971. The Industrial Commission had a deficit of $478 at the end of 1969.

Veteran Editor Marks 50th Year

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — "Lindley Calnan here," the trademark telephone greeting of Prince Edward's most prominent newsman now has answered Picton Gazette callers for 50 years.

Mr. Calnan, who joined the Gazette staff in 1921, this year is marking his golden anniversary as managing editor of the county's hometown paper.

The veteran newspaperman yesterday recalled his early working days when he and his father, the late A. E. Calnan published an eight - page edition weekly. To prepare the newspaper for publication Mr. Calnan with seven other employees worked a 49 hour week for a total payroll of about $150 a week.

In contrast, today the Gazette payroll totals approximately $1,500 weekly for 17 employees working a 40 hour week. Overtime workers receive time and a half.

Mr. Calnan observed that the newspaper, now published on a bi-weekly basis, retains its original purpose — involvement. He explained that it has always been the Gazette's policy to work "with and for individuals, firms, societies, churches, and all causes which promise to benefit the nature of community life or put more dollars in local pockets. Involvement in local service is the answer, he asserted.

A graduate of Picton collegiate, Lindley Calnan was a student at Victoria College, Toronto, when World War I was declared. He attended the school's officers' training corps and qualified for a commission. Later he trained for a re-commission and was ordered aboard the battleship HMS Ajax. A highlight of his naval service unfolded at Scapa Flow on the North Sea when he witnessed the surrender of the German fleet. Mr. Calnan vividly recalls his wartime experiences and as a tribute to Prince Edward's 'Old Sweats' two years ago published a World War I special Gazette edition. He plans to publish a second salute to Prince Edward veterans later this year, detailing Canada's part in World War II.

Mr. Calnan refers to his journalistic ability as "an inherited trait" since his father, the late A. Edward Calnan was a noted newspaperman who became managing editor of the Gazette in 1913.

"As a boy I was an avid reader," said the editor, "reading everything I could get my hands on." He remarked that mysteries written by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle were among his favorites. Today he enjoys biographical books since "they tell the accomplishments of the great and the near great."

Mr. Calnan has worked at the Gazette since his naval discharge with the exception of one year spent with a Toronto investment firm. He observed that his duties included many tasks among them bundling papers for mailing and delivering them to the post office.

Mr. Calnan became an expert reporter attending numerous evening meetings after his day's work at the Gazette office. "It's impossible to be successful as a reporter if you delay writing your stories," said Mr. Calnan. He added that he made it a practice to write his account of a meeting immediately afterward, whenever possible.

Today Mr. Calnan continues to write special articles for the Picton Gazette but now employs "operation early bird" to achieve his style. He noted that he usually rises at 3.30 or 4.00 a.m. and enjoys a mug of tea in his study while preparing his daily calendar. Later he reads for a brief period before writing stories for which he has gathered material. By breakfast time he has accomplished a substantial amount of work.

Mr. Calnan's office is located in a spacious modern building on King Street just a short distance from the paper's original location on Ross Street. From early in 1900 until 1961 the Gazette was published in the Ross Street offices in the IOOF block. The newspaper was moved to its present location in 1962. Mr. Calnan observed that the building had formerly been occupied by the Trentonian and the Picton Times, the opposition bi-weekly. The Trentonian published there for a short time before vacating while the Times had set up only a portion of its equipment before deciding to return to its Main Street location. In 1962 the Picton Times ceased publication and the Gazette became the only town newspaper.

"The Gazette is one of the oldest established newspapers in Canada continually published and now ranking in about sixth place," said Mr. Calnan. He stated that several of the older papers such as the Whig-Standard and the Brockville Recorder and Times are amalgamations.

Mr. Calnan, who has occupied the editor's chair for 50 years, yesterday recalled his proudest achievement during that time. He referred to the publication of the Gazette's centennial edition in 1930 when a special 56 page publication appeared on the newsstands. The Gazette staff was assisted in this work by Toronto reporter Anne Merrill, whose father was a Picton judge.

An advocate of involvement Mr. Calnan exemplifies it through his work with community organizations and service clubs. He has served three terms on town council and for a number of years has acted as secretary-treasurer of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce. He is actively interested in tourist promotion and for 25 years the Gazette office doubled as a tourist information desk staffed by Mr. Calnan and his employees.

A past president of the chamber of commerce Mr. Calnan is a member of the Picton Rotary Club, the United Empire Loyalists' association, the Albany Club, Toronto; the Prince Edward Golf and Country Club and the Masonic lodge.

Although many changes have taken place at the Picton Gazette in the past 50 years, the familiar voice declaring "Lindley Calnan here" continues to guide the bi-weekly paper in progressing with the community it serves.

Two-Fisted Temper

Jim Kirk, a maintenance employee at Centennial Secondary School, gingerly removes broken glass from a shattered door. Police were called in during the 1971 Winter Carnival Queen pageant to disperse several "undesirables" that, by their rowdy actions, threatened to disturb the colorful event. The three youths were quietly removed and the selection of the queen continued uninterrupted. Following the departure of the youths, spectators reported that an unidentified "Centennial students . . . put his fist through the door . . . really mature youngsters!"

Bernard Hepburn Heads Chamber

PICTON (Staff) — The annual meeting of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce held last night at Prince Edward Yacht Club closed with an election of officers.

The new executive is: President, Bernard (Barney) Hepburn; first vice-president Merle Pearsall; second vice - president Archie Kingma; secretary William Duggan.

PUC Head To Be Town Solicitor

PICTON (Staff) — Town council has agreed to hire lawyer Jack Ward as town solicitor and town prosecutor when his resignation as chairman of the Picton Utilities Commission becomes official. Bylaws appointing Mr. Ward to these jobs could not be given third reading this week since he has not yet resigned from the PUC. Deputy-reeve James Bird suggested that the lawyer would be faced with a conflict of interest unless he resigned his post with the PUC.

Three Picton lawyers indicated that they would be interested in the jobs offered by council, among them Mr. Ward. He was chosen by a committee of council to fill the positions which became vacant with the death of lawyer Reginald E. Nourse. The town solicitor's job carries an annual retainer fee of $1,500. The position of town prosecutor offers $500 annually.

Town clerk Andrew Jarvis has said that Mr. Ward informed him verbally that he planned to resign chairmanship of the PUC if chosen by council as its solicitor and town prosecutor.

Economy Must Move

Nothing succeeds like success, as Oscar Wilde so aptly pointed out in an earlier time, and it was with this premise in mind that Prince Edward Hastings MP George Hees was able to tell a Vancouver audience the other day of past successes in stimulating the Canadian economy and fighting unemployment.

But before alluding to the past, and to the policies of a decade ago when he was Trade Minister, Mr. Hees pursued his ideas on tax incentives. These would entail lowering business taxes, starting with the cancellation of the enduring (but nevertheless vexatious) 11 per cent sales tax on construction materials with a view to reducing production costs and producing more jobs, and he pointed to the parallel in the United States afforded by President Nixon's reduction of $2.6 billion in taxes for the current year . . . lowering of income tax by 6 per cent, to stimulate purchasing power and thus increase sales, production and jobs . . . and introduction of the kind of tax incentives aimed at increasing productivity which he said had been used with success in Japan and West Germany.

* * *

So why does the Trudeau government not take the advice of a man like Mr. Hees, who is nothing if not experienced in the ways of business and industrial promotion? It was not the first time he had spoken on this theme and Finance Minister Benson had already rejected such ideas, noting that a reduction in income tax would cost more than a billion dollars. Instead, the minister is standing firmly behind such government measures as the $150 million federal boost to the provinces. Of this, $68 million is destined for Quebec which he said was ready to let tenders and proceed with providing jobs out of the money provided. That this is a slow growth, however, seems evident by the lack of information of any new enterprises gaining ground in Quebec or anywhere else. All we hear of is still more people out of work.

Mr. Hees meanwhile counters (and this is what he told his audience out west) by saying that the tax losses which could occur in the first year would subsequently be made up many times over by more people working and paying income taxes, instead of drawing unemployment insurance and direct relief; more commodities being sold and paying commodity taxes; more corporation taxes, due to greater production and a consequent lowering of cost per unit, thus making available more profits to tax.

* * *

Yet the Government holds back. Perhaps it feels such policies would only bring a fresh round of inflation which it claims is now cured. Perhaps it feels (and Prime Minister Trudeau said as much the other day) that the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate has reached its peak and will decline in the next few months.

Mr. Hees would further reinforce the tax incentive idea with a parallel export drive to increase sales of manufactured products which he said had increased in 1970 by only 4.8 per cent over 1969. He recalled the sending of 25 trade missions overseas in 1960, the trebling of foreign trade fair appearances by Canada, the bringing in of top United States buyers to view trade exhibitions here and similarly, 600 buyers from Canada's chief markets around the world.

This trade drive, Mr. Hees recalled, turned ten years of trade deficits into a surplus in the first year and started unemployment on a downward path. He went on to say a Conservative government would initiate a similar program if it were in office.

* * *

Would such a program succeed again? We see no reason why not; it has the great merit of positivity, a characteristic of Mr. Hees himself, and is practical. But is the Government lagging that much in the business of increasing trade overseas? Trade Minister Pepin was in Moscow recently and this may boost Canadian sales there. The other day moreover, it was announced that Canadian sales to South Africa in 1970 are expected to top $100 million, making the republic the fourth largest customer for fully-manufactured Canadian goods.

What is the picture in other markets? Maybe Mr. Pepin's department should blow its trumpet a little louder . . . failure to do so could mean that critics like Mr. Hees should be taken more seriously.

Don Valley's Robert Kaplan

Liberal Maverick Suggests Anti-Inflation Powers

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Kaplan (L—Don Valley) says the government should prepare an "economic War Measures Act" to curb future inflation.

Arguing for a policy of selective controls on prices and incomes, Mr. Kaplan said during the budget debate:

"We need machinery to control prices, to control rents, to control wages and to control incomes.

"Jawboning does not work, public pressure does not work, guidelines do not work, and volunteer formulas have failed for want of volunteers.

"We need a system of controls, and so far this government, which has been very determined in its economic policies, has not had the guts to propose one."

This withering critique of the prices and incomes commision, created to solve inflation, was coupled with a blast at other aspects of the government's restraint policy. It was that much stronger for originating with a backbench Liberal, who by custom should keep criticism within the privacy of the weekly caucus.

Mr. Kaplan said the policy had "succeeded too well"—a reference to current high unemployment. It had been "unacceptable" in some areas.

The cabinet seldom smiles at backbench questioning of policy but in this case, Finance Minister Edgar Benson is reported to have congratulated Mr. Kaplan for a constructive speech.

That action may have reflected cabinet displeasure with the outcome of anti-inflation policies proposed by advisers. While inflation has been reined, unemployment is at its highest level in 10 years.

Mr. Kaplan said special legislation should be passed to allow rapid and comprehensive controls if inflation again should appear. The legislation would in itself provide a curb on inflationary trends, he suggested.

Furthermore, it wouldn't require a cumbersome and permanent bureaucracy. And it would allow a quick return to a free market.

"Let it sit on the shelf for implementation if and when special sectors or regions of the economy begin to heat up," he said. "Then when the powers are required, there will be public understanding and acceptance which is necessary to make them work, and there will be an effective method of breaking the spine of the inflationary spiral."

Mr. Kaplan evidently wasn't trying to commit political suicide with the speech. At 34, he is ambitious and other Liberals regard him as a cabinet possibility.

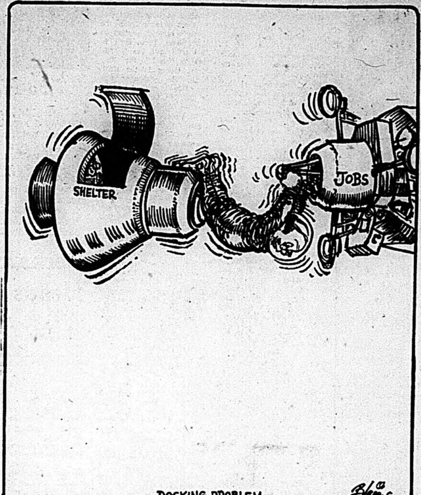
He spent $64,000, more than reported by any other MP, in his 1968 campaign for election. He has been an active member of the tax change committee. He has been passed up twice in appointments by Prime Minister Trudeau of parliamentary secretaries.

One shrewd observer says the speech may be a bid for attention, an assertion by Mr. Kaplan that he isn't a yes-man, and that he has ideas. Mr. Trudeau himself has said that the squeaky wheel gets the most grease.

The wealthy young Torontonian with the Mexican tan, deepest in the House, is known for determination and foresight.

Mr. Kaplan is said, for example, to have had his eye on a Mexican resource development. Mexican law prohibits resource ownership by foreigners, so Mr. Kaplan took his pregnant wife to Mexico.

When one of their three children was born there, the resource ownership was registered in the infant's name.



DOCKING PROBLEM

Fewer Accidents

Canadians May Be Driving More Carefully

Peterbrough Examiner

Our society's fight for safer driving and fewer accidents seems to be progressing. We are still a long way from winning the war, but, we are happy to say, we are winning an increasing number of battles.

This is what the latest figures issued by the Canada Safety Council show. Between January and September, 1970, the number of fatal accidents in Canada decreased 5.5 per cent, resulting in an even 5 per cent reduction in traffic deaths.

Translated, this means that, during this period, there were 247 fewer fatal accidents on the nations highways and that, as a result, 196 fewer people lost their lives.

One hundred and ninety-six people are alive today because they were a little more careful, drove a little slower, kept the rules a little more strictly, paid more attention to their cars' mechanical safety features or because they kept their minds and eyes on the road instead of somewhere else.

Still, there were 3,067 fatal accidents in the country (as compared to 3,247 in the same January to September period in 1969) resulting in 3,695 deaths.

The figures show that, during this period, the total number of accidents rose in Quebec, Manitoba and Alberta. In Quebec, there were 17 more fatal accidents than in the same period a year earlier while in Manitoba, despite the rise in the number of accidents, only the number of injuries rose by five. In Alberta, there were 1,094 more accidents in 1970 (Jan. to Sept.) than in 1969, resulting in 377 more injuries and two more deaths.

Interestingly, if this is the right word for it, in British Columbia in 1970 there were 4,291 fewer accidents than in 1969, (47,112) yet the number of injuries went up from 15,540 to 15,709, the number of fatal accidents from 319 to 351. There were 418 traffic deaths in 1970 and only 375 in 1969 (Jan. to Sept.)

In areas where the number of accidents rises, the number of fatalities usually rises too. Statistically, this is explainable and understandable.

Yet, figures are not everything, and we cannot entirely rely on the premise that a simple reduction in the number of accidents will necessarily reduce the number of injuries or deaths

The key is in quality; somebody some way is always responsible for an accident — there are few acts of God involved in the highways — therefore the most important factor in keeping people alive is still driver education.

The same old advice: Drive carefully.

Canadian Development Corporation

Hamilton Spectator

The long-awaited anouncement of the birth of the Canada Development Corporation was not greeted with a chorus of joy, but with doubt, criticism, and some praise, most of it faint-hearted.

Perhaps the reaction was understandable. Here was a government that had not been particularly chummy with business producing a $2 billion baby waving a Canadian flag in one hand and a prospectus in the other and prattling about profit. Truly a strange birth.

But given the difficulties endemic in the idea itself, could anyone else do better? Walter Gordon tried and in spite of —or perhaps because of — his passionate nationalism, nothing came of his CDC. The present CDC may do better when it is launched.

There is one obvious fact that is constantly ignored, although it has been there all the time. Canadians have always been able to buy shares in good Canadian-controlled corporations, and while some of them have done so, the majority have not. Is it the intention now to appeal to patriotism to get Canadians in great numbers to buy the 200 million $5 common shares and part of the $1 billion worth of preference shares? If it is, then the appeal is wrong. Business is ruled by hard-headed realism: If the CDC makes a good profit, pays good dividends and provides capital security it will find all the investors it needs. Canadians are a practical people.

Since the CDC would, in effect, be a holding company, it would be subject to the unwritten law on the stock market that generally makes the price of such shares less than the total breakup value of their holdings. It would be unfortunate if CDC shares were to be traded like penny "gambling" stocks particularly as there will be so many of them eventually.

Unsophisticated investors new to share-owning, may expect patience is the shining virtue in such matters.

Where are the businessmen of stature willing to risk their reputations on the board of the CDC? No doubt 20 brave men will be found, but how free will their decisions be of criticism? The CDC pie will be too big for politicians to keep their fingers out, not for any dishonest motive, but to get political kudos from criticizing or praising its conduct.

Imagine if the shares are up — or down — at election time, party candidates in office will be sorely tempted to point to them as an economic barometer if the price is up, and the opposition to hammer the fact if they are down.

Finance Minister Benson says the CDC will not have to "buy the past". Good, but who can doubt that had the CDC been in existence last year the pressure on it to buy the failing Ryerson Press would not have been irresistible? No doubt in the future there will be unprofitable "lemons" that hard-headed businessmen would abun but that unsophisticated investors (particularly small ones) and politicians will press the CDC to buy. That is no way to run a holding company. The CDC should not become a repository for failing businesses. It does not require much imagination to visualize MPs or mayors, when some plant in their area is closing, declaring that the CDC "should take it over".

The CDC will not be a money disbursing agent like the Canada Council, nor a commercial rescue squad. Canadian investors will expect profits; that is what it is there for. Or is it?

Long Life

Hereditary Factor

German Features

MUNICH — A medical team from Wuerzburg, west Germany reported recently on a study of 148 persons over 100 years old and said that long life is probably hereditary.

That was the chief conclusion drawn from the study which also confirmed that women tend to live longer than men: of the 148 test persons, only 33 were men.

Regardless of sex, the 100-year-olders generally had led a life rich in work but also characterized by regularity and reasonably spaced pauses for recreation.

Weight and height of those examined had dropped in comparison with 70 and 80-year olders. One third had trouble hearing or complete deafness, and many had lost the will to take part in every-day life and events.

Loneliness is a problem many oldsters, and women especially tend to have spells of depression.

And, paradoxically most centenarians die of acute illness rather than old age.

Some Firms Find Pollution Control Can Save Them Money

MONTREAL (CP) — Pollution control is rapidly becoming a big business for a Montreal company that developed an efficient process of waste destruction.

In some cases, the companies which have adopted the anti-pollution techniques find they can actually save money despite initial expenditures that could run into the millions of dollars.

George Copeland, a New Brunswick-born engineer, is the inventor of what has become known as the Copeland process which involves the use of fluid bed incineration units to destroy municipal and industrial wastes.

Mr. Copeland, president of Copeland Process Ltd. of Montreal, said the pollution control system has been extremely successful in the pulp and paper industry as well as in other areas of pollution abatement.

The company's process is being installed, or has been installed, in about 15 plants across the United States, two in Canada, in Japan and in the Bahamas.

In pulp and paper mills, the recovery of chemicals during the process more than pays the initial cost of design and equipment, said Mr. Copeland.

Sulphite pulp mills use between $7 and $12 worth of chemicals for each ton of pulp. With the Copeland process, the mill can recover anywhere from $6 to $11 worth of chemicals which can be used over and over again.

Mr. Copeland estimated that a company spending $4 million for the installation of the process can regain about $2 million in chemicals in a year. Once the equipment is installed, it can last for the duration of the mill.

He said a steel mill, for example, which spreads 300 tons of iron ore dust a day across a city can have its pollution problem eliminated for about $5 million.

At the same time it can recover the 300 tons of ore, worth about $10 a ton, for use for industrial purposes.

The two major Canadian projects are at the Ontario Paper Co. Ltd. at Thorold, Ont., and the Great Lakes Paper Co. Ltd. at Thunder Bay.

Fluid bed techniques were first developed by the oil industry in the 1940s and since then have been given wide industrial application.

In brief, the process consists of passing a gas through orifices in the bottom of a vessel in which a chemical reaction such as combustion takes place.

Ontario Plans to Inspect 10,000 Cottage Septic Systems

TORONTO (CP) — A planned summer inspection of the septic systems of 10,000 cottages is part of the Ontario government's program for preserving water quality in the province's recreational lakes, George Kerr, minister of energy and resources management, said Thursday night.

He told a meeting of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations that this summer's inspections would be concentrated in the Kawarthas, "on the Trent River system both below and above Peterborough . . . as far as Lake Simcoe to the west and Lake Ontario to the south."

The minister said that when the inspection program was initiated in that area last July and August, inspectors visiting 4,500 cottages "found that roughly one-third of the septic systems checked needed attention."

In the summer, six teams, consisting of eight university students and a supervisor, backed up by mobile laboratories, will carry out the inspections "when the cottager is present."

Mr. Kerr said he is determined "to get inspection teams into the Muskoka area by 1972 at the latest."

The minister said he also would like to see more surveys done of "the ability of our recreational lakes to support cottage development from an ecological point of view."

A text of Mr. Kerr's remarks was released before delivery.

Six Nations Reserve Said Free State

BRANTFORD (CP) — The Six Nations Indian reserve is an independent, sovereign nation and the 700-year-old Confederacy council is its legitimate government, says Toronto lawyer John Sopinka.

That is the stand Mr. Sopinka will take when an Ontario Supreme Court battle begins here soon between the Six Nations elected council and the rival Confederacy council.

A date for the hearing has not yet been set. But an outline of Mr. Sopinka's plan of defence, filed Jan. 11, was made public here Thursday.

The elected council is seeking a permanent injunction against supporters of the Confederacy, prohibiting them from demonstrating at or near the council house on the reserve near here.

The elected council obtained a temporary injunction last summer after Confederacy supporters took over the council house.

"By virtue of the Simcoe Deed, dated April 1, 1793, the Six Nations were considered a sovereign and independent state by the Parliament of the United Kingdom," Mr. Sopinka says in his defence outline.

He said prior to 1924, the Canadian government always respected the sovereignty of the Six Nations Indians.

Judge Believes Act Ends Sunday at Noon

KINCARDINE, Ont. (CP) — John Middlecamp has walked the 400 feet from his home to his barn hundreds of times, but during last week's blinding snowstorm he lost his way and was hopelessly wandering and burrowing in the snow for refuge for about 16 hours.

The 20-year-old Huron Township farmer is recovering this week in hospital at this town, 40 miles southwest of Owen Sound, with swollen, blistered and cracked hands which doctors say are likely not permanently damaged.

Mr. Middlecamp left his house about 10 p.m. Tuesday to feed the cattle in the barn.

Before he left the house, he said, he told his pregnant wife Harlene and younger brother, Henry, to remain in the home and that if he didn't return from the barn he would be spending the night there.

On his return he made it within 100 feet of the home, but blinded by the snow, he stumbled into a field beside the house where he wandered for about 1½ hours before deciding to burrow into a snowdrift for the night.

The next day he reached a road and eventually stumbled into the home of neighbors where he collapsed.

Yaremko Backs Liquor for Aged

TORONTO (CP) — Residents of homes for the aged should be able to enjoy a cocktail without having to apply for a doctor's prescription, says John Yaremko, Ontario social and family services minister.

He heard a resolution asking for the right to use spirits by residents in homes for aged, presented in a brief by a delegation from the Ontario Association of Homes for the Aged, and promised his support for the request. He said he hoped a liquor licence would be granted soon.

Former Gets Lost Walking to Barn

TORONTO (CP) — A county court judge said Thursday he will study written arguments from the Crown and defence before making a final ruling on an appeal by two men convicted under the Lord's Day Act.

Judge David Couture earlier had ruled that in the language of the act Sundays end at noon. He quashed the convictions and $25 fines against Sidney Sniderman, in business as Sam the Record Man, and an associate, Marvin Singer.

However, he said later that he was not satisfied with his decision and would notify counsel for both sides that further argument would be required.

Defence counsel Arthur Maloney and Harry Doan, representing the Crown, agreed Thursday that since the judge's decision had not been written out and signed, the case was still open. Both counsels will submit written arguments by Feb. 12.

The convictions were quashed Wednesday after Mr. Maloney argued that according to the Lord's Day Act, Sunday runs from noon Saturday to noon Sunday.

She carried a bouquet of white carnations and yellow sweetheart roses. Bridesmaids, Mrs. Kathy Reid, sister - in - law of the bridegroom and Mrs. Deborah Heath, sister - in - law of the bride and Miss Joanne Heath sister of the bride were attired identically to the maid of honor and carried identical bouquets. Flower girl was Miss Joyce Christine Heath, sister of the bride who wore a white lace pantsuit with green velvet trim.

Bradley Gay, cousin of the bride was ring-bearer and carried the rings on a white satin heart-shape pillow.

A reception was held in the IOOF Hall at Stirling where the bride's mother welcomed the guests wearing a silver gray coat dress with matching accessories and a corsage of red roses. Assisting, the bridegroom's mother wore a pale green dress with beige accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Mother: "I am so worried about Marie. She has to have two long naps each day or she gets so tired and irritable. Little Jimmy takes only one nap."

Mother: "Marie needs more sleep than many children her age. I asked the pediatrician about it and he said it seems to be normal for certain children."

Some children are more active than others and may require more rest. If the pediatrician says your child is normal, don't worry just because she doesn't exactly like other children of the same age.

Federation of B and P Women to Meet in Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — The world's largest organization of working women, the International Federation of Business and Professional Women, will hold its 12th international congress here July 5-10.

"We've got the organization pretty well under way," said Isabel MacMillan of Edmonton, editor of the federation's international magazine, Widening Horizons.

"The 12th congress, the second to be held in Canada, will be attended by about 2,000 members from 44 countries," she said. "The theme of the meeting is The Significant '70s."

The federation, which has about 250,000 members, is non-partisan and non-sectarian.

"But one of our common goals for the 1970s is to attain a status-of-women's commission in each member nation. Canada's recently published recommendations of our royal commission on the status of women will be of special interest to the visiting delegations."

Miss MacMillan said the member nations, from Australia to Zambia, represent divergent political, social and economic traditions, and that conditions affecting women vary greatly from country to country.

But certain basic tenets remain, she added. The founders emphasized communication and co-operation and promoted service within the community.

"They also emphasized political rights," she said. "As one of our federation presidents has said, 'Only through politics can women do their duty as citizens.'"

In its early years the 41-year-old federation assisted the League of Nations, forerunner of the United Nations, in a survey on economic, political and civil status of women, Miss MacMillan said.

"Today, the international federation is one of the non-governmental organizations to hold consultative status with the United Nations."

Miss MacMillan outlined some of the ways the business and professional women's groups in other countries have been active:

—Sweden's national federation recently went on record opposing tax concessions to any husband whose wife stays home when she is fit to work.

—In Switzerland, where some areas oppose the vote for women, the national federation requested a federal committee on the position of women in political, economic and social life and a national referendum regarding the franchise will be held soon.

—Nigeria's federation has directed attention to the care of war orphans and education in developing countries.

—Costa Rica's federation sponsors adult education programs.

—Canada and United States federations both have organized "talent banks" of names of highly qualified women who can be recommended to policy-making positions in public life.

Miss MacMillan said the international federation's first major thrust for women's rights was a resolution asking for equal pay for equal work.

"This was passed 15 years ago. Canada's federation is among those still striving to move the act from the statute books into practice in all offices of government, industry and business."

GIRL GUIDE, BROWNIE NEWS

COMMISSIONER'S STATEMENT

"Any girl who joins a Rover crew does so as an individual not as an official member of the Girl Guides of Canada — Guides du Canada," according to a statement released today by Mrs. K. B. Clysdale, Chief Commissioner of the Girl Guides of Canada.

The Chief Commissioner made this statement at her organization's National Headquarters in Toronto in reply to an announcement from the National Ottawa office of the Boy Scouts of Canada that girls will be accepted as members of the Scout Rover crews

"In the Girl Guides of Canada the age limits for Rangers are 14 to 18. In the Boy Scouts the Rover age group extends from 17 to 23, hence there is only a year or so of possible involvement", the Chief said. "However, the Girl Guides of Canada wishes to make it clear that any such membership must be on an individual basis and not as an official member of the Girl Guides of Canada."

The chief stressed that her organization encourages joint activities; it does not advocate membership for boys in the Guide organization, nor does it allow male leadership in its packs, companies or groups. She added that this did not preclude men as members of committees, in fact their assistance was welcome at any time.

Drivers Should Get Estimates of Car Repairs

OTTAWA (CP) — Tips to help the average driver avoid costly, unnecessary automobile repairs are offered in the Canadian Consumer.

"The first approach is to ask the repair people to check the car over," says the article in the November-December issue of the magazine published by the Consumers Association of Canada.

"Ask for a written, itemized estimate of what they feel is needed to restore your car to satisfactory running condition."

Most mechanics will try to convince a customer that he should have his car brought up to factory specifications, an operating condition that will approximate or almost duplicate brand-new status, the article says.

"To do that, the year round, would call for frequent tune-ups, constant maintenance which the average motorist does not truly require. It is sufficient for him (or her) to keep the car as safe, as operative as possible, but like other things, it can be overdone."

The article stresses, however, that drivers must realize the paramount importance of car safety. The tires, braking system and cooling system should never be neglected.

Replace the tires if they are getting bald. If the brakes do not seem to work properly and take more pressure on the pedal than normal, have the brake fluid checked. A cooling system which frequently overheats is also a danger sign.

If the dealer says the brakes need relining, drums need tuning or other repairs are necessary, get a firm estimate from him on the full cost of parts and approximate labor involved.

Make it clear that any extras must be discussed by telephone and that otherwise payment for these will not be made.

"One of the most common rackets that is practised by unscrupulous operators is that of the exhaust system repairs —mufflers and tailpipes," the article says.

"If you have the time and the desire, ask for the car to be put on the hoist. Have a look at the items and see for yourself if the tailpipe is badly rusted, corroded, falling apart. The muffler system may have bad rust areas that have been, or are, disintegrating. Obviously these need replacing."

Ask for a guarantee wherever this work is done and read and understand it before leaving the repair area.

Ann Landers

An Interesting Letter From Swinger's Wife

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband reads your column every day. When you print a letter that gives a husband a break he always says, "Hey, look at this one."

ANN LANDERS

I'm addressing this letter to him and if I'm lucky enough to see it in the paper I'm going to say, "Hey, look at this one."

DEAR SWINGER: You are nearly 40. Your children are growing up and they really don't know you. You haven't been around home much. You don't know me very well either. Whenever I try to talk about things that trouble me you shut me off by calling me a "nag." In a few years (sooner than you think) you'll be too tired to swing. The chicks you've been chasing will suddenly not seem worth the effort. You'll want to be part of a family. But it will be too late. Your children will be strangers. You did not want to be part of their lives when they needed you and they will not permit you to become part of their lives when you need them.

I used to feel that I had failed you. I blamed myself for not being a better wife. Now I know that no matter what I had done the results would have been the same. You weren't interested in a better wife — or any wife. So I've built a life which doesn't include you and I'm — HAPPIER THAN YOU THINK.

O.K., Ann, print it and I'll let you know what happens. — SWINGER'S WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: Thanks for your letter. Keep me posted.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You stated recently in a speech for the Navy Wives in Washington, D.C., that the thing you are trying to do in your column is educate people. Well — here's an opportunity.

I'm a receptionist for a busy pediatrician. I'm new in this job, trying to get acquainted with the work and the patients. For some strange reason people resent being asked who they are. They act insulted and hurt. Or they give the impression you are prying.

Here are some of the answers I've been getting: "I have an appointment for 3:00. Look in your book." "I've been coming here for years. The doctor knows who I am." And here's a beauty. "I'm this child's mother." Yesterday when I asked a woman her name she said, "I was here twice last month. If you can't remember my name that's your problem."

Please tell people that a little common courtesy would help expedite matters. I don't care who they are but the doctor would like to know — and he can't remember everybody. — YOO-HOO OUT THERE.

DEAR YOU-HOO: Here's your letter and I hope it helps.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We just came from another rotten dinner at my mother's house. The food is so terrible a person can actually leave the table hungry. The place is so filthy it's unbelievable. Junk is stacked everywhere. I'll bet she hasn't vacuumed the rugs in six months.

Don't suggest that we invite her to our place because when we do she talks until our ears drop off. At least when we go there we can leave when we want to.

What is your opinion of a mother who invites you to dinner and greets you with a dirty house and serves a meal that is just plain garbage? — REVILED.

DEAR R.: If your mother is such a rotten cook and lousy housekeeper she didn't get that way overnight. You grew up in her house and survived on her cooking. Something else is bugging you and I hope you find out what it is.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Cream Puffs Need High Temperature

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: (dated October 23, 1970) Have you or any of your readers a recipe for Cream Puffs? I used an old recipe out of a 1905 Cook Book. I did not like it. Just thought there might be a newer recipe. Mrs. M.

ANSWER: Mrs. M. since you did not give your name or address I could not answer you by mail. Would you please do so next time? We received another request for Cream Puffs. That is why the recipe is given today. Be sure to bake Cream Puffs at the high temperature suggested.

CREAM PUFFS (8 large)

½ cup butter
1 cup hot water
1-8 tsp. salt
1 cup stirred but not sifted all-purpose flour
4 large eggs

Measure butter and hot water into pot and bring to boil. When butter is melted stir in flour and salt all at once, stir constantly until dough clings together in a rough ball and comes away from sides of pan. Remove from heat and stir in eggs, one at a time, until smoothly blended. Drop onto buttered baking sheet in eight HIGH mounds. Mine were approximately 2½ inches in diameter by 1¼ inches high. They must be about three inches apart.

Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. at centre of oven for 10 to 15 minutes, or until well puffed and rich gold, then reduce heat to 350 deg. Fahr. for 20 to 30 minutes longer to make crust strong with no tendency to collapse. NOTE: Before removing all puffs from oven remove one and let it stand on the counter for a minute to see if it shows any signs of falling. If so leave remaining puffs in oven a few minutes longer.

Cool on rack. Slit sides and fill with sweetened whipped cream and sprinkle tops with powdered sugar OR fill with ice cream and top with fresh frozen sliced strawberries.

NOTE: To make Chocolate Eclairs shape Cream Puff dough in elongated ovals and bake as above. Fill with a custard filling and frost with chocolate icing.

At the present time Mr. Boyce is doing research on local education, and he pointed out some aspects of the history of the Consecon grammar school, and turned the pages back to education in the 1800s.

Successful Living

Alcoholic Requires Assistance-Not Censuring

By DORIS CLARK

Let's not forget that the alcoholic is ill. We tend to scold him, criticize him, turn his children against him.

Small wonder, when he wreaks such havoc in their lives. When in his cups, he may be abusive both physically and verbally. He loses jobs, loses self-respect, loses his health.

For him alcohol is not only a problem — it is also a temporary solution to whatever is eating him. It takes medical, psychiatric and spiritual help to rescue him.

Before you dish out the slander, try to understand what you are talking about. Try to be helpful.

• • •

Dear Doris: A group of us girls in grade 11 are doing a project on Trial Marriages: A solution to Divorce? We would like to know if you have any information pertaining to this topic.

We would also like to know a little about the psychological background or emotion the two persons involved would experience, and how this setup would effect the possible children. — Grade Eleven

Dear Eleven: If this is a debate I would take the negative side. Trial marriage is not the answer to divorce.

It is an effort to discover whether two people are physically compatible. Yet we have ample evidence that if a couple has the mature kind of love which springs from friendship, and from delight in mutual interests, physical enjoyment will follow.

Remember how you feel when you see your best chum, or Dad or Mother, after a period of absence? Don't you want to throw your arms around that beloved person? Physical contact expresses your emotion. And so it is with the highest physical expression of human love, love for a kindred spirit.

The children of a trial marriage are insecure people, for the most part. Thank goodness I know of a number of trial marriages which have developed into legal and regal unions. But I know of several, too, which have resulted in heartbreak, separation and ill-adjusted children.

Now can you write your essay?

• • •

Confidential to Deeply Puzzled: Why would a father object to a daughter having the gumption to go back to school after being out two years? I'm all for it. In fact, many school dropouts do much better when they go back.

You haven't said whether you are now earning money he feels the family needs. But other things being equal, I'm all for your working towards the air stewardess career you have set your heart on.

If you can see the way to do it, my bet is he'll be proud of you for sticking with it. If it means having to live apart to get the schooling, and the help is there for you as you say, then that's all right too.

Ask Doris about your difficulty. She will discuss it or send you to a source of help.

All Six Candidates for PC Leadership Concerned About Control of Economy

TORONTO (CP) — Direct or implied criticism of the provincial government's attitude toward American investment has been a constant feature of the campaign for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party, even though five of the candidates are cabinet ministers.

However, only A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, has gone so far as to say the open-door approach of Stanley Randall, the trade and development minister, has hindered Ontario's progress toward economic independence.

The issue has been discussed at length by all six candidates, including Education Minister William Davis, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Mines Minister Allan Lawrence and university graduate student Robert Pharand.

The importance given this issue may be seen in the fact that four of the candidates have chosen the subject of economic nationalism for discussion during the Feb. 10-12 convention to choose a successor to retiring Premier John Robarts.

All the candidates add the proviso that foreign investment is necessary if the province and the country are to continue to enjoy a high standard of living. The issue is the extent of foreign domination.

All the candidates espouse a pro-Canadian, rather than anti-American, policy of tax incentives, government grants and low-cost loans to Canadians to help them compete with American interests.

Parallel policies adopted by some of the candidates would involve government control of the degree of foreign investment, particularly in respect to natural resources, and restrictions on the sale of Crown land to Americans.

Financial Minister Lawrence has proposed direct action against American interests, by slowing "very drastically" Ontario's forgivable loans to large multi-national corporations.

Even those loans which he would approve would have a string attached in many cases. Foreign interest would have to go into the lesser-developed areas of the province.

He says the government's present policy of "growth for growth's sake" is wrong, but adds this doesn't mean "you should go rushing off and build a Berlin Wall along the Canada-U.S. border."

Education Minister Davis said near the start of his campaign that although Canadian control of the economy was high on his list of priorities, he had no specific proposals other than to encourage Canadian investment. He also said he would "not necessarily" restrict foreign investment.

He has since suggested the Ontario Development Corp. give "preferential treatment" to Canadian-owned companies seeking loans or grants and that universities give preference to Canadians when hiring staff.

He also has come down hard on the Canada Development Corp. being created by the federal government, saying the CDC "scarcely represents a serious answer" to foreign ownership and that it will "sell to the Canadian people a number of Crown agencies they already own."

The education minister also has followed Provincial Secretary Welch's lead in calling for a conference on foreign investment that would try to solve the problem without jeopardizing Ontario jobs.

Mr. Welch had proposed that Ontario convene, before the end of this year, a national convention on foreign investment to include representatives of governments, political parties, labor, industry, consumer associations and the academic world. He also proposed a "task force" to collect all available data on the subject for discussion at the convention.

He suggests that the provincial department of treasury and economics and the Ontario Development Corp. fill the gap through special tax incentives and grants to Canadian companies or investors, and also proposes special incentives to promote research and development.

Municipal Affairs Minister McKeough also mentions the Ontario Development Corp. as a vehicle of control. He would sharply increase the $500,000 ceiling on corporation loans to Canadian companies, while maintaining the old ceiling for U.S. interest.

He is in agreement with the other candidates in calling for tax laws which would enable Canadian companies to grow and be better able to compete while eliminating "the tax laws which force their sale."

Mr. Pharand, 26, a graduate student at the University of Ottawa, says he believes the time has come when Canadians must accept any economic hardship which might be entailed in preserving their independence. He has chosen economic nationalism as the main platform of his campaign.

Incentives, special assistance, legislative controls, guaranteed control of important sectors of the economy and joint ventures by government and private business also are backed by Mines Minister Lawrence.

He adds that developing new sources of capital in countries such as Germany and Japan, as well as in the U.S. could be a "very significant" strategy in the maintenance of economic independence.

But he also speaks for all the candidates in noting that Canada is a "pioneer country" which needs massive amounts of investment capital.

"We must not cut off our nose to spite our face," he says. "We cannot and should not cut off foreign investment."

'Witch' Weighs Candidates

TORONTO (CP) — The official witch of Los Angeles thinks that Allan Lawrence, Ontario minister of mines and northern affairs, is "very sexy."

Louise Huebner, author of a book and syndicated newspaper column on witchcraft, has never met Mr. Lawrence nor any of the other five candidates for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

But, in an interview during a visit here this week she gave her impressions of the five cabinet ministers seeking the leadership after studying their solar charts and using her knowledge of astrology.

Here are her impressions:

Bert Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, born March 31, 1923:

"He is in the midst of beginning a new pattern but he has an erratic course of action ahead of him before he's ultimately successful."

Allan Lawrence, Nov. 8, 1925:

"I was very attracted to his horoscope because he's very powerful. Yes, he has a terrific accumulation of power in his background. I also feel he's very sexy."

Robert Welch, provincial secretary, July 13, 1928:

"For some reasons his horoscope is tied in dynamically to the other people which puts him in an awkward situation. He seems to be under a great deal of stress."

William Davis, minister of education, July 30, 1929:

"Very strong. He has definite leadership qualities and is to be reckoned with over the others but for some mysterious reason his true value is not recognized at this point."

Darcy McKeough, minister of municipal affairs, Jan. 21, 1933:

"He had the most planetary aspects at this time. A very powerful chart. Something has been building up for him for quite some time."

Welch Makes Impassioned Plea For PCs to Win Next Election

By FRED HAMILTON

Robert Welch made the best speech, William Davis made the most news and Allan Lawrence got the most applause as the six candidtes for leadership of Ontario Progressive Conservative party met more than 600 delegates from 26 Metropolitan Toronto ridings Thursday.

Mr. Welch, the provincial secretary set the tone for the meeting when he threw away a prepared text and delivered an impassioned plea for a Conservative victory in the next provincial election.

He drew prolonged applause when he said that with a new leader and hard work at the constituency level Stephen Lawis, leader of the provincial New Democratic Party, "will be eliminated as a political force in Ontario."

Education Minister William Davis, reminded the delegates that everyone in the room was under the jurisdiction of the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act.

"What had to be done had to be done," he said. "Even so I am suspicious of federal legislation which waits in the wings and has as its basis an apparent belief that extraordinary restrictions of individual liberty will become a more common event.

"I am deadly serious, and there are no political games involved, when I voice my concern over the possibility that localized problems will be used to justify curtailment of human rights everywhere."

Allan Lawrence, minister of mines and northern Affairs, repeated a speech he made Tuesday in Hamilton, appealing to delegates not to be swayed by the support elected members give to any candidate but to make the leadership choice for themselves.

His speech drew little reaction but the strength of his support among Toronto delegates was evident from the applause he received at the end.

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough and A. B. R. Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, made appeals similar to that of Mr. Welch. Both warned that the party's popularity has been decreasing and called for new efforts to keep it in office in the province.

Robert Pharan, 26, a bilingual mathematician from Ottawa who entered the race less than a week ago, said Ontario must provide equal language and cultural rights to French-speaking residents, and called for Ottawa University to be made into a unilingual French university.

Mr McKeough and Allan Lawrence had speaking engagements here earlier in the day, while Mr Davis visited Huntsville and Mr. Welch St. Thomas.

Neither A. B. R. Lawrence nor Robert Pharand had speeches during the day.

Allan Lawrence told students at Osgoode Hall Law School the Ontario Supreme Court should sit regularly outside Toronto, in centres such as London, Ottawa, Sudbury and Thunder Bay.

He also suggested that Supreme Court judges be placed permanently in some centres to speed up habeas corpus applications, injunctions and will interpretations.

Mr Davis told a group of Muskoka delegates he will demand the federal government tell him how much Quebec is getting in special federal payments.

He called on Prime Minister Trudeau to put figures "on the table", pointing out Ontario residents pay 45 per cent of all federal tax revenues.

"I believe in Confederation, but I'm not going to be pushed around on this," he said.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 6

Your birthday today: You are on your own this coming year under gentle but steady pressures from the people who believe in you, but not too deeply in what you're doing. Today's natives are sincere and given to broad views.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Easy does it — there's no mileage in working off emotional stress on the people around you. Nobody seems to have as much energy available.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your patience and acceptance proves your true feelings. Skip strenuus activities for the time being. A quiet evening is an achievement in serenity.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Stay on or near your base today. Strangers claim objectivity but are apt to have a basic misunderstanding of your situation.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Check your facts and appointments. Be wary of unfamiliar medications or volatile products for household uses. People can be contrary for a time today.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Elaborate preparations, tight schedules are not quite the appropriate approach to today's hit-or-miss conditions. Anything that happens shouldn't be taken too personally.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Inevitably you come to being teased, hazed, and this is probably such a time. Get an early start, in a good humor so as to be ahead of the game. Conserve your energy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Don't expect to be intrigued or involved in what your mate or associates are doing. Your advice is much wanted by a younger person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): For once practical details are too varied and complex for you to keep up with all of them. Special care saves much inconvenience later. Your thrift and savings have to cover your own needs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): The fashion now is to be unpredictable. Don't be too critical. Anything you say is taken tenfold, and destructively.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Incomplete figures and stories are common today. Take advantage of any chance to get away from old familiar ruts, even for a few hours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Whatever promises you have made lately now come home to you for keeping or breaking. Experimenting, either with things or with people, is strictly out-of-order at present.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Prefer arrangements that will not be upset if there's an hour's delay or some people fail to appear. Your willingness to adjust earns respect.

No Matter Who Wins, Robarts' Staff Keep Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — The men and women who work in the office of Ontario Premier John Robarts will probably still have jobs after the next provincial election, no matter who wins it.

Any major changeover in office personnel would take about two years, Dr. John Keith Reynolds, the top man on Mr. Robarts' staff said Thursday.

The leaders of the province's two opposition parties, Robert Nixon of the Liberals and Stephen Lewis of the New Democratic Party, also forecast no major overhaul if their party takes over after the next election.

In any case, the worst that could happen to members of Mr. Robarts' 38-member staff is a transfer to other responsibilities. All but one of them are civil servants with tenure.

Still, with a possibility of two changes in the premier's office in the next 18 months, those 37 entrenched civil servants will have to find a way to get along with their new bosses.

One new boss is a certainty—the man picked by the Progressive Conservatives at their leadership convention next weekend to succeed Mr. Robarts.

The new Conservative leader will move into Mr. Robarts' office at the southeast corner of the second floor of the legislature building Feb. 15.

There'd be another new leader to adjust to if the Conservatives fail to hold power in the next election.

Mr. Nixon said the only civil servants who would go would be those who couldn't or wouldn't work with their ministers.

"I accept the high standard and expertise of the provincial civil service," he said.

Mr. Lewis said there would probably have to be more changes among the "senior most levels" of the civil service in the event an NDP government was elected, because of his party's different social attitudes.

However, he expected only a handful of people would leave and most of these would go "only because they would feel uncomfortable."

Dr. Reynolds, whose title is deputy minister and secretary to the cabinet, doubted whether even a change of government would have an immediate effect on the employment of almost everyone in the office.

"We're all on staff as regular civil servants and not the least bit politically sensitive," said Dr. Reynolds.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Money Should Buy Time

It seems absolutely impossible that I began writing this column 27 years ago this week. It seems impossible that the year 1944 was 27 years ago.

Looking up my drama reviews of that period, it is hard to believe that such plays as I Remember Mama, The Glass Menagerie, Harvey, Anna Lucasta, A Bell for Adano, and Dear Ruth opened more than a quarter-century ago. (Or the D-Day invasion of France by the Allies.)

The years of our childhood seem to drag so, while we are waiting to get older; from Wednesday to Sunday seems a year, when we are a child anticipating some treat, or an adolescent watching for the day when we can finally get the car keys.

Then, between the ages of 25 and 50, a year seems to go as fast as Wednesday to Sunday. Time has a "telescopic" quality to it — it does not proceed at an equal pace throughout life but accelerates its tempo with age. This is something young people cannot be expected to understand.

The people who live by the creed that "time is money" have got hold of the stick by the wrong end. The exact opposite is true: money is time. That is, the best purpose of money is to buy time to live in.

One of the tragedies of life is that most people have to spend their time accumulating money so that they can "retire" at 65 or so with some measure of dignity and grace. But by then it is generally too late for anything but the most marginal of "living" — fishing, quiet travelling, a little golf, or gently marking time until death arrives.

In a well-structured society, everybody would get a "sabbatical," a year off every seven years, to do what he would like to do, go where he would like to go, while he is still young enough to make it count. Money would not have to be piled up for a problematical aging future, but could be utilized to make the most of present time, to discover oneself, to develop resources, perhaps even to change one's whole course.

This is not possible today for the average person in any society, capitalist or communist. They are captives of the work-ethos, from the day they leave school to the day they retire, with only a few weeks off each year to regenerate the battery. For the happy few who delight in their work, this is no hardship; for the many who work only because they must, this leads to dull resignation or resentment.

Freud said that "love and work" were all a person needed for happiness. He neglected to add that you must love your work, and work at your love. But only a handful of mankind are this lucky or this wise.

Apathy Essential

TORONTO (CP) — To survive, it is necessary for people to develop some insensitivity toward others, says social psychologist Dr. Lawrece La Fave of the University of Windsor.

The increase in world population plus the population shift from rural to urban areas means people must adopt the apathy of the bystander, he told an audience of about 150 psychologists and psychiatrists Thursday night.

His remarks drew laughter and queries as to whether he was serious.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Sometimes Doctor Tries Too Hard

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Talk about the Spirit of '76 and I can't forget the Spirit of '92 — that's the age of my dear mother when she died.

For a year before she died I had the privilege as a daughter to have her in our own home. She was a tiny little thing, weighed less than 95 pounds most of her life, yet raised a family of 10 children.

As I used to bathe her in the tub during that last year, I recall that I marveled at how clean and white and unblemished her skin was at 91. She did not even have the suggestion of a varicose vein in her legs.

A few months before she died she had insisted on being taken to a nursing home. She felt that the children had taken on enough burden. On one of her visits, she fell out of bed and fractured her hip.

I don't know why they decided to operate on her at such an advanced age, but they did. She developed complications, but her mind remained clear to the last.

The point I hope to make in this letter is that sometimes doctors try too hard to keep patients alive. On the last day of her life, my mother had a tube in her nose and a needle in her arm. She was getting stimulants and antibiotics. While I sat at her bedside she calmly pulled out the nasal tube and the needle.

She looked at me and said, "I came into this world without a tube in my nose to help me breathe. If I can't live without tubes and needles, then it's time to go."

She smiled, closed her eyes, and died quietly before nurses and doctors could get all the life saving apparatus back in again. Doctor, don't you think it's true that in some cases doctors and nurses try too hard? I know if I ever reach 90 I'll feel about it just like my mother did. — Mrs. R

Comment: Undoubtedly, Mrs. R., you have been reading lately that both doctors and patients have been taking a good, long hard look at this problem. We are considering the humanitarian and practical aspects as well. We are asking, "Why keep a hopelessly incurable patient alive for months in a hospital, with hospital bills and doctors' bills mounting by the thousands — often bankrupting other members of the family who are sacrificing what they have and what they haven't? Meanwhile it is the deathly-ill patient who suffers and suffers because he is kept alive (often, as a vegetable) with the use of blood transfusions, stimulants and antibiotics."

Yes, Mrs. R., we are all taking an honest look at the problem. We know there will never be a blanket solution which applies to everyone. Nevertheless, awareness itself promises more sensible management in individual patients.

When my time comes I hope my doctors "don't try too hard" to give me a few extra hours or days. I believe in the maxim that "When there's life there's hope" — but it often has its limitations.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: In one of your recent columns I read Mrs. S.'s query concerning whether she could have children and the likelihood of having only girls, after having surgery for the removal of an ovary and a fallopian tube. Perhaps the case of a close friend will bring her encouragement.

My friend, in her early 20s, had a tubular pregnancy necessitating the removal of one ovary and a fallopian tube. One year later she became pregnant and at full term delivered twins — a boy and a girl — who are now 2 years old. She is expecting again. I hope Mrs. S. will now look forward to having her own family.

Hasty Pees' New Colonel Takes Command

A former Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental commander in Peterborough last night took command of the regiment at ceremonies held at the Belleville armories.

Lt.-Col. John Richardson formally took command of the unit from Lt.-Col. F. Ross Allan, an 11-year militia veteran who served for 10 years with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, commanding officer since 1967.

In his detailed address, Lt.-Col. Allan looked back with fondness on his association with the regiment.

"The Regiment has provided me with the pleasure of the comradeship of the finest men and women I have known and has given me a basic understanding of military tactics and strategy.

"What I have tried to accomplish through the years is to maintain and raise our training standards, increase administrative efficiency to provide a maximum training commitment at the company level, involve the Regiment and the armory in the community and increase the co-operation between Reserve and Cadet units."

Lt. Col. Allan briefly reviewed the history of the Regiment in recent years, from their 1960 involvement as "recruits, support weapons personnel and trained soldiers" to the time when "the government began its brief love affair with Civil Defence Reserve Operations; returning to the principles of professional training under regular force supervision; to their reduction from a force of 300 in seven locations to approximately 160 all ranks in this one armory in 1964."

He stated that the future of militia "in general and this regiment in particular" is promising.

"To those critics of the militia who questions its purpose and value in these modern times, I say it does fulfill a need," the retiring Colonel said.

"Twice in the last two years we have seen regular force troops called out in a civil emergency situation; the last time it was necessary to commit virtually all our available combat land troops.

"To assume that such a need will never again rise in these disturbed times is unrealistic; we must be ready."

He stated that "more personnel, must come from the militia if needed, regardless of their task; there is no other source of trained manpower available."

Militia not only fulfills the needs of military training, but according to Lt.-Col. Allan, "militia proides young men with training and experience invaluable to the production of mature, responsible Canadian citizens.

"These opportunities in discipline, leadership, responsibility for others, respect for organizational law and order and true comradeship are simply not available anywhere else for this age group."

The forces of possible change came under attack when he said "I oppose and decry any governmental policy or personal expression which denigrates the militia or those who serve Canada through it."

"This is a proud and distinguished regiment with historical roots in the counties of Hastings and Prince Edward.

"It is fitting that it now includes a company in Peterborough, an area which contributed many members to its ranks during the last war.

He concluded with the warning that "there are those who would manipulate the militia to advance their own interests, for personal gain . . . let no one detract from the unity which exists and must exist among its members and supporters."

The new commanding officer was introduced by Brig.-Gen. Bruce J. Legge, Commander, Central Militia Area Headquarters, Oakville.

Addressing the parade, Brig.-Gen. Legge told members of the militia, "you are of present history in Canada; no one can overstate the need of militia in Canada and the work they have done."

Lt.-Col. Richardson, who assumed his rank from Major with the takeover of the regiment, first saw service with the Queen's Own Rifles, a regular force unit. On his release from this force, he immediately joined the 50th Field Artillery Regiment in Peterborough and remained when it was redesignated the Prince of Wales' Rangers.

With the reduction of the regiment to nil strength, resulting from recent militia reorganization, Lt.-Col. Richardson joined the Hasty Pees, becoming Peterborough company commander, and at the same time was appointed training co-ordinator of the regiment.

In civilian life, Col. Richardson is vice - principal of Peterborough's Thomas A. Stewart Secondary School. Col. Allan, in the Guidance department at Belleville Collegiate Institute, also teaches science.

Col. Richardson promised "to carry on the tradition of this regiment . . . and hope to maintain the standard of my forebears and ex-commanding officers and serve my country with you".

At the conclusion of the addresses, Col. Allan ceremoniously turned over the regimental command sword and exchanged the salute with Col. Richardson.

Sword Exchanged at Change of Command

Lt.-Col. John Richardson, left, last night accepted the regimental sword of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment from retiring commanding officer Lt.-Col. F. Ross Allan. Present for the official ceremonies was Col. Ben. Shapiro, Commander of the Ottawa Militia District (background) and Brig.-Gen. Bruce J. Legge, Commander, Central Militia Area Headquarters, Oakville, who introduced the new commanding officer to the regiment.

They Share the Chair

Mrs. Frank Seemungal and Mrs. Russell Scott will combine their talents to act as co-chairmen for the Eastern Ontario Drama Festival to be held in Belleville from March 9 to 13. Mrs. Seemungal will contribute her knowledge of the artistic side of the theatre and Mrs. Scott her business experience.

Business End of Festival Handled by Mrs. R. Scott

By SUSAN KORAH
Staff Reporter

Mrs. Russell Scott and Mrs. Frank Seemungal will act as co-chairmen for the Eastern Ontario Drama Festival scheduled to take place in Belleville from Tuesday, March 9 to Saturday, March 13.

Mrs. Scott being a co-chairman is a new step in the history of the Festival because she is the first woman to do so who is not directly involved with the artistic and technical production of the play. Mrs. Scott has had considerable experience in business, owning and operating Camp Lavallee, one of the largest tent and trailer parks in Hastings County.

Mrs. Seemungal is a member of the Belleville Theatre Guild and is extremely interested in all its artistic aspects. Her husband is the president of the Belleville Theatre Guild.

Mrs. Scott feels that since Belleville has not had the occasion of acting as host of the five-day drama festival in more than two decades this is the opportunity for all the citizens to enjoy the rewarding experience of attending live theatre.

She emphasized that the enthusiasm and promises of help she received when she contacted schools, business women, ethnic groups, service clubs and the public in general have been most gratifying and reflect the desire of the people of this area to participate in and enjoy cultural activities such as this festival.

The Dominion Drama Festival, a bilingual and bicultural organization created in 1932 by the then Governor-General of Canada Lord Bessborough, is now called Theatre Canada. At that time Canada was divided into six zones with each region holding an annual competitive festival.

The Belleville area is called the Eastern Ontario Drama League (EODL) and each year a three-act festival is held. This year Belleville has been chosen by the EODL committee to have the honor of presenting this event.

Preliminary adjudications are being held in various committees in Eastern Ontario to decide which five plays will be chosen to enter in the festival. It is expected that their decision will be made public by Feb. 8.

This festival is the only drama festival in Eastern Ontario that has a public adjudication which takes place after each evening's performance. This means that a highly qualified drama critic will give the audience the benefit of his comments and criticisms every evening during the festival.

Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Seemungal feel that Theatre Canada is a medium that binds the many aspects of Canadian culture together and gives all Canadians a chance to express themselves and "to do their own thing."

They also pointed out that over the past years the regional drama festivals in Canada have proved to be the training ground of many of today's leading professional actors. Lorne Greene and Frances Hyland are noteworthy examples, they pointed out, contending it is possible the man and woman who win the best actor and actress award in Belleville in 1971 may be the recipients of Oscars in the future.

Optimistic Outlook

Mobil Says Expansion Is Likely

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Before the ground had refrozen around the newly driven stake marking the site for a $1.5 million plant for Mobil Plastics, project manager Michael Foy was predicting possible future expansion to more than double the present plant plans.

The manager for Mobil Oil of Canada's first plastics facility told The Intelligencer at a noon reception yesterday that only part of the new building will be used for production.

He explained Mobil's intention to expand production in the new building to take over warehouse facilities.

"Growth will depend on getting the job well done, developing the product and the climate in which we work." He was referring to the economic and labor climate of Belleville.

"Our plant is designed in the centre of the property, and as production expands, the first step will be to lay another building on the back" of the planned facility.

He then offered further predictions for the future, stating that "as production expands, other production facilities could be built on the east, and another possibly on the west."

"Our facility is designed for growth," he asserted.

In brief, he explained that raw materials in the form of polyethylene resin would be brought in by spur rail line at the rear of the plant.

The resin pellets would be melted and forced through a die, forming a plastic bubble which would then be stretched, eventually condensed into sheets for embossing, printing folding, cutting and trimming.

He stressed that "this process is one of the cleanest in industry . . . there is absolutely no air or water pollution."

He stated that Mobil Oil had gone about "choosing Belleville pretty scientifically."

"I give a lot of credit to the growth of Belleville to Mayor Scott, Gerald Joyce, Industrial Commission Chairman and Fred Bemis, Industrial Commissioner . . . they're really great salesmen."

Mr. Foy presented Mayor J. Russell Scott with a symbolic engraved shovel at the Hotel Quinte noon reception.

Representatives of recently-located industry congratulated Mobil Oil of Canada vice-president and treasurer Bert Taylor and Mr. Foy on their choice of location.

Allied Chemical representative Bob Growden, whose plant is next-door to the Mobil site, offered use of his plant's facilities until such time as Mobil offices were ready.

"Contrary to rumor, we're not going to clash," said Mr. Growden, referring to the fact that Mobil and Allied produce somewhat similar products.

"We make a different product which is complementary to Mobil's. Ours is a nylon-base material . . . providing the strength in plastic food wrappers (bacon, cheese, cold cuts) which is coated with polyethylene" for waterproofing.

Mr. Foy explained that Mobil Oil was interested in "a fair tax structure, zoning, and building specifications."

"This community, Belleville, is where it is; you have a proximity to markets, a key concern to any industry," he said.

B. R. Holmes of Cornerstone Biulders, contractor for the Mobil plant, announced that "we have at this point, finished the design and working drawings . . . and can commence construction in three to four weeks."

Armed Forces' Future Pondered by Macdonald

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

Canada's armed forces entered a new phase September 19, 1970 when Hon. Donald Macdonald became the new Minister of National Defence.

Paul Hellyer revamped their form, Leo Cadieux ushered them through an interim phase, now Mr. Macdonald will define the role of the integrated Canadian Armed Forces in a Defence White Paper that will chart the specific course of their long-term future.

Keys to the future have already been established. The first priority Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said in April 1969 would be "maintenance of Canadian sovereignty," with continental defence through NORAD (North American Air Defence Command) and NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) receiving less stress.

The Department of National Defence began to accept the challenge of preparing to defend the homefront, particularly in the far north under the direction of Leo Cadieux and the new minister is in accord with this.

"I think it's incumbment on the Canadian government to take steps to establish very clearly its sovereign control over this area . . . and it's my view that the armed forces can expect to be called upon to perform quite an active role," he says.

New airstrips are being built north of the 60th parallel, an aircraft servicing detachment has been set up at Frobisher Bay, air surveillance of the north has been stepped up and year-round land and tactical air operations increased.

To co-ordinate Canadian Forces' activity north of 60, a new command post, Headquarters Northern Region was formed and moved to Yellowknife last fall. The headquarters staff, under Brig.-Gen. Ramsey Withers, will reach a strength of about 35 by late 1971.

Mr. Macdonald has said "long-range surveillance aircraft appear to be the answer" to the problem of keeping an eye on the country's northern frontier. Argus subchasers are now making overflights of the north but their future is limited.

Consideration is being given to two aircraft as a replacement for the Argus, the British - built Nimrod and the U.S. Orion used now for American anti - sub work. However, Mr. Macdonald says a major refit for the Argus is possible.

The Canadian Forces' magazine, Sentinel, said in February 1970 "Plans are to replace it (Argus) with a new aircraft starting 1973. However, the new Defence Minister stated recently the Argus question will face the Government about 1975.

Maritime Command's heavy emphasis on anti - submarine warfare roles may be shifted, the new Minister has indicated.

"Looking to the future, I would rather see less specialization. The anti-submarine role is still important to us, but I think we should be developing other systems under maritime command for control of our shoes." Mr. Macdonald has explained. He includes in this category surveillance of foreign fishing fleets, attempts to exploit the continental shelf without Government permission and possible incursions into the far north by land and sea.

On NORAD participation, the Minister of National Defence has said Canada's role in it and the number of aircraft committed to it may change but he still regards it as valuable, relating it to the protection of sovereignty priority.

He says NORAD is "effective in protecting Canadian sovereignty . . . In effect, we've entered into a treaty (in 1958) which enables us to identify foreign aircraft entering our territory and at the same time controls the operations of our American allies in Canadian airspace."

Canada decided to cut back NATO participation in 1969 and interim programs were instituted lasting until 1972. Mr. Macdonald has said he is now faced with the problem of deciding "the exact form the Canadian land component" with NATO will take after 1972.

A specific consideration will be whether they will continue to use heavy tanks. Decision on this will face him by 1973, because the Centurions now with NATO will be coming to the end of their useful military life.

The minister has indicated the option pending will be either to acquire more new tanks or other equipment for other roles — possibly, formation of an air - transportable group. This, he says, could involve acquisition of additional helicopters and transport aircraft.

The Cadieux ministry ruled out tanks for the post-72 period but publicly voiced a plan to establish — what now appears as only an option to Macdonald — a light 'airmobile' force supported by helicopters.

As far as putting the stockpiled CF-5s to use is concerned, Mr. Macdonald sees a possible future for them as part of Canada's commitment to the northern flank of NATO.

In a recent interview with a Toronto paper, he referred to tests being conducted with six CF5s in Europe. He mentioned that the aircraft could be dispatched from Canada to Norway in a relatively short time span, using Air Transport Command's 707s now being refitted to refuel them in mid-air. (Range of the aircraft precludes trans-Atlantic flight without refueling.)

The planes are currently being tested in their designated roles of ground support and reconnaissance with Canadian troops undergoing military exercises in northern Norway. They were built to provide support for Mobile Command.

The Norwegian Government will not permit foreign aircraft to be based on its soil. However, it may allow Canndian CF-5s to serve there in emergencies as part of Canada's commitment to defense of NATO's northern flank.

Chief of Defence Staff, Gen. F. R. Sharp and the Minister of National Defence will go to Norway this month to discuss defence plans with the Norwegian Government.

Canada's commitment to NATO's southern flank ended last year but an 'airportable' battalion stationed in Canada is still part of the Allied Command Europe Mobile Force that protects the continent's northern reaches in an emergency.

Now Detroit Wants to Get Into Canadian Football Act!

TORONTO (CP) — Everyone wants to get into the Canadian Football League.

First there were feelers from London, Ont., then a Calgary group announced it would investigate the possibilities of putting a team into Halifax.

Then San Antonio, Tex., inquired.

Thursday, it was Detroit, Via Windsor, Ont.

Commissioner Jake Gaudaur of the CFL said Thursday Mayor Frank Wansbrough, a sporting-goods store proprietor in Windsor, phoned "to tell me there was a group of Detroit people who hopefully would attract people from the Canadian side with whom they would combine to apply for a franchise."

The theory was that the team would be a Windsor franchise, but would play its games in the stadium recently deserted by Detroit Lions of the National Football League in the United States.

"Historically, the CFL has not been willing to accept applications or even encourage applications by U.S. cities," Gaudaur said.

"We have felt a reluctance to expand into the U.S. lest it lead to the same path of evolution as it did for professional hockey. As pro hockey expanded in the U.S., smaller Canadian centres fell by the wayside until there were only two franchises left up here," Gaudaur said.

Gaudaur said the league "would consider a Canadian application ahead of an American application," but "I'm advised this would be a Canadian application from Windsor."

The commissioner said he had not heard directly from the group concerned.

Shack Proves Punch's Point

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

When coach Punch Imlach of Buffalo Sabres obtained Eddie Shack two months ago from Los Angeles Kings he said then it was because he knew Shack could help his club.

Imlach, known for his positive thinking, must have been doing just that, for Buffalo was in last place in the Eastern Division and the colorful and rambunctious Shack at that time had scored only two goals in 11 National Hockey League games for the Kings.

Shack didn't help the Sabres right away but his recent play is one of the reasons for Buffalo's good showing in the last 10 games. He scored three goals Thursday night as the Sabres downed the Kings 5-2 for their sixth win in the last 10 games. The Sabres also tied three and lost one in that span.

EDDIE SHACK

Buffalo's win moved the Sabres into fifth place in the seven-team Eastern Division, two points ahead of Detroit Red Wings, who lost 1-0 to New York Rangers. In another game, Philadelphia Flyers downed the Western Division leading Chicago Black Hawks 6-2, the Flyers' second victory over the Hawks in four seasons.

Shack, who feuded with Imlach while he was coach and general manager of Toronto Maple Leafs, played on all four Stanley Cup teams Imlach led during an 11-year stand with the Leafs.

Imlach had brought Shack to Toronto from New York for Pat Hannivan and John Wilson in November, 1960, but he traded the Sudbury, Ont. native to Boston Bruins during the 1966-67 season for Murray Oliver. The Bruins later traded him to Los Angeles.

Shack's three goals Thursday night brought his total for the season to 14. Gil Perrault, another reason for the Sabres recent success, scored one goal and assisted on two by Shack. Perreault's goal was his 27th of the season, and he is eight short of breaking the NHL record of 34 goals scored by a rookie. He also has 19 assists.

Ross Lonsberry scored twice in five minutes to give Los Angeles a 2-1 lead in the first period, but the Sabres, led by Shack, scored one more goal in the first and second, and two in the third.

The New York - Detroit game was the first since the trade that sent Bruce MacGregor and Larry Brown of the Red Wings to New York for Arnie Brown and centre Tom Miller. Mike Robitaille, the other Ranger in the trade, sat out the game with a muscle tear in his back.

MacGregor, who said after the trade he wanted to think about his future before joining the Rangers, credited Pete Stemkowski, a former Wing traded to the Rangers with helping him make the move.

"Two people had a lot to do with making my decision to join the Rangers and, I might say, this is now a most happy decision," MacGregor said.

"One was Stemmer (Stemkowski) who called me from New York as soon as he heard, telling me what a great setup the players and their families have on Long Island. The other was Dean Prentice's wife, June, who called my wife, Audrey, and told her how good New York is."

Prentice, now with Pittsburgh Penguins, played with the Rangers from 1952 to 1963.

Rod Gilbert's goal at 3:40 of the second period gave New York the victory. The goal, his 20th of the season, skipped over Detroit goalie Roy Edwards' pads.

The Flyers' win over the Black Hawks moved them into third-place in the Western Division, two points ahead of Minnesota North Stars.

Philadelphia took a 1-0 lead on a first period power - play goal by Simon Nolet but Dennis Hull tied the score seven minutes later. The Flyers then scored four unanswered goals in the second period and one more in the third before Dennis Hull scored his second of the night and 25th of the season.

Durbano Cools Heels

TORONTO (CP) — Steve Durbano, Toronto Marlboros defenceman, was suspended for 10 games Thursday by Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz, Ontario Hockey Association president, for his part in a brawl at London, Ont., last Friday.

Durbano automatically missed Toronto's game last Sunday against St. Catharines because of the match penalty. Schmalz ruled that the game would count as one of the next 10 Toronto games Durbano would miss.

In late December, Durbano received a four-game suspended sentence—a penalty he would pay for any future abusive action toward officials.

In forcing the four-game sentence and adding six more games, Schmalz said:

"We have to do something to get this boy back on the right track and get him set for professional hockey."

Lancaster's Arm Mending

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Saskatchewan Roughriders' chances of a repeat Western Football Conference championship next season improved with the announcement that all appears well after surgery to Ron Lancaster's throwing arm. The club said Wednesday the ailment was not as serious as first indicated and the veteran quarterback should have another fine year in 1971.

TORONTO (CP) — Sparky Anderson manager of Cincinnati Reds of the National League, says Toronto is potentially a better baseball city than Montreal and is a "gold mine for somebody to tap" "I've been in both cities and if Toronto isn't the better baseball city and wouldn't draw more people, then there's something wrong with me." Anderson played in Montreal and managed Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League. Montreal Expos have drawn more than a million fans in each of their two seasons since the city acquired a National League franchise.

Duel Renewed At Tely Games

TORONTO (CP) — Polish star Henryk Szordykowski and Chuck Labenz of Los Angeles resume a duel tonight in the featured mile event of the ninth annual Telegram-Maple Leaf Indoor Games.

Labenz, ranked second as a world miler, defeated his Polish rival in a photo-finish at the Boston Athletic Association meet last weekend. Szordykowski, who has won the mile event in his past two Games appearances here, will be out for revenge.

The milers should provide the best show for the Games that get under way at Maple Leaf Gardens at 8 p.m. EST.

Also entered in the mile are Jurgen May of West Germany, who holds the third fastest time for the distance, Sam Bair of Los Angeles, Norm Trerise of Vancouver and Mike McCann of Hamilton, Ont.

The international meet will be preceded in the afternoon by the Ontario high school track and field competitions, and a meet which will bring together college athletes from Canada and the United States.

But while most of the spotlight will be on the milers, an upset could occur in pole vaulting where Bruce Simpson, 20, a University of Toronto student, is given a good chance to reach 17 feet.

Ross MacDonald of Moira Secondary School takes the cool approach to sking as he and Nancy Wormald prepare to board the bus that will convey them to the Oak Hills Ski Club. A total of 60 students from Moira, Quinte and Trenton are taking part in the one week course as part of their special physical education class.

Students Take to Slopes

Students from three local high schools are getting "special treatment" this week at the Oak Hills Ski Club.

The 60-odd participants are enrolled in the special physical education classes at Moira, Quinte and Trenton high schools. Members of the special phys-ed groups are those who feel they would like to make a career in the field of athletes and recreation.

About 85 per cent of the students are novices at the sport, but are making up in enthusiasm what they lack in technique.

The Oak Hills Ski club provides the instructors for the course, which is headed by Doug Ketcheson.

The course has run every afternoon this week from 1.30-4.30 p.m. and the success of the venture will undoubtedly ensure similar efforts in the future.

Oakville Here Tonight

Mo-Hawk Power-play Needs Transfusion

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

On the eve of their 33rd senior hockey game of the season, the Belleville Mo-Hawks' power-play has received another setback.

With nifty centre Doug Senior's absence already showing on Mo-Hawk manpower advantage situations, the club has learned that point man Lou Kazowski will be on the sidelines for a couple of weeks.

Kazowski, who has the club's fourth - highest point total with two goals and 22 assists, has doctor's orders for a complete rest. He missed Tuesday's 5-3 loss in Kingston.

That means both he and Senior, who badly bruised a side in a goalpost collision in Oakville three weeks ago, will probably be lost to the club until playoff time.

LOU KAZOWSKI

It also means the Mo-Hawks will have to come up with a new power - play combination if they hope to pick up wins against teams like Oakville, in town tonight for a 9 p.m. game.

The Oaks hava a 2-1 edge in their meetings with the Mo-Hawks this season, and are tied with Kingston in the OHA Senior A's fourth spot, one point ahead of Belleville.

A win tonight would leapfrog the Mo-Hawks from sixth to undisputed, if slim possession of fourth spot. The two points would also virtually drive the last nail into Owen Sound's play-off hope coffin. The Crescents now trail Belleville by eight points, with each club having eight scheduled games remaining.

Against rough - house style opposition like Oakville, the Mo-Hawk powerplay takes on even more importance.

They scored three power-play goals in a 6-3 win over the Oaks Nov. 27, the only time they have beaten that club since the last month of the 1968-69 season.

In Tuesday's loss in Kingston, it took the Mo-Hawks nearly seven minutes of third-period manpower advantage to come up with a power-play goal, and that came with two Aces in the penalty box.

In the first period of the same game, the Mo-Hawks couldn't score with a 5-4 manpower edge for a minute and a half.

"It hurts when we don't have Doug (Senior)," coach Dave Jones agreed. "He's smart with that puck. And we need Lou back on the point. He's our best defenceman at knowing when to release his shot."

The Mo-Hawks travel to Barrie Sunday, and see their next home action a week tonight against Kingston Aces.

Centennial Wrestling Team Handles Both Opponents

Centennial Secondary School wrestlers managed to successfully grapple the problems presented by their Quinte and Trenton opponents to win their Bay of Quinte triangular -meet last night.

Centennial took a 38-25 decision from Quinte and added a 42-18 victory over Trenton, who came out ahead 31-28 over Quinte in the battle for second place.

Double winners for Centennial were Dave Dzwolak, John Barry and John Dwornick.

Mike Mayo and Vic Power each had a pair of wins for Quinte while G. Horne paced Trenton.

Moore Top Dog

GALT (CP) — Grant Moore has moved into a four-point lead in the OHA senior A hockey individual scoring race and Harold (Boat) Hurley has the goaltending all but officially wrapped up.

Moore of Orillia Terriers erupted for nine points against Woodstock A's this week to gain some breathing room in the tight race. The Terriers' right winger leads in goals, 40, and has 27 assists for 67 points.

Linemate Gary Milroy is second with 63 points, just one ahead of Pete Panagabko of Barrie Flyers and defenceman Ron Hergott of Galt Hornets, each with 62 points. Hergott leads the league in assists with 48.

Bruce Reier of Galt, runner-up in goals with 34, holds sixth place with 58 points.

Hornet goalie Hurley owns a 2.16 average and leads in shutouts with two. He has a 36-goal lead on the second-ranked goalie, Gerry McNamara of Orillia, who has a 3.32 average.

BCI Midgets Save Face

BCI midgets took some of the sting out of losses by their junior and senior basketball teams to Nicholson by coming up with a 79-27 Bay of Quinte COSSA win.

Mark Gallupe went on a 32-point scoring binge to lead BCI to their midget win. Fred Cass followed with 13 points while Tom Rashotte and Steve Culhane scored seven points each for Nicholson.

In senior action Bill Hurley pumped in 28 points in leading Nicholson to a 76-40 victory. Tim Culhane added 14 points for the winners while McKay had 13 for the BCI seniors.

Nicholson juniors pulled out a 67-63 win over the Collegians with John Garvin showing the way with a 26 point effort. Fred Lynch added ten points in a winning cause.

Wayne Giles and Peter LeBaron hooped 16 points each for the losers.

No Complaints About This Woman Driver

Belleville's snowmobile racer Mary O'Neill continues to cut a wide swath in her first full year on the Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federation circuit.

Following two first-place finishes in last weekend's Kitchener Winterfest racing program, the Belleville driver ranks second in the OSRF women's point standings.

Elmwood's Barb Eaton, like Mary an Arctic Cat racer, leads with 1,593 points, followed closely by the Belleville competitor with 1,579.

The two leaders are 450 points ahead of their nearest rivals. Point standings are based on a complicated formula taking into account the degree of difficulty of races entered. Modified events are rated higher than stock competition.

Fairways Holding Fort Without Any 'Big Gun'

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

The Belleville Fairways are proving that they can shoot holes in their Eastern Ontario Junior B league competition without the use of a "big gun."

TERRY MEAGHER

Last year, the Belleville B's boasted no less than three scorers in the top ten as the line of Terry Meagher - John McConnell and Reid Mallory all managed to rank with the league scoring elite.

McConnell and Mallory both graduated from junior to intermediate this season, while Meagher is still working back into top shape after sitting out much of the season.

The right winger has shown that he hasn't lost the knack for picking up points, however, collecting four goals and six assists in the nine games he has played.

Sophomore Danny Lupenette has been the top scorer throughout the season for the Fairways and currently has 17 goals and as many assists.

Defenceman John Mulvihill has utilized his deft puckhandling to rank second in the Belleville scoring parade. The second - year rearguard also boasts a team high total of 21 assists.

The team has been hurt recently by the loss of centre Brian O'Coin, third highest Fairway scorer, who has apparently expressed a desire to return to juvenile hockey in Tweed.

Despite the lack of high point totals the Fairways seem on their way to clinching a playoff spot, a feat that they managed last season. The team is currently two points up on the fifth-place Cobourg Cougars and has three games in hand.

The Fairways have a chance to clinch a tie for fourth spot when they meet the third place Kingston Frontenacs in Belleville Sunday night.

Strike Three!

GUELPH — It was three strikes, you're out for Belleville's entry in the Ontario Curling Association men's championship here Thursday.

A 13-5 afternoon loss to Ottawa's John Winford ousted Quinte Curling Club skip Dave Brown from the double - elimination Consols play.

Brown, and his rink of Nev Burroughs, Bill Henderson and Glenn Watson suffered their first loss Thursday morning, an 11-6 setback to Bayview's Ted Clarke.

The Brown - foursome won their opening encounter Wednesday night, a 9-7 verdict over Louis Turner's Elmvale rink.

Restic Replaced

HAMILTON (CP) — A month-long search for a head coach ended today when Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Football Conference signed Al Dorow.

Dorow, 41, who quarterbacked Toronto Argonauts for seven games in 1959 before the arrival of veteran Tobin Rote, replaces Joe Restic who left Ticats for Harvard Jan. 4.

He agreed to terms with Ticat general manager Ralph Sazio Thursday. Terms were not revealed.

Dorow had been on the coaching staff of Michigan State University since 1965.

Dorow was first-team all-America with Michigan in 1951. The team lost only one game in his two seasons as regular signal-caller.

Dorow played with British Columbia Lions in 1958 and joined the Argos in 1959.

The Argos finished last in the EFC that year and Dorow was replaced by Rote. He joined New York Titans, now the Jets, where he enjoyed his greatest success as a professional.

He led the league in passing and was voted Titans' most valuable player in 1960.

Cubs' Jenkins Thinks Big

CHICAGO (AP) — Two Chicago Cub stars, outfielder Billy Williams and pitcher Fergy Jenkins, reportedly are seeking $100,000 salaries in 1971 but the National League club's front office doesn't consider them holdouts.

"Our policy is that we don't negotiate with our players through the news media and we don't intend to change that policy now," John Holland, Cub vice-president, said Thursday.

"Nobody is a holdout with us, unless he has failed to sign by March 10."

Jenkins, a Chatham, Ont., native who last season was a 20-game winner for the fourth year, has suggested his salary should be boosted to $100,000 from an estimated $85,000.

Judy Breaks Monopoly

MUERREN, Switzerland (AP) — The Alpine ski girls of France, who seem to prefer foreign slopes, Thursday swept the first four places in the Arlberg Kandahar World Cup special slalom.

First non-French girl home was Judy Crawford, 18-year-old physical education student from Toronto, skiing her best performance this season.

The Canadian finished fifth in 100.93, after runs of 50.31 and 50.62.

Family Plan

Brother-sister skating team of Val and Sandra Bezic of Toronto will be among the crowd's favorite competitors at the North American Figure Skating Championships in Peterborough this week. They won the Canadian senior pairs title in Winnipeg last month.

Leading Skip Likes Late Ends

GUELPH (CP) — Bob Charlebois sank his six-foot, three-inch frame deep into a soft chair and explained that 11th ends have become 11th-hour saviors for him at the Ontario curling championship.

Charlebois, a 23-year-old sheet-metal apprentice in Toronto, defeated John Winford of Ottawa 11-8 in the fifth round Thursday to remain the only undefeated rink of the seven still eligible in the double-elimination tournament.

But Charlebois needed a few nifty shots to win finally in an extra end.

He led 5-1 after six ends but Winford counted three on the seventh and then stole one in each of the next three ends to go ahead 7-5.

Then the 11th. Charlebois tucked two directly behind a guard and when Winford missed a draw to the four-foot with his last shot, Charlebois drew to count three.

The rest of the game was automatic, Winford taking one on the 12th and Charlebois nabbing another three in the extra end.

"We're starting to call him the 11th-hour kid," said his vice-skip Rick Palmer. "That's the third time he's got three in the 11th."

In the third round, the three gave him a 9-6 win over Percy George of Wiarton, and in the second, three in the 11th and another in the 12th got him by Tom Steen of Oshawa 7-6.

In other fifth-round games, Ted Clarke of Toronto got even with Bruce Munro of Hanover by winning 11-10 in another extra-end game. In the second round, Munro beat Clarke 7-6. Jim Waite of St. Thomas eliminated Earle Hushagen of Toronto with a 10-3 victory and Claude Rosborough knocked out Cam Lewis of St. Catharines by an 8-7 count.

There were two rounds scheduled today. Winford was to play Alfie Phillips Jr. of Toronto and Munro was to go against Charlebois in afternoon games.

At 8 p.m., Clarke plays Charlebois and Rosborough faces Waite. All teams but Charlebois have lost one game.

The difference in the Clarke-Munro game was also a three-ender in the 11th.

The lead changed hands several times and after 10 ends Munro was up 9-7. Clarke took three in the 11th and won in the same fashion as Charlebois.

Munro scored one in the 12th and in an extra end was light on a take-out through a maze of guards and nudged Clarke in to the four-foot to end the game.

Knudson Back on Even Keel

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

George Knudson says he has discovered a cure for his back troubles which has given him a happier outlook for the 1971 professional golf tour.

The Toronto golfer said before leaving to start the campaign in the Bing Crosby pro-am at Pebble Beach, Calif., that a chance meeting with a chiropractor solved his problem.

"I got talking to this fellow," Knudson said. "He had a theory about balance in the swing and I got interested."

The chiropractor's theory was that a person's centre of gravity has a direct relationship to balance in the golf swing. Knudson said he discovered that while he thought he had perfect balance during his swing, he was actually putting 11 pounds more weight on one foot than on the other.

"That 11 pounds probably wouldn't matter to the average person," the chiropractor told Knudson. "But to a man relying on balance so much, it was very bad."

Knudson said he started working on his balance with the help of the chiropractor and after a month felt much better.

More important, Knudson said, he now knows the cause of his trouble.

"It was a bit scary. Everybody told me there was nothing seriously wrong, just some tension spots in my back. But every time I dived into a swimming pool, my back hurt in about six places.

GEORGE KNUDSON

"I was pulling muscles every time I swung a club. The tensions were building up and every nerve in my back seemed to be pinching."

The new-found cure, however, doesn't mean Knudson plans to enter more tournaments this year. On the contrary, he'd like to do well enough to play in as few as possible and spend more time with his family.

"I'd like to be in a position where I wouldn't have to play unless I wanted to, after the Canadian Open," he said. "The PGA says I have to play 15. I'd like that to be it."

The Canadian Open is set for Montreal July 1-4.

Beware of New Legislation Warns Chamber President

PICTON (Staff) — "New legislative acts being proposed or proclaimed or amendments developed to change the provisions of existing legislation contribute to the complexity of our world."

This observation was forwarded during last night's annual meeting of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce by guest speaker Mark Kellow, president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Kellow remarked that such legislation "usually increases the power of government more often than not, increases the tax burdens and limits, to some degree, the freedom we currently enjoy."

The speaker stressed the importance of understanding legislation and anticipating its long-range effects.

Members of the Prince Edward Chamber were told that the Ontario Chamber of Commerce worked steadily to provide local boards and chambers with legislative information.

Mr. Kellow termed the Benson White Paper on Tax Reform a "misguided document" since it not only sets out to be the instrument of tax reform in Canada but also a vehicle for the introduction of far-reaching social reform.

"In my view Mr. Benson should have concerned himself only with tax reform and dealt with social reform separately in other legislation. By combining the two, he has confused the issue and created a feeling of insecurity and even despair in Canada's vital core of middle-class workers and small businessmen and successful farmers who can see their efforts being wiped out if some of the proposals outlined in the white paper find their way into legislation" Mr. Kellow declared.

Mr. Kellow added that it is a fallacy to suggest that Canada's poor can be enriched by making middle-class wage earners poor.

He observed that only an increase of the sum total of wealth could achieve this.

He remarked "another fallacy in the incorrect assumption that somehow or another, people could get something for nothing . . . in other words, that people can look to the government to satisfy their wants and not their needs."

He charged that "irresponsible election candidates, idealistic academics, cabinet ministers, bureaucrats and a host of others encourage this type of thinking.

"The white paper," said Mr. Kellow, "also proposes to increase taxation on the middle income groups."

He felt that this increase will be transferred to the employer as a higher wage demand which, if met, will either erode business profits or raise prices.

He termed an increase of taxes "a strong inflationary measure."

The speaker examined several other white paper proposals relating to the businessman including a suggestion to tax all employee benefits such as use of a company car

"The Canadian Chamber of Commerce has been very firm in its opposition to these restrictions and has been well supported by the Ontario chamber . . however, I understand from what is reported, the government intends to proceed, nonetheless, with implementation of the legislation proposed in the white paper. Whatever changes it makes will be designed only to still the critics and will be superficial in relation to the total proposals," he said.

Mr. Kellow urged Prince Edward Chamber members to continue in expression of opposition to the proposed white paper.

The speaker mentioned provincial legislation amendments to the Assessment Act made last year which have raised concern in many municipalities. He referred to an amendment to the 1969 budget now called Budget Paper B which outlines provincial plans for the reform of taxation and local government in Ontario.

Mr. Kellow stated that the Ontario Chamber of Commerce responded to Budget Paper B with a major brief.

In the brief it was recommended that the province either restore the assessment function to local government levels or retain it until the pattern of regional city and reformed county governments becomes clear and then deliver this function to these units.

It was suggested in the brief that provincial grants are "the most logical method of financing local municipalities' requirements and that there should be an extension of credit to the province from the federal government in relation to these grants.

Mr. Kellow, in his address, reminded chamber members of community growth problems such as pollution.

"Pollution is a major problem that to me would be particularly tragic where it's become endemic. Certainly I agree with tough anti-pollution laws and the punishment of offenders.

"But to me it is senseless to find a cure and pursue a punishment when prevention could have been the first option," he emphasized.

In closing, the speaker observed "it will take all of us the rest of our years to keep up with all the new laws that come along and the new situation they will be designed to contend with. The challenge which must be met is that you and your chamber contribute in a positive way in the direction that legislation will take."

Sophisticated Speed Trap In Production

There's a new speed checking device on the market which could put the finger on an errant driver without him even knowing.

According to the monthly Department of Highway News, the new gimmick is a combination radar, time clock and camera device that will record a car's speed, the time of day, location and posted speed, as well as take a picture of the car, complete with driver and licence plates.

The new device can be installed along the side of the highway and the speeding motorist would not know where or when he was checked.

But Quinte district motorists can relax for the time being at least.

Superintendent D. E. Wellesley at the Belleville district headquarters of the Ontario Provincial Police says he has heard of the new speed-checking device but as-far as he knows there is no move on the part of the OPP to put it into use.

"I imagine they are pretty expensive," said the superintendent. "To my knowledge, they are not in use by the OPP."

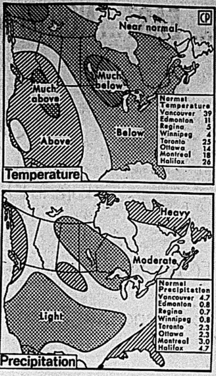
DIFFICULT ANSWER

CLEVLAND, Ohio (AP) — The health department in suburban Lakewood has begun enforcing an 11-year-old ordinance that requires long-haired males to wear bathing caps along with females if they wish to swim in city pools.



Frigid February

Most of Canada will be shivering through February, according to the 30-day forecast of the United States weather bureau. Below-normal temperatures are expected for most areas with much-below readings called for northwestern Ontario and parts of Manitoba. Southern British Columbia and Alberta will have above-normal temperatures. Precipitation is expected to be heavy on the west coast and parts of the Atlantic provinces, light in Manitoba and moderate in all other areas. The outlook is not a specific forecast and changes may occurr. (CP Newsmap)

ANAF News

It is to be hoped that the temperature is higher and the wind and snowfalls are lower this first week in February than it has been this past week. There is an air of activity and expectation around the clubs as the final details for their part in the big Belleville Carnival Week festivities fall into place.

With fair weather, the carnival should be one of the largest and most colorful in south eastern Ontario. All committees have worked hard and certainly deserve a successful weekend.

Remember the Klondike Dances Friday evening when there will be two dances for the price of one. Tickets, which can be purchased from both the ANAF and Legion clubrooms, will give admittance to either or both dances being held by these organizations. Tickets are limited, so don't delay and miss this unique event.

At the Saturday afternoon dart matches the results were as follows: No. 1 singles: winner, Jim Nicholls; runner-up, Bob Benn. No. 2 doubles: winners, Bob Benn and Pete Beumer; runners-up, Russ Blaind and Tom Descote. No two doubles: winners, Ira Wagar and Reg. Workman; runners-up, Dick Burns and Johnny Semark. No. 3 doubles: winners, Bill Totten and Dick Burns; runners-up, Ron Mansfield and Roly Moore. No. 4 doubles: winners, Dick Thompson and Dave Evans; runners-up, Bob Benn and Paul Pelletier. This concluded another successful afternoon.

With another good crowd attending and enjoying the fun of the Mr. and Mrs. Darts Tournament for the Harold Dracup Memorial Trophy, the following popular couple finished up winners with a grandstand throw by the Mr. to get the winning double: Ruth and George Woodhouse. Runners up were Roby Fitzgibbon and Hank Boyle. Ladies' high three darts: Roby Fitzgibbon, 116. Men's high three darts, Paul Pelletier, 137. Sandwiches and refreshments finished up a very pleasant evening. The date of the next Mr. and Mrs. contests will be announced in next week's news.

Sick Chairman, "Kelly" reports two comrades at home: Roy Woods resting comfortably and Jack Feeney, still waiting for a bed in the Belleville General Hospital, and two comrades still in the hospital, Eric Brockhurst, Room 529 and A. R. Craig, Room 512. It was good to see that old warrior, Henry Smale, up and around enjoying life again, he has just recovered from a severe case of throat flu when he could swallow nothing, which was a real handicap.

Device Guides Blind Pourers

TORONTO (Special) — People without sight will have an easier time pouring tea thanks to a new invention recently exhibited at the fifth National General Meeting of the Canadian Association of Rehabilitation Teachers held at the Canadian National Institute for the Blind here.

The device, known as a liquid level indicator, was invented in a Vancouver workshop and is undergoing tests by the CNIB.

Powered by a C cell battery, the unit is fitted with two clips attached to the rim of the cup. A buzzer sounds when the liquid reached the clips.

"It has proven very useful in training newly blind persons," said Miss Alma Brault, CNIB Rehabilitation teacher.

"Most blind people are especially nervous about pouring hot liquids at first and find the new aid reassuring."

Fair Directors Elect Officers

The effects of pollution on food production and the importance of farm safety were topics under discussion at the District 3 Central Fairs convention held Thursday in Belleville.

Guest speaker was Arthur Peppin, assistant to Edward Starr, director of the Agricultural and Horticultural Societies branch of the Ontario Department of Food and Agriculture.

Mr. Peppin showed two interesting films dealing with the effects of pollution on agriculture and on the safe use of tractors, farm machinery and insecticides.

Approximately 150 persons representing fair boards from Warkworth to Kingston and from Picton north to Denbigh, attended the convention.

Normally, dates for all fairs in the district are announced at the meeting but this year only a partial slate was available at convention time.

Albert Vader, president of Coe Hill Fair, was named district director, succeeding Douglas Rollins of Belleville. Mr. Vader's last year's position as deputy director for the fair district was filled by Cameron Bunnett, past president of Belleville Fair.

Miss Geraldine Mowers of Napanee was named women's director for District 3. Traditionally, women delegates to the convention meet separately in the morning to discuss their own fair programs. In the afternoon the women meet with the men for the general session.

Gordon McCubbin of Warkworth was again returned as District 3 secretary.

GM Strike Did Not Benefit Other Canadian Manufacturers

TORONTO (CP — Sales figures clearly show, the General Motors of Canada Ltd. three-month strike in 1970 did not help the other car manufacturers in disposing of 1971 models, says L. G. Rice, president of American Motors (Canada Ltd.

"I have been in the business 21 years and this is the first time it has been so evident a strike made no difference to the market," he said Thursday, commenting in an interview on the strike that began in mid-September. "People waited until the end of the strike to make comparisons."

He said Canadian unit sales by domestic automobile makers declined 25 per cent in the 1971-model year to the end of December.

Sales of General Motors were down 56.1 per cent in the period, compared with year-earlier totals. Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd., Oakville, sold 5.5 per cent more cars, Chrysler Canada Ltd. of Windsor, Ont., 2.7 per cent fewer, and American Motors in Brampton almost the same number as a year earlier.

Volvo Canada Ltd. of Toronto sold 21 per cent more. In the 1970 calendar year Volvo sold about 7,000 cars.

Mr. Rice said he did not see the new subcompacts of the domestic manufacturers routing imported cars in the marketplace.

Meanwhile, a survey showed passenger car sales of the Big Three in Canada were 24,843 in January, down 21.9 per cent from the same month a year earlier, when there was one more selling day.

GM sold 8,662, 37.4 per cent fewer than January a year ago but well up from the December figure of 4,121. A GM spokesman said the low figure reflected a shortage of inventory caused by the strike.

Ford reported January new-car sales of 8,789 units, a 12.5-per-cent decline from a year earlier. However, its sales of small cars—its North American-built compacts and subcompacts and its British import, Cortina, were up 16.7 per cent to 2,505.

Chrysler Canada had sales of 7,392, 6.7 per cent fewer than a year earlier.

NDP Leadership Tour Moves to West Canada

THUNDER BAY (CP) — The national New Democratic Party cross-Canada tour for leadership aspirants moved west today after only a partial exposure here Thursday night.

Two of the five leadership candidates, John Harney, former secretary of the Ontario NDP, and James Laxer, candidate of the left-wing Waffle group, bowed out of a second meeting of a planned 19-city tour leading to a leadership convention in Ottawa in April.

Organizers said both cancelled out because of teaching duties, Mr. Laxer at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., and Mr. Harney at York University in Toronto.

They are expected in Saskatoon today to rejoin the other three leadership candidates: national deputy leader David Lewis; Frank Howard, MP for Skeena; and Ed Broadbent, MP for Oshawa-Whitby.

At the meeting, attended by about 300 people at a union hall, the three leadership hopefuls from the party's parliamentary caucus adopted cautious views of the issue of public ownership.

Mr. Lewis told a questioner that total nationalization "is not a panacea."

"It is a very important tool, but we cannot apply it without setting priorities. We should not say we will, and scare the Canadian people."

Mr. Broadbent said full public ownership of Canada's natural resources is an important long-run commitment of the party "but we cannot do it as an immediate step."

"In terms of our forming a government, we would have to put the long-run commitment into a set of temporary priorities."

Mr. Howard said nationalization cannot apply across the board.

While the extent of foreign ownership was responsible for many of Canada's economic difficulties" it would be pretty destructive to the economy as a social order to nationalize all foreign investment."

The three candidates clashed briefly only once, on criticism by Mr. Broadbent of the federal caucus' voting on the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act.

Mr. Lewis and Mr. Howard disputed Mr. Broadbent's claim that the caucus had shown inconsistency in supporting the measure on second reading, and then lining up against it on subsequent votes.

The party should have voted against the bill, replacing the War Measures Act, at all its stages, Mr. Broadbent said.

High-speed Ground Travel Seen Essential

OTTAWA (CP) — Some form of high-speed ground transportation is going to be needed soon in the "urban corridor" from Quebec City to Windsor, Ont., Dr. O. M. Solandt, chairman of the Science Council of Canada said Thursday.

Traffic densities in this urban corridor will soon be diffcult to handle by air or existing highways, he told a meeting of the Canadian Transportation Research Forum.

Good Sense To Decide

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said Thursday that administration of a proposed law governing trade in textiles and clothing would rely on good judgment by the government and the new textile and clothing board.

"I keep repeating that it will be a matter of judgment," Mr. Pepin told the Commons finance committee in response to questions about how the legislation would work in practice.

The law must be flexible, he said, and those who are interpreting it would have to use their brains.

Randall Sees No Changes When Hoopla Is Ended

TORONTO (CP) — Stanley Randall, Ontario trade and development minister, predicted Thursday that the promises made by candidates for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party will be forgotten when the new premier takes office.

"When all the hoopla clears away, our boys are going to have to get down to reality," Mr. Randall said in an interview.

"Everybody's on the bandwagon now for economic nationalism, but you're not going to find jobs for those 700,000 unemployed in this country without foreign investment."

Mr. Randall, whose department is responsible for promoting development in Ontario, described those who would regulate foreign investment as "economic we dos."

The five cabinet ministers contesting the leodership have promised special incentives and preferential treatment to encourage Canadian investment.

Second Walk Over Moonmen Return

Parades Can Be a Scary Business

Frankenstein doesn't worry the older youngsters but mother's skirts look awfully inviting for the smaller generation. The big fella' was one of the dozens of marchers in the Torchlight Parade last night along Front Street. For further details see page 13.

Chores All Done

HOUSTON (AP) — Apollo 14's explorers completed man's longest moon walk today but a gasping struggle to climb a steep slope halted them short of a prime goal, the rim of a crater named Cone.

Alan B. Shepard and Edgar D. Mitchell returned to the lunar lander Antares after 4½ hours on the moon and prepared themselves and the ship to start the return voyage to earth.

The second walk lasted as long as the first one had Friday.

Despite their disappointment in not reaching Cone Crater as part of their geological field trip, they gathered ancient rocks, dug trenches and sank core tubes four feet into the soil.

More than anything else, however, they wanted to reach the rim of Cone. They had bet many of their fellow astronauts on earth that they could do it.

But as they climbed higher and higher on the long boulder-strewn slope they became more and more exhausted. They breathed heavily and their heart beats nearly doubled.

Mission Control advised them to stop about two-thirds of the way up the 400-foot-high moon mountain.

"That's the order of the day," Shepard lamented.

"It's farther than it looks," said a disappointed Mitchell. So they came back down the slope and continued their scientific expedition, and by the time they were back at Antares, they were in a jovial mood.

With color television recording his moves, Shepard took out two golf balls he had smuggled to the moon and whacked them with a club-like handle from his tool cart. Then he took a spear-like part from a solar wind ex-

Belfast Rioting Kills 3

BELFAST (CP) — Renewed rioting broke out Friday night in troubled Northern Ireland and a British soldier and two Irish Republican Army. Another civilian died when a bomb he was about to throw exploded.

The killings occurred in exchanges between patrolling British army troops and civilians in Roman Catholic areas.

Police said 37 persons were arrested, 11 of them juveniles.

Troops faced a new weapon called the "gelignite sky bomb." It consists of a small pack of gelignite and nails attached to a rocket and was first used Friday night in a Catholic area off Crumlin Road.

A witness described a street in Ardoyne as "like a valley of lead—bullets were dipping and spraying from one side to the other."

Observers said mobs ranged in size from a few dozen to a hundred or more. Fire and acid bombs, bricks and dynamite sticks were hurled at police and troops by rioters racing from street to street through connecting alleyways.

News Briefs

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill to extend the Farm Improvement Loans Act, the Small Businesses Loans Act and the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act to June 30, 1974, from July 1, 1971, was passed by the Commons Friday. The bill now goes to the Senate.

Don't Build Wall Around Country: White

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — John White, Ontario revenue minister, warned Friday against Canada forming a "great wall" of isolation by adopting a narrow economic nationalism to restrict United States investment.

He told an Ontario law students' convention at the University of Windsor that this would lead to "undreamed off" consequences which would include higher unemployment, cutbacks in public services and political radicalism.

Mr. White called for "a wide-open country with investment pouring in from every corner of the globe", from which Canadians could select to enrich their country. In contrast,

B.C. Plans 25,000 New Jobs

VICTORIA (CP) — British Columbia's Social Credit government held out a handful of offerings Friday with its centennial year budget while reaching with the other hand for the public's pockets.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett as finance minister said the objective of his record billion-dollar-plus budget is to create 25,000 new jobs in the province by Oct. 1.

At the same time, he introduced new or higher taxes on hotel and motel accommodation, gasoline and motor fuels and tobacco products.

Spokesman for gasoline companies said Friday night the gasoline tax will mean an additional cost to the average driver of $10 or $12 a year.

The premier estimated revenue from gasoline and motor fuel taxes in the new fiscal year of $100,500,000—up $25 million from the current year, which ends March 31.

The new tobacco tax is expected to bring in revenue of $18.5 million and the new hotel tax $2.5 million.

Death Penalty Commuted

Chiefs Unhappy With Cabinet Action

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A few were outraged and a few philosophical, but police chiefs and prison officials were universally unhappy with the commutation of a convicted police killer's death sentence.

Strongest oppositon came from Chief M. J. (Duke) Kent of Calgary, who commented:

"It's just going to be open season on policemen. It's working to a point where we are just going to be sitting ducks."

His comment was prompted by a cabinet decision, confirmed Wednesday, to save William Rosik, 23, of Sandwich East near Windsor, Ont., from hanging Feb. 23.

Rosik was convicted Jan. 20, 1970, of capital murder as the result of a gun battle in which Constable Roy Carrick was killed and two other policemen injured. The incident occurred Aug. 23, 1969.

Many police officials, checked in a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press, said the defence argument—that Rosik's mental state was so impaired by alcohol and tranquilizers that he was incapable of forming the intent to murder—probably played a large part in the commutation.

"You have to consider the position of the cabinet," said Metropolitan Toronto Chief Harold Adamson. "They have to take into account not only the evidence but all aspects of the case."

He added: "From a police standpoint, of course, we are not happy. The man was convicted and sentenced to hang."

Finley Carroll, chief of police at London, Ont., and president of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, agreed that "it was a clear-cut death penalty, there was no recommendation for clemency, but I guess the cabinet just saw fit to commute the sentence."

He said a committee of chiefs of police discussed the death penalty last week with Justice Minister John Turner and Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

"At the meeting I got the impression that they (the cabinet) don't intend to hang anybody," Chief Carroll said.

Chief Harry McKay of Saint John, N.B., however, said he thought the cabinet action was further evidence that the death penalty no longer exists in Canada.

He said that although he does not believe hanging is the most desirable form of execution, "I'm a strong believer in capital punishment."

"It's a great deterrent."

Thomas Trimble, acting Ontario police commissioner, said only:

"It seems a bit ridiculous to have a law on the books if you aren't going to enforce it."

Edmonton Chief Fred Sloan said: "It's the prerogative of the government and that's the name of the game. As long as the lawmakers provide for commutation then that's the way it is."

The director of corrections at Oakalla Prison Farm in British Columbia said he thought the death penalty should not be used in every case "but in my position I can only feel that the law should remain as it is."

"It is the only protection prison guards have.

"At the same time I do feel it's right that there should be the safeguard that the cabinet is able to commute a sentence. It is a heavy burden of responsibility on them."

Gasping Astronauts Find Crater Climb Just Too Tough

HOUSTON (AP) — "It's farther than it looks," Ed Mitchell said and the disappointment reach the top of Cone Crater. was obvious. Their goal was to Their goal eluded them.

"That's the order of the day," said Al Shepard. He, too, was disappointed.

For more than an hour their breathing on the moon had been labored as they climbed the steep sides of Cone Crater, pulling along—and sometimes carrying—the little cart that holds their tools.

Mission Control worried. And told them to take it easy.

From normal heart beats of 84 a minute for Shepard and 90 a minute for Mitchell, their hearts had raced to 150 beats as they struggled up the 400-foot rise.

The hillside defeated them, and time defeated them.

On the moon they operate on a timeline. It budgets every minute of their valuable and costly stay. Too much time in one place means not enough time at another.

Shepard had suggested they might not make the top.

"Aw, gee whiz, let's give it a whirl," Mitchell said. "I think we'll find what we're looking for up here."

But it wasn't possible.

Their backpacks carry only so much oxygen.
Mission Control had granted a
Earlier
30-minute extension to their scheduled four-hour exploration. But they used so much oxygen in challenging Cone that the extension was later cut by half.

They exerted themselves so much that temperatures inside Shepard's suit rose into the 80s and Mitchell's into the 70s. Normal is in the 60s.

They had been on the surface for their second moonwalk exactly two hours when Mitchell said: "Want to rest here a minute?"

"Okay," said Shepard.

"We're about maximum elevation now," Shepard told Mission Control. "Looks like we'll be approaching very shortly."

But it wasn't that close.

"Oh, it's hard, hard, hard," said Shepard. It was obvious he had a difficult time even getting that out.

They were far out of the view of the television camera they'd set up near Antares, the space ship that brought them down.

While they moved on their unearthly field trip, they photographed, described and picked up rocks, some of which may be the oldest known. At the top of Cone Crater they expected to find a treasure trove of these rocks. But they didn't make it.

You Need Golf Cart To Chase Long Drives

HOUSTON (AP) — Al Shepard, who is not a golfer on earth, became one on the moon today, a space first.

He's not a javelin thrower either. But he was one on the moon.

Using a club-like handle from his tool cart, Shepard drove off two golf balls, apparently concealed aboard the space ship. And then he heaved off a spear-like part from their solar wind experiment.

"I'm trying a sandtrap shot," he said. "I got more dirt than ball."

"Looked like a slice to me, Al," said Mission Control, observing the shot.

"There we go, one more," said Shepard as he hit the second ball.

"It goes miles and miles and miles." With no atmosphere and one-sixth gravity an object travels far on the moon.

There was no need to yell "fore," the traditional warning to other golfers.

Last Candidate To Visit

Large Crowd Meets Allan Lawrence

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

More involvement by grass roots party members in government policy decisions and increased investment by Canadians in their own country were called for here last night by Ontario Mines Minister Allan Lawrence.

Speaking to about 100 Quinte area delegates who will be attending next week's Conservative party convention in Toronto, Mr. Lawrence, the fifth leadership candidate to visit Belleville, said the government was not paying enough attention to the people within the party.

"The time was," he said, "that party members were consulted before policy was decided."

Today, however, when cabinet meets the information on which decisions are based comes from only one source — the civil servants.

"In an age when we can put man on the moon, surely we can devise a system to bring you into policy making decisions, the party leadership candidate said.

As it is, he said, government is run by the civil servants "who decide what you need and what you are going to get, whether or not."

More and more businessmen and farmers are beginning to feel that government is more of a hindrance than a help; older people feel they are being left out and young people ar crying to be involved, the mines minister said.

Attending the meeting were delegates and party members from the three area ridings—Quinte, Hastings and Prince Edward - Lennox.

In a question and answer period Mr. Lawrence replied to queries as to his stand on questions ranging all the way from education costs, regional government and succession duties and foreign investments.

Asked how he would go about reducing education costs Mr. Lawrence claimed the press had garbled what he had said previously on the matter.

Actually, he said he had called for a moratorium on education spending.

"It is about time someone — and it has to be the province — puts a ceiling on these things," he said.

He said there should be a three-year halt to increased education spending with the department of education and county school boards not to exceed their last year's budget.

If such a moratorium was called, with increased government revenue, education spending would amount to about one-third of the provincial budget in three years.

"No single branch of government should spend more than one-third of the total budget." he said.

To another question, Mr. Lawrence said he was opposed to succession duty taxes, and said that as a lawyer he was getting a bit fed up with having to advise clients on how to avoid this tax by setting up "off-shore" holding companies.

Stiff estate taxes and stiff succession duty taxes were driving Canadian money out of the country, he said.

Capital gains tax in some ways was more equitable than succession duties.

But if both were levied it would be double taxation.

To another question on farm policy, Mr. Lawrence said he believed the present farm marketing schemes were "generally pretty good".

He said he would like to see farm machinery manufacturers and dealers set up some kind of a parts pool to make it easier for farmers to secure needed parts.

He admitted, however, that he was no expert on farm matters and as an owner of 50 acres north of Toronto "hardly knew which way the plow was going."

Farm incomes, he said, had not kept pace with those in other sectors of the economy.

Asked whether he favored forgivable loans to big American companies locating in Ontario, Mr. Lawrence replied "yes and no".

He said that in the past too much attention had been paid to providing jobs through attraction of new industry, claiming that somewhere along the line more attention should be given to existing small industry.

Rather than see one big company receive a $5 million loan, it would be better to provide 15 loans to small Canadian companies to encourage plant expansion.

He said his government was trying to encourage more processing of Ontario's natural minerals in the province.

The policy toward which government was working was the more processing done in Ontario the more tax concessions.

On municipal government reform, the mines minister said the province had "goone about as far as it should go."

Regional governments may be the answer to the population explosion in the big metropolitan areas but it had caused sour grapes in the Niagara area and should not be imposed right across the province.

Where regional government had been brought about, Mr. Lawrence said the feeling was that it had been thrust down their throats.

There should be regional government "only if the people want it," Mr. Lawrence said.

Hastings riding member Clarke Rollins asked Mr. Lawrence what was being done to assist mining and manufacturing companies in the fight against pollution, specifically referring to the big Bethlehem iron mine at Marmora. He also noted that the Point Anne cement plant was to be phased out of existence mainly as the result o fthe $1.5 million cost of installing pollution equipment.

Mr. Lawrence said the government was aware of the local calamity of closed plants and was moving toward providing assistance for pollution control.

Control of pollution from industrial plants was possible, Mr. Lawrence said. "It is being done in other countries and can be done here."

To still another question on foreign investment, Mr. Lawrence said he was not entirely opposed, pointing out that it filled a gap provided by the apparent unwillingness of Canadians to invest in their own country.

He said it would cost $125 million to start a mine such as the Marmoraton Mine at Marmora.

"Canadians just don't have that kind of money and we need more mines like that at Marmora."

But new industry by foreign investment would in the future have to be more closely supervised and regulated.

Closing out the meeting, Mr. Lawrence complimented Quinte riding members for the turnout at the meeting.

"It's not a tribute to me but to yourselves and the party," he said. "It shows that no one is pushing anybody around and that most delegates are not making up their minds until they have heard all the candidates."

At the same time, Mr. Lawrence said he was greatly encouraged by the reception he was receiving around the province and expressed confidence that he would be the chosen party leader at next week's convention.

Quinte riding member Dr. Richard T. Potter introduc[illegible] Mr. Lawrence with Hastin[illegible] member Clarke Rollins ex[illegible]pressing the appreciation of the delegates.

Family Planning Centre Shelved

Family planning was one of the main topics of discussion at Friday's meeting of the Hastings and Prince Edward County Board of Health.

Dr. C. R. Lenk, medical health officer, explained that 14 of the 40 health units in Ontario County had workable family planning centres.

He went on to say that, for an initial expense of $5,000, Belleville and the surrounding area could have a similar program.

This program would include medical services, and the dispersal of pills. The cost of these would be covered by the program.

Members of the board were skeptical of the amount that could start a clinic of this kind and felt that the subject needed additional debate.

Because of limited time, the family planning program was left out of the budget for this portion of the year. The program will again be considered in the next meeting, and possibly included in future budgets.

Members of the board expressed the common opinion that facilities of this kind were needed but more material had to be gathered before funds would be allocated.

In the same meeting Kenneth Hicks was chosen without opposition, to be the chairman of the board for the coming year.

Other items on the agenda were the family care program, summer job opportunities, and the budget for the coming year.

To Lose 12 lbs. In Only 1 Week—Eat! Eat! Eat!

TORONTO—Do you really want to lose weight? Not just an itsibitsi ounce a week or a puny pound a month, but all that sagging flesh that adds years to your age, spoils your looks and destroys your figure! If you have failed to permanently slim down bef[illegible] why don't you try what a num[illegible] of successful fat-fighters ha[illegible] done and stuff your tummy full while watching the bulges disappear like magic overnite?

How would you like to wake up tomorrow and discover you're 3 pounds less? And more youthful and slimmer each succeeding day! The secret? It's easy once you forget all your old notions about dieting. You probably failed before because you couldn't withstand the bland formulas, hunger pangs and tiresome calorie counting that the average diet demanded.

Enlightened individuals now are rejecting the traditionally dismal diet doctrines as unworkable for the typically overweight man or woman. Enthusiastic participants from coast to coast are winning the battle of the bulge by eating as much as they can hold while laughing all the way to the clothing store for new outfits!

The author of their happy slim state, M. de Ville, a fat-fighting failure of many years who admits to having little will power, se[illegible] to have stumbled onto a sati[illegible]ingly sure-fire system. Desperately searching for an effortless way to lose weight, he dedicated himself to exploding the mysteries of nutrition and weight control and finally substituted the complex columns of vitamins, calories, fats, proteins and carbohydrates for simple ratio numbers covering most foods. His adherents merely choose from 35 common foods which have ratio factor designations between 4 and 10 and they lose weight extremely fast. No hunger hangups, no counting, no measuring, no exercise. Just eat! After 15 pounds have vanished they graduate to a higher factor category to include selections from 60 foods. Only seven in a thousand reported poor results.

Taking only a minute or two to learn, the method has recently been printed in a limited booklet edition, entitled "The Remarkable Ratio Diet — A Super Speed Slimming and Rejuvenating System of Food Selection". Pollution Probe Urges Offenders Be Reported

You can fight air pollution. Personally, with only a telephone call and a letter.

And by joining the fight you will be doing a favor to yourself, your neighbors and the Ontario government agency set up to combat air pollution.

The Air Management Branch of the Department of Energy and Resources Management has been set up to monitor air quality, and eliminate sources of air pollution.

But few people realize that the AMB has a complaint service geared to receive calls from local residents and act upon them.

For this area, the AMB office is in Peterborough. A district inspector, George Skalin, lives in Belleville and is in charge of monitoring air pollution for three adjacent counties.

But Pollution Probe, the University of Toronto based anti-pollution group says citizen participation and concern is needed if AMB is to do its job effectively.

"We have always found Pollution Probe a reasonable organization," says a spokesman for AMB in Peterborough.

Pollution Probe has embarked on a campaign to make the air management complaint office telephone number known to the public. It has prepared forms for people to fill out in filing written complaints and has prepared an outline of how concerned citizens can help themselves and AMB in cleaning up the air around us.

The information is over due.

An attempt by The Intelligencer this morning to reach the area complaint office involved a merry-go-round of long distance calls.

First, Pollution Probe's suggestion that a complainant telephone a Toronto number and to obtain the local office number was followed. The number given turned out to be the head office of AMB on Bay St. in Toronto.

The switchboard operator there suggested that Belleville calls should go to the Kingston office. The Kingston office referred the caller to the Peterborough office. It turned out to be the correct number

There, a spokesman for AMB said he has received many calls from Belleville since June, 1969.

"Mr. Skalin, the district inspector, calls in twice a day to pick up complaints from his area," the spokesman said.

Only by hearing from "vigilant, informed citizens" can AMB find and deal with the province's air pollution problems, says Pollution Probe.

Learning the specific steps to be taken in combating air pollution "would be a significant pressure on the Ontario government and, as we are finding out, it would be a pressure very much welcomed by the AMB," adds Probe.

Any citizen can telephone Peterborough to complain of air contaminants, defined as "a solid, liquid, gas, odor or combinations of any of them that contribute to air pollution."

Air pollution means the presence in the outdoor atmosphere of any contaminants in qualities that may cause discomfort to or endanger the health or safety of persons or that may cause injury or damage to property or to plant or animal life.

Probe notes that the air pollution act is now four years old.

"After this length of time, few good reasons exist for offenders to go unpunished," says Probe. "However, the act's record of enforcement is not inspiring."

An individual found violating the act can be fined up to $2,000. A corporation can be fined up to $10,000. Each day that a person contravenes a provision of the act constitutes a separate offence.

In practice, says Probe, no fine has ever exceeded $2,000. The branch has made it a policy to refuse to disclose the contents of reports on air pollution checked out by its inspectors.

"As the complainant and as a member of the public, you have a right to all information in the report made by the inspector who investigated your complaint. Such information is gathered at public expense and is of obvious public interest, if not a matter of public health and safety" says Probe. "Resources Minister George Kerr has even made loud announcements in the House that such information is available."

AMB's reason for its "no disclosure" policy is that information may be of competitive advantage to another firm.

But, claims Probe "obviously pressures are being exerted on the Ontario government to keep this information confidential.

"The issue of confidential reports is a matter of policy, not law. Policy is vulnerable to public and political pressure. In demanding your rights you will create precisely that pressure."

Probe has listed "action steps" for pollution fighters. They are: Call AMB at Peterborough. Report clearly and slowly; your complaint has to be written down. State the type of pollution, investigating yourself to discover the location of the building, source, and name of owner. State the time the pollution was noticed, its duration and frequency of occurrence.

Probe advises pollution reporters to give their name, address and telephone number and ask the complaint operator for his. The reference number assigned to the complaint should also be obtained and recorded. Then the telephone message must be followed up with a letter, asking for the inspector's report of the investigation.

Failure to hear about investigations and action "results in complete frustration with the idea of reporting pollution offenders," says Probe.

To help pollution activists, Probe has prepared a form sheet to send to AMB. It provides space for officials to give details of the investigation and any action taken as a result.

The forms are available from Pollution Probe, University of Toronto, Toronto 181

Carr Full-color Stamp To Be Issued Feb. 12

By IAN ROBERTSON

Staff Reporter

The Canada Post Office is once again employing full color to reproduce an oil painting by a famous Canadian artist and author.

Entitled Big Raven, the modernistic landscape interpretation involves the use of yellow, red, blue and black. The stamp will be the same size as the Lismer issue of 1970.

Unaccepted as a major artist until middle age, Emily Carr narrowly escaped posthumous recognition in the art world.

Born in Victoria, B.C. in 1871, the forests, shores and scenery of this province formed a basis for Emily Carr's art just as the folklore of the West Coast Indians provided material for her books.

Unlike her paintings, slow in gaining recognition and acceptance, her first book "Klee Wyck" won the Governor-General's Award for non-fiction in 1941.

Her independent nature and natural artistic ability took her to art schools and studios from San Farncisco to Paris.

She returned to Canada from Paris in 1912 but received only ridicule from both critics and the public.

Schools where she had received her training were not interested in employing her and the Victorians branded her a 41-year-old failure.

This era was one in which modernistic painting went unappreciated and for 15 years her talents went unrecognized.

She was encouraged to return to her artistic life by Eric Brown, then Director of the National Gallery. With her exhibition of 50 canvases in Ottawa, critics and artists understood her work and liked it.

Lawren Harris of the Group of Seven expressed interest in her work and with this encouragement she returned to the land she loved to put down what she saw on canvas.

In 1923 she became a member of the Canadian Group of Painters.

Crippled by heart disease, she had to give up her favorite pets following a heart attack at the age of 70.

Returning to the woods, escaping from doctor and relatives, she continued to apply color to canvas in startling, vivid sweeping strokes.

Later confined to hospital, she turned to the pen for creative efforts. Her autobiography, "Growing Pains", was not published until after her death in 1945.

A total of 27 million stamps, printed by the Canadian Bank Note Company of Ottawa, will be released on Feb. 12.

A complete 1971 Canada Stamp Program was recently announced by Hon. Jean-Pierre Cote, Minister in charge of the Post Office Department.

Following the Emily Carr issue, they are:

March 3—50th anniversary of the discovery of insulin.

March 24—100th anniversary of the birth of Sir Ernest Rutherford.

April 14—Maple Leaf in four seasons . . . spring.

May 7—100th anniversary of the death of Louis Joseph Papineau.

—200th anniversary of Samuel Hearne's expedition to the Coppermine River.

June 1—100 years of Measured Progress, centennial of national census taking.

—Speaking to the World, opening the new Canadian Broadcasting Corporation International Service transmitters.

June 16—Maple Leaf in four seasons . . . summer.

July 20—100th anniversary of British Columbia's entry into confederation.

Aug. 18—100th anniversary of the death of Paul Kane.

Sept. 15—Maple Leaf in four seasons . . . autumn.

Oct. 6—Christmas issues.

Oct. 20—50th anniversary of the birth of Pierre Laporte.

Nov. 12—Maple Leaf in four seasons . . . winter.

No announcement has yet been made as to the number of Christmas stamps planned for 1971.

In previous years, the Canada Post Office has included the values of each stamp with the complete list of issues.

It has been said that because of the deletion of these values, the Post Office may be contemplating a price increase for mail service and does not wish to commit itself at this time.

Farm Meetings Family Affairs

Husband and wife participation at farm organization annual meetings is the new order of things in the Quinte area.

This was evidenced at two such meetings this week when close to 60 per cent of those in attendance were man-and-wife teams.

Approximately 35 wives of Hastings county milk producers turned out Tuesday for the annual meeting of the Hastings Milk Committee at Stirling.

Then, on Wednesday, about 75 farmers from the four-county area of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington and Frontenac attended an ARDA farm enlargement conference at Club Canara in Belleville. Sixty per cent of the farmers in attendance brought their wives along to the meeting.

Douglas Tipper, agricultural representative for Hastings county, said the swing to family involvement at farm meetings is being encouraged by the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food.

At the milk producers meeting in Stirling, the guest speaker was Archie McDonald, economist for the Ontario Milk Marketing Board who talked on policy development for the dairy farmers.

He said his organization was working toward a service that would be to the best advantage of most producers.

Commenting on producer milk prices, Mr. McDonald said the main reason why prices were not moving ahead as fast as hoped for was because in many instances they were tied to government subsidies.

Five new directors for the 15-man county milk committee were named at the meeting. These men will serve for three years under a new policy of staggered appointments adopted last year. The five new directors along with other committee members will meet to appoint a new chairman.

Directors elected to three-year terms were Percy Reid, Joseph Thompson and Gordon Bailey of Rawdon township; Grenville Sine of Sidney and Ronald Graham of Tyendinaga.

Attending Wednesday's meeting in Belleville were farm operators in the Quinte district who are leasing land through the ARDA farm enlargement program.

The main objectives of this section of the ARDA act are to assist in the establishment of viable farm units; to assist in the withdrawal from agriculture of land of low agricultural capabilities, and the release of capital to farmers desiring to sell non-viable farms.

In Hastings county alone, ARDA has either purchased, or is in the process of purchasing, approximately 50 farms or other parcels of land which are being leased back to bonafide farmers to assist in the development of viable farm operations.

Wednesday, farmers listened to Ontario ARDA director Herb Crown talk on the policies of his organization. Others heard were Lou Thompkins, supervisor of the ARDA farm enlargement program, and district ARDA officer Bob Mahon of Kingston.

In the afternoon farmers and their wives were divided into small groups for discussion on how the ARDA program might be improved.

Total Eclipse Next Week

A total eclipse of the moon will occur on the night of February 9 - 10, 1971.

If skies are clear, the total lunar eclipse can be seen throughout North America. In the Quinte region, the eastern edge of the moon will enter the earth's shadow at about 12.52 a.m. It continues moving into the shadow of the earth and will become totally eclipsed at approximately 2.03 a.m. The moon passes out of the earth's shadow at 4.37 a.m.

When the moon moves completely within the earth's shadow it is not usually blotted out completely. It may shine with a dull, coppery color because sunlight is refracted through the atmosphere of the earth and faintly illuminates the eclipsed moon.

No special equipment is needed to enjoy the lunar eclipse. However, binoculars or a small telescope will enhance the opportunity of seeing lunar craters and mountainous areas disappear within the shadow and reappear a few hours later.

Bleecker Repairs Are Under Review

Repairs or strengthening of the defective partition wall at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium on the Belleville fairgrounds may be a more expensive proposition than was originally estimated.

At Monday's council meeting it was stated that the interior partition running the entire length of the auditorium was three inches out of plumb at the west end and that repairs could cost up to $11,000.

At that time it was suggested that the installation of pilasters to support the wall might solve the problem and Alderman Donald Soutter, chairman of the recreation-arena committee, the city engineer and city manager were authorized to have the necessary repairs done.

But now there is some doubt that pilasters would do a satisfactory job and it is possible the entire wall may have to be taken out and rebuilt

But before anything is done a firm of engineering consultants will be asked to do a complete survey of the problem and prepare a report with detailed specifications of what should be done.

Mayor Supports One-way Street

PICTON (Staff) — Picton Mayor Margaret Ackerman last night urged members of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce to support an effective solution to the traffic problem existing on Main Street.

The mayor, speaking to the annual meeting at the Prince Edward Yacht Club, reminded members that in 1967 a lengthy survey was made to determine what could be done to improve the present situation.

She noted that a one-way street had been suggested in the report but added that this idea was vetoed by several businessmen.

"Some merchants felt a one-way street would be a detriment to business," she recalled.

Mrs. Ackerman offered this proposal her endorsement, terming it an asset which would permit a free flow of traffic at the top of the town hill.

She added that additional parking areas could be developed and that businessmen could open rear entrances to their stores.

Mayor Ackerman commented briefly, on her recent election to office. She observed "with my able council I find I do homework.

She confided that Picton councillors treat her both as a woman and as one of them.

"How does it feel to be Mayor of Picton," she said, repeating a question she has been asked many times recently?

"I can't truthfully say I feel any differently," she replied.

Canada's 'Poor'

Remember the so-called poor people's demonstrations across Canada a week or so ago. "Groups of poor people," reported The Canadian Press, ranging in size from a handful of youths shivering in below-zero temperatures at Winnipeg to a crowd of about 500 in downtown Toronto, demonstrated, shouted, burned things and listened to speeches across Canada."

No one can deny that there is poverty in Canada — real poverty — but some of the people allegedly in this category and seen talking with Opposition leader Stanfield and Health Minister Munro, obviously had money for cigarets.

Again, a reading of today's column from Ottawa by Richard Jackson indicates that the bandwagon of the real poor is being powered to a considerable extent by other groups; it comes as no surprise to learn that they number many of the eccentrics of the New Left.

A picture of the Ottawa demonstration was eloquent of what we mean: a long line of young people carrying placards in English and French. A well-groomed and pleasant-looking blonde in a good quality coat, slacks and gloves is carrying a placard with the slogan, "Up The People." There are fur coats, ski jackets, sunglasses and beards and one bearded young man is gesturing arrogantly at the cameraman. A well-clad young woman turns and laughs at his antics.

Poor? What a joke — no they are the careerist demonstrators of the left whom columnist Jackson identifics so clearly. These people are poor only in the poverty of the politics they embrace. And they fool no one; at least we hope not, for it is only the gullible who could be taken in by such posturing; the latter, incredibly, could include some sections of the Press since the caption on this picture reads: "Some representatives of Canada's poor march on Parliament Hill in protest."

Let us help those who are genuinely poor; and yes, let the poor help themselves too. The meretricious Maoists and professional protesters of whatever stamp can look after themselves; but let us recognize them for what they are.

Board Agenda

At meetings of public boards it is standard practice for members of the Press as well as trustees to be supplied with copies of the agenda, and preferably in advance of the meeting.

At meetings of the Hastings and Prince Edward separate school board however agendas are hard to come by, if they are available at all. At the last meeting the Press learned from chairman Ben Kroeze that issuing of agendas to the press was an item for discussion that evening, but the matter had not been brought up by the time the meeting went into committee of the whole two hours later.

Subjects for discussion were referred to by number, including the year-end financial report and resolutions submitted by previous closed meetings. Thus their precise nature could not be determined.

This is not good enough. The board is conducting public business and the public has a right to know what is beng done in its name. It is to be hoped that this procedural matter, essential to the practice of democracy by elected bodies, will be instituted forthwith by the separate school board.

They Are Back!

One of our illustrious airlines which got panned by the public for putting its stewardesses in midi skirts has relented and gone back to minis.

The stewardesses will wear minis in flight but on the ground they will have a choice of pantsuit. gaucho. or mini. All the styles are what the company still calls a "non-uniform," and it is likely they will excite further comment.

Some may question the "non-uniform" idea by reason of the fact that the choice of styles is from a leading Canadian department store. Thus the girls run the risk of bumping into passengers and office girls wearing the very same outfit. And everybody knows what a calamity that can be.

Maybe the outfits are exclusive, in which case there is nothing to worry about. One other thing — those young women modelling them in the full-page ads, they are surely not real stewardesses but rather teenage models from the department store's modelling agencies. They look perhaps 17 at the outside!

Health Minister Under Siege

Careerist Poor, Full of $s and Guff, Show Their Colors

By Richard JACKSON

OTTAWA — Toronto and Montreal have known it for quite some time.

Victoria and Vancouver more recently discovered it.

And just the other day the National Capital — in both its federal and municipal establishments — were rudely awakened to the fact of militant life that some of the poor make a career of poverty as welfare professionals.

These "careerist poor" stage their demonstrations well organized, well led and, for people who profess and protest poverty, surprisingly well financed.

They came to Ottawa the other day — at least the organizers and leaders were from other centres, mainly Montreal and Toronto — armed with a cashroll of $1,600 for "bail" they explained, should any of the local welfare protesters they fired up somehow manage to get arrested.

They came to head a hassling of federal and provincial welfare officials in session at the Government's "new" conference centre in "old" Union Station.

And they scared federal Health and Welfare Minister John Munro off his feet, literally. For down he plopped onto the floor to "rap" with them, as they called it, enduring their scolding and frequently screaming militancy for an hour.

To demonstrate just how contemptuous they were of the establishment which they were demanding feed, house, clothe and entertain them as a continuing way of welfare life, one of the "careerist poor" urinated in a wastebasket on the floor of the conference centre rotunda just a few feet from where Health Minister Munro squatted so meekly.

They certainly made an impression on him.

For as he sat there among them, head down and doing all of the listening while they did the talking, perhaps a little intimidated, he came through with exactly the right response they demanded of him.

"If the Government does not do something for the poor there will be serious and unfortunate trouble," he conceded, and they promised him indeed there would.

It all started pretty low key earlier in the day with a routine "protest march" on Parliament Hill with other militants, the Maoists, hippies, Lapalme mail truck drivers, women's lib, campus radicals and assorted "demos" of all shades leftist opinion, including Quebec separatists and a few self-proclaimed FLQ partisans crowding into the act.

Then they went to the $48,000,000 National Arts Centre to draft a "manifesto" for the welfare officials.

But this was not enough action for the younger militants who headed up a "poverty task force" to "crash," as their leaders put it, in through the conference centre doors to confront the federal and provincial welfare officials nose to nose.

They made it past the police at the main gates, and then made the mistake of wasting time shouting and screaming at the doors of the conference room while working up the nerve to batter them open and charge on in.

This gave police time to rush up reinforcements to man the conference barricades.

So the "poor" sat down, announcing they would not leave until they talked with all the assembled welfare ministers.

As the sit-in — it was more like a siege — of the welfare ministers dragged on, stalemated, a young "poverty fighter," as he described himself, wandered through the crowd flashing a roll of $1,600 cash money.

He said he was Sean Mayberry of Toronto and the $1,600 was for "bail in case anybody gets arrested."

Rather an extraordinary sum of money for a representative of the poor to be carrying, it was suggested to him.

Not at all, he explained. It had been "loaned" to the poor, but by whom he declined to disclose.

There was a phone in the rotunda and a lineup to put through long distance calls to Toronto and Montreal, but the operator on the government switchboard refused to co-operate.

She heard a whole vocabulary of obscenity before a service crew arrived to take out the phone.

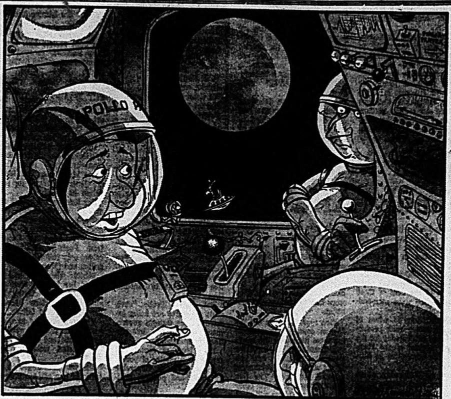
After the four-abreast, arm-in-arm march from Parliament Hill — "there's no way the pigs can stop us," cried the front rank — to the Arts Centre and then on to the welfare ministers' conference, things began to bore a bit as the sit-in dragged.

To perk up interest, or merely to "protest," as he put it, failing to specify just what he was protesting, the show-off among the "professional poor" relieved himself in the wastebasket on the floor right there in the middle of the room.

There were a few girlish giggles heard, but nobody, the police standing in guard duty nor the careerist poor sitting in protest, said a word.

For "poor people," it was a strange group, with $1,600 ready in bail money, some driving late model cars and others planning to spend a few days enjoying the sights and sounds of the Capital checked in at a very decent and not inexpensive west end motor hotel.

Ah well, it is hell to be "poor."



"The last thing my wife said to me was 'You never take me anywhere'!"

Downtown Area Faces Competition

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The CJBQ radio open line program "What do you think?" provides a forum for the citizens of Belleville to vent their feelings on the topic of their choice. Comments range from the sublime to the ridiculous and from the sensible to the non-sensible.

On Thurday Jan. 28 the special guest on the program was Fred Deacon whose comments on urban renewal in general, and the much talked about Magic Circle in particular must surely be rated as the most nonsensical heard in a long time.

Mr. Deacon got off to a good start by telling us that the citizens of Belleville "owed more than a debt of gratitude to the downtown merchants", and went on to suggest that the entire cost of urban renewal with regard to the proposed Magic Circle should come out of the general tax revenue of the city, his reasoning being that the downtown pays 18 per cent to 20 per cent of the general revenue of the city.

May I correct this completely false assumption that the citizens of Belleville owe the downtown merchants anything at all. Indeed, it is the other way round. The downtown merchant owes his prosperity, and his livelihood to the patronage of the people who live in the area. Without them he would be sunk. I suggest however, that the average Bellevillian could get by without the merchant if it came to the pinch.

Any man paying property taxes does so, not because he particularly wants to but for the privilege of living in the property. As he does not receive any revenue from his property he can accurately state that he pays his own taxes. However, the downtown businessman calculates his business property tax as an operating cost, and rightly so. But we must not forget that he provides for this in the mark up for his merchandise or services, so in actual fact it is the consumer or customer who ultimately assumes this tax obligation. The merchant merely transmits it on to the municipality.

Another of Mr. Deacon's jolly suggestions was that renewal of the downtown would brighten the area up, so once again he felt it was the taxpayer who should pay for it. If I repair or redecorate my home, I benefit and so does the street as a whole, but I certainly do not go round and present my neighbors with a bill for the renovations, so why should we pay for the downtown businessman's paint and polish?

Mr. Deacon sheds a few crocodile tears for "cost of bringing in new industries" saying that "the services are always provided by the local improvement taxes". I wonder what size handkerchief Mr. Deacon cried in when he and the other downtown merchants established themselves. But of course, this was different. Usually, of course, the new venture more than pays for the initial investment over a period of time.

This gentleman also found it hard to disguise his fear and dislike of the new shopping plaza on north Front Street. Like so many of his fellow businessmen the thought of competition must loom as a nightmare after so many years of unhampered and unchallenged trading. But in the "free enterprise system" sir, competition is the spice of life. His reference to the fact that if the downtown merchants "close their doors some 200 people would lose their jobs and the new plaza would only provide some 40 or so".

This is a deliberate misrepresentation as it has been publicly stated on many occasions by people better informed than Mr. Deacon that the venture will, in fact, employ well over 300 persons, and I suspect their salaries will not have to be too high to make the prospect of working there more than attractive to some of the people presently employed by the generous employers of the downtown area.

Mr. Deacon's puerile attempt to scare us into believing that 15 per cent or so of the merchants downtown will close their doors when the new plaza opens demonstrates the type of negative thinking that seems to dominate the business elite of Front Street. Personally, I believe that those merchants who trade honorably and in good faith, and who provide the customer with what he wants at a price he is prepared to pay will continue to prosper. Those who fail to do this must be prepared to accept the price of failure in the jungle of free enterprise and close their doors.

The downtown area will have to be revamped one day. There is no parking and the layout of the streets that will comprise the Mall must be completely torn up. As a businessman one would think that Mr. Deacon would appreciate that with the economic climate as it is today, there are other more pressing and needy causes on which to spend money. When the time comes, (if it does in our life time) for the Mall to be rebuilt, the citizens of Belleville must ensure that those who stand to benefit the most (the merchants) will stand to contribute the most. Any other approach would amount to little more than daylight robbery of the tax chest.

Questions for Study Program

Non-Medical Use of Drugs

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

With $4½-million being poured into a huge program to study and combat the non-medical use of drugs, I have eight questions which I feel should be definitely answered before there is any possibility of legalizing marijuana. This will require a comprehensive study over a considerable period of time.

1. In tests conducted under the surveillance of persons not under the influence of drugs, what effect does marijuana have on a person who uses it? Can he be led into doing things which he would not otherwise do?

2. What is the effect from build-up of the drug in the bodies of those who use it?

3. Is it possible for effects to return after use is discontinued, as can happen sometimes with LSD?

4. What is the long range effect on organs of the body such as kidneys, liver, heart, etc.?

5. What is the long range effect on the brain, and on senses such as sight, etc.?

6. In tests equal to those conducted with tobacco — does marijuana cause lung cancer?

7. Since marijuana's strength varies according to climate and soil where it grows, and also from plant to plant, can some method be found to conduct definite tests in event of legalization to be sure that the content of tetrahydro-cannabinol is stable, and marked on all marijuana sold?

8. And last but perhaps most important of all, what will be the effects on the children of marijuana smokers, such as possible birth defects, etc.?

Sherbrooke, Quebec.

Britain Trying Low-Cost Distillation of Sea Water To Combat Water Shortage

UNESCO Features

Britain, a country with one of the wettest climates in Europe, is in danger of running out of water before the end of this century.

In the course of an international seminar on river basins held in London recently, Lord Kennet revealed that the demand for water in England — where, on average, 250 litres per person are consumed every day — is expected to double within the next 30 years.

With a population density greater than that of India, Britain suffers from a serious shortage of agricultural land and, as the demand for water increases, plans to build new storage reservoirs in farming areas meet with increasing public opposition.

Various other alternative storage sources for water are being investigated in Britain. Some work has been done on the underground storage of water in naturally occurring water-bearing rock strata. In fact, part of London's water supplies now comes from an area where this technique is being practised. Other research work includes feasibility studies of dams to be erected across some of the larger river estuaries such as the Humber and the Dee, Mo cambe Bay and The Wash.

But Lord Kennet has gone on record as saying that the only really long-term solution to the problem of Britain's future water supplies will come from the desalination of sea water.

Britain has already supplied oil-fired desalination plants based on the multi-stage distillation process, for countries in the Middle East and the Mediterranean regions. For operation in Britain with a lower ambient temperature, however, it is considered that either atomic power must be used to keep fuel costs down or an alternative system to distillation will need to be used.

Research development work is now proceeding on a system of desalination by refrigeration. This type of plant does not require so much power and it even an advantage to use sea water. The salt water is cooled down with a liquid refrigerant, such as butane and, as ice crystals begin to form, they are separated from the brine. When melted, they produce almost fresh water.

A desalination plant based on the refrigeration method is now being built at Ipswich in eastern England, where rainfall is lowest. It will have an initial capacity of 4½-million litres per day.

South African Churches Split

Dutch Reformed View Differs From All Other Denominations

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Churches in South Africa live in two different worlds and recent events have spotlighted the cleavage.

Most leaders of the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths condemn apartheid, the official program for separate development of races. The three Dutch Reformed churches, which represent two-thirds of the white population, spiritually underpin the country's white-minority rule and seek to justify apartheid in biblical terms.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, on a recent visit to South Africa, spoke up for closer relations among the churches—but few steps in this direction can be seen. The archbishop, Dr. Michael Ramsey, is leader of the Church of England.

He spent two weeks in South Africa as the guest of Anglican leaders, and examined apartheid first hand. He did not like what he saw and believes church unity is a logical step in the fight against racial separation.

Specifically, he urged a dialogue between the Church of the Province of South Africa, which is Anglican, and the three Dutch Reformed churches.

Dr. Ramsey warned of the threat of violent revolution in South Africa unless there are changes. These changes, he said, must come not from liberals, "whose efforts are always squashed," but from government supporters coming to realize that apartheid does not work.

His proposal for dialogue was received enthusiastically by J. J. Muller, professor of theology at Stellenbosch University. "I think the way is open for dialogue and there is nothing to prevent it," Muller said. "All that is needed is for somebody to take the initiative."

The Anglican bishop of Johannesburg, Rt. Rev. Leslie Stradling, was less optimistic. He said all previous approaches had been rejected.

A spokesman for the Nederduitse Gereformeerde Kerk, largest of three Dutch Reformed churches, saw a possibility of informal talks with other Protestant churches this year.

Afrikaans-speaking descendants of Dutch, German and French Huguenot settlers make up the majority of adherents to the sternly Calvinist Dutch Reformed churches. These churches refused to recognize a "message to the people of South Africa" in which the interdenominational South African Council of Churches last year condemned apartheid as "rooted in and dependent on a policy of sin."

The council and the Christian Institute of Southern Africa have joined forces to try to find a Christian answer to apartheid.

A major problem facing reform-minded clergymen is the physical and spiritual gap between black and white Christians, caused by segregation. Afrikaner churches enforce segregation although there is no law against multi-racial worship.

Social separation makes it difficult for races to worship together even in multi-racial denominations. In addition most white Christians seem to accept social segregation no matter what their churches say.

Differing customs, ways of thinking and languages are also barriers to multi-racial worship. Some blacks find Western ritual and traditions of established churches foreign to them. One result of this in the last quarter century was the growth of black religious sects.

The new sects are seen by many church leaders as a sign of failure in the white Christian establishment.

Dr. Ramsey carried one basic message: South African churches should work toward promoting multi-racial services. "I'm quite certain my visit heartened members of the church who are struggling to do what is right about apartheid and social conditions," he said on his return to London.

His criticism of apartheid was described by Die Transvaler as "the most horrific examples of distortion South Africa has ever seen."

Dr. Ramsey did gain some popularity from government supporters when he said he opposed a World Council of Churches decision to grant $200,000 to organizations which South Africa considers terroristic.

The announcement Sept. 3 said $200,000 would be granted to 19 movements opposing racism and racist regimes.

Among groups to be aided are the African National Congress, banned in South Africa; the Zimbabwe African People's Union, banned in Rhodesia, and organizations that say they seek liberation for Portuguese areas in Africa.

At one point South Africa's prime minister, John Vorster, warned member churches of the World Council that he would "act against them" if they did not quit the world body. His threat was interpreted as meaning that the government would ban church affiliation with the council under the broad provisions of the country's Terrorism or Suppression of Communism Acts. Vorster also warned that he would not allow further financial contributions to leave South Africa for the council.

First to defy his threat was the 60,000-member Presbyterian Church of Southern Africa. While the church disapproved of the grants, it voted 75 to 57 at its annual assembly to remain with the council. Earlier, the Presbyterians voted to merge with two black African Presbyterian churches and form the United Presbyterian Church.

This looks like the start of a significant racial change in the Presbyterian Church. It will be merging with black churches that have a membership of some 200,000.

Later the multi-racial United Congregational Church of Southern Africa and the Anglicans decided to remain with the World Council, but all criticized the body for its implied support of violence.

The Dutch Reformed Churches have had little to do with the question. They are members of neither the world body nor the South African Council of Churches.

Gliding with the Times

Nancy Plumridge, the first girl in Belleville to obtain her glider pilot's licence, models "hot pants," the fashion world's latest fancy that is fast replacing the mini, at the Belleville Flying and Gliding Club.

Woman Glider Pilot Models New Fashion Designed Locally

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

Glamorous Nancy Plumridge, the 20-year-old girl employed as an accountant in Deloro Stellite Ltd. who was chosen by designer Shirley Woodcox to introduce the "hot pant" look which is already the rage in the metropolitan centres of the fashion world, such as London and Paris, to the Belleville public is no mere idle beauty who spends all her spare time sitting pretty. She and 16-year-old Hillary Brown are the only two women gliders in the Belleville Flying and Gliding Club and Miss Plumridge was the first woman in Belleville to do her solo flight in August 1970 and obtain her gliding licence. At present she is taking a power training course and hopes to obtain her commercial pilot's licence in the near future.

On Wednesday evening, just before attending a ground school lesson for trainee pilots at the Flying Club, Miss Plumridge pirouetted gracefully before the camera, showing that feminine legs which were nearly doomed to go into oblivion by the onslaught of midi fashions are certainly making a come-back, this time in something more daring and provocative than Mary Quant's mini ever claimed to be. Hot pants are certainly reminiscent of the short shorts of yesteryear which were confined to the beaches and summer resort playgrounds, only occasionally making an appearance in city streets.

Now short shorts have not only been rechristened with a suggestive new name, but have also been given the green light from designers such as Pierre Carden to go everywhere! And going they are to offices, parties, chic dining clubs and everywhere else in such centres as London, Paris and New York. Not of course the old denim variety, but in many new fabrics, wool, silk, tweed, leather, even fur, and dressed up with accessories, boots, opaque pantyhose, jewellery and everything else that helped to add up the mini to a fabulous total look.

Miss Plumridge's version of the new look is an outrageous leather one designed and manufactured by Shirley Woodcox, cut higher, and tighter than an average pair of shorts, flirting patch pockets closed with metal buttons. Her matching battlejacket swings into action against the snappy, black and white zebra striped background of her turtle necked sweater. Black high boots complete this great look for great bodies.

Miss Plumridge who is 5' 8" tall is a native of High Wycombe, an air force town in Buckinghamshire, England. She attributes her interest in gliding and flying to the fact that planes and gliders seemed to be an integral part of the scene in her childhood since air force pilots train with gliders. She came to Canada four years ago with her family and learned gliding at the Belleville Flying and Gliding club where her instructor was Ron Mason. The course involves 35 flights with one's instructor, then 20 solo flights before one is qualified to take the flight test and get the licence.

Miss Plumridge who glides every weekend claims that it is a peaceful sport. She enjoys the total silence around her when she glides as there is no noise from engines which makes even the wind and sounds such as train whistles from the ground so far beneath her, clearly audible. She also finds it a very relaxing sport and the astronauts must agree with her because most of them enjoy it as a pastime. Training in gliding will also help her to be a better power pilot.

Family Honors Nonagenarian

Mrs. Maude Brownlee of Trenton was visited by six of her daughters on the occasion of her 90th birthday when a quiet celebration was held at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brownlee, 2 Gould Street.

She was the recipient of many beautiful floral arrangements along with gifts and cards from England, Scotland, Winnipeg and other points. Congratulatory messages were received from Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and Robert Stanfield leader of the opposition, and George Hees, MP for Prince Edward-Lennox.

Mrs. Brownlee has lived in Trenton for the past 38 years and is a member of Grace United Church. During the afternoon lunch was served which included a beautifully decorated birthday cake.

Rev. F. A. Hobbs and Mrs. Hobbs called and communion was given.

"The florist closed these out for $1.50... I thought if you were willing to go two bucks for them, I'd make myself a fast fifty-cent profit."

IODE Holds Annual Meeting

MARMORA — The annual meeting of the Marmora Chapter IODE was held at the home of Mrs. Charles Brady.

The annual report, as presented by the secretary Mrs. G. A. Wentworth, showed a successful year. The Chapter concentrates on educational welfare and community work. In 1970, for the second year, the Chapter sponsored a Science Fair for Marmora elementary school pupils. Further, the Chapter sponsored a bus trip to the Ontario Science Centre, Toronto, for Marmora Grade 6 elementary school pupils.

The "adopted" school at Davis Inlet was assisted with four large cartons of reference books for a library and a Christmas parcel sent. Donations were made to the Marmora Agricultural Society for children's prizes at the Fall Fair, to Marmora Public Library, to the Legion fund for Christmas parcels and to Beechgrove Children's Unit, Kingston Psychiatric Hospital (IODE Special Services' Project — Mend).

Shipments of used clothing were sent to the Scott Mission in Toronto and several knitted articles and layettes were sent to Provincial Headquarters. The Brownies were given a donation to replace an owl and pennant.

Members of the Chapter participated in the CNIB canvass, the March of Dimes and the Red Cross "Blitz".

The 1971 slate of officers is as follows: Past Regent, Mrs. William Regan; Regent, Mrs. Dennis Ayler; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Vaughn Glover; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Leonard Bicknell; secretary, Miss Miriam Savage; treasurer, Mrs. Sid Demorest; services, Mrs. Howard Bleeker; education secretary, Mrs. Gordon Bennett; Echoes, Mrs. William Regan and standard bearer, Mrs. Jack Jones.

Discussion ensued regarding the future educational program and this year the Chapter will again sponsor a bus trip to the Ontario Science Centre, Toronto, for Marmora Grade 6 elementary school pupils. However, it was decided to cancel the Science Fair for this year.

Mrs. Regan expressed thanks for the co-operation extended to her during her term of office.

AN ETERNAL DELIGHT

"Just what is the mysterious attraction in chocolate?" — John Bowers.

* * *

Three guesses: what is one of the world's oldest foodstuffs; has 152 calories to the ounce, is the preferred flavor (often people cannot stop with one bit. One little girl prayed that she be able to buy all she wanted when she grew up); and means "bitter water" in Aztec language, whose people considered the tree from divine origin?

But how right you are! It is, indeed chocolate. First served as a drink in Spain where it was kept a secret after Cortez brought it over from the Aztec Indians. After which chocolate coffee houses outnumbered coffee houses throughout Europe. Eighteenth century England considered it "a romantick inflamer worse than the novel," while today it is universally acceptable during Valentine's Day period, for sweethearts.

And, oh, so acceptable just any time of the entire year! Witness "the Tiffany of chocolate emporiums' called Plumridge, at 21 East 65th Street, N.Y., from which a Texas oil man sends shipments to h'is wife by private plane. From which its chocolates are regulary sent to Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge be he living in Saigon, Palm Beach, Rome, Southern France or wherever. The Duke and Duchess of Windsor always order chocolate mints. Plumbridge chocolate lovers of the film world are Joan Crawford, Harry Belafonte and Fay Wray. Its candy is made the same way as a century ago — poured hot onto marble slabs to cool.

Another favorite chocolate candy store is Godiva Chocolateier de Belgique. It has 16 stores throughout the United States and a dozen more in Europe. The candy is about $5 a pound, though there are special four pound boxes for $50.

The West Coast, we learn, has several big name chocolate stores. One is Blunts of California which does a tremendous mail-order business. Especially at holiday times when thousand dollar orders pour in from wealthy patrons and celebrities. Shirley Temple Black, Madame Chiang Kai-shek and Virginia Graham are among its devotees. Another is See's which sells moderately priced "home-made" candies. While Chicago has Andes Candies and Philadelphia De Mets Shellenberger, the best seller in Boston is Fanny Farmer.

Which brings us to Canada's own Laura Secords and to our very own city of Belleville where the founder, Mr. John Hayes, was born. He made his brother-in-law, Mr. Frank O'Connor a partner, who later ran the Laura Secord Company.

The executive vice-president of Laura Secord's today is Mr. Don Hillhouse and it is interesting to note that his wife Joan is the daughter of Mrs. R. S. Hamilton of Belleville, and the late Mr. R. S. Hamilton.

Who of us have not fallen captive to the exquisite delicacy of chocolate, which say the gods, should be tasted and treated "like fine wine."

Pant Suits Not Accepted By Mormons

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church leaders, who oversee 17 hospitals, say they don't dont their nurses working in pant-suits or mini-skirts.

But hospitals have approved pant-suits for nurses, while others are examining the issue.

But the 17-hospital chain run by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints — Mormon — says no pant-suits or minis.

Clarence Wonnacott, assistant commissioner of health services for the Mormon Church, said the church's new policy is: "Uniforms will be of the authorized colors and designed as outlined in hospital policies — clean, neatly pressed and of modest fit. Extreme fashions in clothing such as pant-suits are not acceptable."

Neither are short skirts, which have caused patients to become "disturbed," Wonnacott said.

While midiskirts are not mentioned, he said, they would be more acceptable than minis or pant-suits.

Nurses in the hospitals generally wear knee-length skirts.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

CARMEL WI

An enlightening film on arthritis was featured during the program when Carmel Women's Institute held its recent meeting at the home of Mrs. Royden Baker, Corbyville.

President Mrs. George Graham opened the meeting and a short business period followed at which time Mrs. Whitmore gave the report from the board members' meeting. The East Hastings district annual meeting will be held May 13 in Foxboro, and it was decided for the February meeting members would go out to dinner at the China Village Restaurant, North Front Street, with a meeting to follow.

Mrs. Baker, convener of the program showed the film on arthritis which pointed out that Canada is on the threshold of the best arthritis control program in the world and it is hoped that this threshold will be crossed and that a new era will hold promise of abolishing of the needless disability and suffering due to arthritis and other rheumatic diseases.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

A Little 'Zing' Added to Vegetables

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I am in a rut when it comes to cooking vegetables. We had glazed carrots at a dinner meeting that were delicious. Could you print or send the way to fix them and any other vegetable ideas to change my menus? Love your column. Sylvia H.

ANSWER: You jumped the gun. I had ready to give you next week two vegetable recipes: one for glazed carrots and another for savory celery.

GLAZED CARROTS (serves 5 or 6)

4 large carrots (scrubbed, trimmed weight 1¼ lbs.)
½ tsp. salt
2 tbsps. granulated sugar
3 tbsps. butter

Cut the carrots into 1½" chunks. Cook in a shallow pot with the salt in barely enough water to cover, covered, until tender — about 20 to 23 minutes. Drain. (Save liquid for soup pot.) Shake carrots in pot so they will be in a single layer. Dot with the butter, sprinkle sugar over and simmer over low heat, turning frequently until glazed on all sides. This takes about one hour for if heat is too high sugar will burn, so watch them and turn them often.

SAVORY CELERY (serves 5)

NOTE: Celery is one of our less expensive vegetables and cooks are well advised to cook and use it as a hot vegetable during winter months. Obviously, I should add, that it is better for us raw.

3 cups finely chopped (½") celery
2-3 cup water
1 can undiluted cream of mushroom soup
1-3 cup halved toasted almonds

Cook the prepared celery in the water, covered, 12 minutes. Drain. (Reserve liquid for soup pot.) Add undiluted mushroom soup and almonds and bring to boil, stirring. NOTE: If you must make and hold this in advance it should be reheated in double boiler.

Ann Landers

Some Common Plants Can Be Dangerous

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You recently listed some plants that can be dangerous when eaten. Here are others. Please print this letter and stress to the mothers who read your column that they should teach their children at an early age not to put anything strange into their mouths.

ANN LANDERS

Poison ivy, oak and sumac can cause intense discomfort, though they are not considered dangerous. There are, however, many atractive, sweet-smelling and deadly plants that are part of our every day lives — some may even be growing in your garden. Daffodil and poinsettia leaves can be fatal if eaten. One leaf can kill a child. Hyacinth and narcissus bulbs can cause vomiting and diarrhea. Mistletoe berries can be fatal. Rhubarb leaves either raw or cooked can cause convulsions and coma. Lily-of-the-valley, leaves and flowers, can cause irregular heartbeat and digestive upset. All parts of rhododendron, laurels and azaeleas can cause nausseau, vomiting, breathing problems, coma — and even death. Cultivated wild cherry twigs and foliage contain a compound that releases cyanid. If eaten, prostration is common often within minutes. Buttercups: all parts are dangerous. Juices may severely damage the digestive system. Elderberry: all parts are poisonous except the berry. The hollow stem used as a blowgun has poisoned many youngsters. Jack-in-the-pulpit contains calcium oxalate crystals which severely burn the tongue, mouth and throat.

Thank you for an opportunity to alert millions. — MRS. E.M.A.

DEAR MRS. E.M.A.: You are the one who should be thanked. And now a word fro mthe Chicago Poison Control Centre. If a mother suspects her child has eaten a poisonous plant she should induce vomiting at once and rush the child to the emergency room of the nearest hospital.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You have printed letters from women who have married mama's boys — men who can't seem to cut loose from their mothers. But what about girls who can't cut loose from their daddies? I am married to a girl like that and I need help fast.

I am 27. My wife is 25. We have been married five months. After our third day of honeymooning my wife insisted that we cut the trip short and go home. She missed her daddy. Every night without exception we have to go see him — and not just for an hour, Ann. We spend the entire evening there. Sometimes they don't speak more than ten words. They look at TV or read the paper. We have not seen a movie or a play. We have no friends. Our whole life, outside of our jobs, is her daddy. On Sunday we go to my parents' for thirty minutes, then we have to go to her folks' house. I haven't mentioned the fact that she has a mother, too, but she and her mother have very little in common.

Is this problem mental, Ann? Can it be helped? Should I get a divorce if my wife won't try to get over it? Please tell me what to do. I'm a very unhappy man. — NUMBER TWO AND READY TO QUIT.

DEAR TWO: Your wife has a severe hangup on her daddy and she's going to need professional help to get unhung. How come you didn't recognize the problem when you were going together? A fixation like this must have been fairly obvious.

If your wife refuses to see a doctor you'd better see a lawyer — unless you are willing to settle for a second place in her life, because this is your destiny, friend.

Good Irish Glass Has Blue Glint

In 1746 the British Parliament passed an excise tax of a penny a pound sterling on the manufacture of glass and passed very stringent regulations limiting the export of glass from any British possession other than England.

The excise tax did not apply to Ireland and after the American revolution, Irish glass houses managed to export direct to the new republic. It is said that in some years the entire production from Ireland was sent to North America. It is known that well over a million pieces were shipped.

Irish glass was of exceptional quality. Most of the workers were trained in England. Style and design of Irish glass reflects English and European taste. The industry flourished, particularly in the years between 1800 and 1825. In 1825 an excise tax was imposed in Irish glass. By 1830 machines were being imorted to England for pressing glass, and the majority of Irish glass houses closed.

The most famous name in Irish glass is Waterford. Glass was made there from 1729 to 1851 and is currently manufactured there. Irish glass was made in other places as well, much of it illicitly, like moonshine liquor during prohibition, to escape tax and government supervision.

Irish glass of the best quality is said to have a distinctive blue glint. There are arguments on both sides as to whether this is true. Very little is signed or marked. Much of the production was in wine glasses and decanters. Sweet meat glasses, now often confused with champagne glasses, and distinctive fruit bowls were made in great quantities. The most desirable fruit bowls are oval with a scalloped edge. Miniature versions were used for salt.

Glass made in Ireland contained a high quantity of lead which was added to decrease the temperature needed to make the metal ductile. Lower temperature meant less fuel, a critical consideration where wood was used.

Lead crystal lends itself to cutting and refracts light to a greater degree than other qualities of glass. Faceting and cutting became features of Irish glass, particularly diamond and strawberry diamond cutting. The plate shown is strawberry diamond pattern.

Chandeliers and candelabra were made in quantity as well. All were made for candles. Both chandeliers and candelabra have glass arms and do not lend themselves to electrification. Early drops or pendants were suspended by hand-drawn copper, ormolu or iron wires, now black with age. Chromium plating had not been discovered and no early candelabra or chandeliers have chrome or nickel fittings, or the fine brass or ormolu wires now in use for suspending drops.

Considering its age and quality, Irish glass is modestly priced when compared to cut glass of the '90s or modern cut glass. Early oval salts in perfect condition go for less than $20. Georgian decanters with mushroom stoppers sell from $25 to $50. (New heavy cut glass decanters are at least $25.) Wine glasses, once the commonest article are likely to be found singly for less than $10, the price of their modern counterpart.

Successful Living

Building Blocks for Happy Home

By DORIS CLARK

I wonder if it ever occurs to us that a wedding certificate might well be seen not so much as proof that you are legally married as a pledge to build a marriage. The marriage ceremony gives you the right to get started on this lifelong building program.

The bricks and mortar are an assortment of tried and true principles for successfully living together:

(1) Share economic responsibility. A joint bank account, plus a provision in the budget for His spending money and Hers, gets things off on the right foot. Follow up monthly with a joint review of bills, expenditures and hopes.

(2) Don't live with relatives. Much as we love our parents and want to see them often, we all have to cut the apron strings and learn to live with each other without being guided and interfered with — no matter how lovingly.

(3) Attend church; send the children to Sunday school. Religion provides a working philosophy for life and it is a fact that the divorce rate of church-going people is far lower than among those who avoid the place like the plague.

(4) Make sex mutual. The physical basis of marriage is worthy of attention, self-discipline, loving co-operation. It takes two.

(5) Cultivate togetherness. If you haven't got togetherness why on earth did you marry each other? Share interests, hobbies and friends, and the care of your children; and at the same time respect each other's individuality.

(6) Quarrel constructively. If you have to disagree, work on doing it fairmindedly and with a real effort to see the other partner's side of things. Learn not to get upset when you disagree.

(7) Look your best always. Ladies don't flop around all day in a bathrobe and slippers. And men - don't loll around in underwear and unshaven on the weekend.

(8) Watch that demon alcohol. Too much of it leads to quarrels and harsh words better left unsaid.

(9) Seek help if you need it. If you see the ship of matrimony foundering, hunt out a marriage counsellor until you find one to talk to. Sometimes a third person, especially a trained one, can help you get back on the beam.

O.K., but how about those family-type units made up of two or three members not exactly married to each other? Two sisters, or two close friends, or a mother and son or daughter, living together—don't they have an unspoken pledge to keep from rocking the boat?

Most of the building blocks apply here too. Not the one about children, but about church? Yes. Not about sex, but there is something to be said for affection between family members!

If the cap fits, read the list over and do something to bring your close relationships a little closer to the heart's desire.

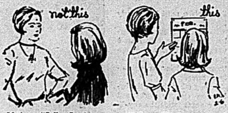
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Sally, I told you I would pick you up after school and take you to the dentist. Where were you?"

Sally: "I forgot and went out the other door."

Mother: "Mark your dental appointment on the calendar and remind me to give you a note so you can get out of school in time to catch the bus for his office."

Even junior high school students can become responsible for their own appointments and will do so if Mother doesn't assume the responsibility for them. This is a step toward independence and maturity.

Snowmobile Bylaw Is Now Official

No, Dad, that 14-year-old son of yours cannot operate a snowmobile on a public street or highway.

If he does, both he and you will be contravening the Ontario Motorized Snow Vehicle Act and will be open to prosecution.

And as far as Belleville Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie is concerned, charges will be laid.

The snow vehicles act sets out that no one under 16 years of age may operate a snow vehicle on a public street or highway.

And that rules out a person under 16 years of age even driving one of the machines across the roadway.

"It's just as simple as that" commented a police spokesman.

Actually everyone who drives a snowmobile on a public roadway has to have a driver's or operator's licence and the machine must be properly insured.

The city's snowmobile bylaw passed by council some weeks ago has now been approved by the minister of transport and is now officially in force.

Among other things, the bylaw sets out the parks and other areas inside the city limits where snowmobiles can be operated.

But there still are restrictions as to hours.

In three city parks—Zwick's Island, Centennial Park, Riverside Park and East Bayshore Park there are no restrictions.

Other parks where there is restricted use are Exhibition Park, Stanley Park, Cascade Blvd. Park, the north two acres of Hillcrest School Park, Park Dale, Victoria Park, Centennial School park site and the CNRA Park.

One other city park popular among snowmobilers and recommended by the SPORT Snowmobile Club to be included is Haig Park in the east end of the city.

But for some reason this park was left off the city's bylaw and complaints have been received at city hall about the park being used by snowmobilers and the noise of the machines keeping small children awake.

The matter will be brought up at Monday's traffic committee meeting to determine the feeling of commitee members about an amending bylaw being passed to include Haig Park in the bylaw.

The city bylaw says that snowmobiles can be used in permitted city areas from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Thursday; from 8 a.m. to 12 midnight on Friday and Saturday and from 1.30 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Sundays.

The city bylaw rules snowmobiles off sidewalks and boulevards and dictates that the machines must be equipped with mufflers in good working order.

Elliott Issues Statement

A garage workers' strike at Elliott Motors went into its sixth day today as members of Teamsters Union Local 91 sought higher pay.

The company, meantime issued this formal statement of its position:

"On April 23, 1970, Elliott Motors 70 Limited received a certificate of certification issued by the Ontario Labor Relations Board. That certificate named the wrong company and was finally corrected by the board in August 1970.

"Commencing September 1970, representatives from the Teamsters Local 91 met with the company to discuss a contract, the terms of which were negotiated for sometime without these terms ever being agreed upon.

"Because of the certification of a trade union being enforced and pursuant to Section 59 of the Labor Relations Act, Elliott Motors were and are prohibited from altering the rate of wages or any other term of contract of employment.

"In the past, Elliott Motors has always maintained one of the highest paid compensation plans for mechanics, painters and helpers in the Belleville area. At the time of certification, a licensed technician's rate of pay was from $2.90 to $3.10 (depending on the size and type of vehicle) per flat rate hour. A good technician can gain two to four hours a day on flat rate. That is to say, what a mechanic is earning for an eight hour day equals 10 or 12 hours at the flat rate allowance per hour. A fringe benefit of thirty-three cents per hour is in addition to this amount. The rate of pay for helpers or apprentices was according to government legislation apprentice rates. The rate of pay for helpers and laborers is government minimum wage rates or better.

"During the latter months of 1970, the company endured a 93-day labor interruption at General Motors production plant. During this time, Elliott Motors maintained their full staff without layoffs or salary cuts and managed minimal Christmas bonuses for nearly everyone of their staff who qualified through their length of service with the company."

Belleville Gets Turned On

Murney Bradshaw, water plant operator, controls the power going to the pumps which supply Belleville's water. Each pump requires 550 volts, controlled from these panels in the water plant, south of Dundas Street West. Without a steady supply of electric power to the pump house, Belleville would go dry.

periment and hurled it like a javelin.

The expedition across the dusty soil, planned to cover 9,000 feet, had gone well and the moonmen had collected a treasure of rocks and soil samples for science when they reached the base of the sloping 400-foot rise leading to Cone.

But on man's first attempt to climb a moon mountain they immediately encountered trouble and had to alternately pull and carry their two-wheel cart up the long grade, making their way around rocks as large as 20 feet across.

They huffed and puffed and stopped often for rest. At one point about halfway up, Shepard doubted they could make it.

"Aw, gee whiz, let's give it a whirl," Mitchell urged. "I think we'll find what we're looking for at the top."

They were seeking some of the oldest rocks on the moon, perhaps dating back 4,600 million years to the birth of the moon.

They moved ahead, but Shepard reported: "It's hard, hard, hard."

With their heart beats at 150, up from a normal 84 for Shepard and 90 for Mitchell, ground controllers again told them to rest.

They sagged down against a boulder, and at this point were directed to go no farther.

Labenz Loses Bearings, But Not Lead In Maple Leaf Mile

TORONTO (CP) — Los Angeles miler Chuck Labenz won a grudge match with Polish star Henry Szordykowski at the Telegram-Maple Leaf Indoor Games Friday night by not knowing what to do.

"He made a tactical move on the last turn on me," Labenz said about the torrid mile race before 14,039 fans at Maple Leaf Gardens.

"He slowed down on the turn and I was flabbergasted. I slowed down, and then he spurted hard on the lap. I didn't know what was happening."

But Labenz, who beat the Pole in a similar photo-finish at Boston last weekend, managed to keep his slim lead to win in 4:05.8, only a tenth of a second ahead of Szordykowski. It was the second time in three meetings the American has come out on top.

"I'm always winning by a nose," grinned Labenz.

Most of the times were slow for the ninth annual games, but Reynaldo Brown of the California Track Club broke the Canadian Open record in the high jump by half an inch, clearing the bar at 7-2 1-2. He missed three times at 7-4.

Herb Washington of Michigan State and Mel Pender, 33, a U.S. army training instructor, tied the meet record of 5.2 in the 50-yard dash. But judges ruled Washington the winner as he touched the tape first.

It was a disappointment for Pender, a Vietnam war veteran of two years, making a comeback at an age when most athletes retire.

"I expected to beat Washington tonight," groaned the chunky Pender, who only resumed training last September.

"But I was bothered by a strained hamstring, and, anyway, I'm always getting beat by guys with a longer reach than me."

Sweden's Kjell Isaksson came to within a breath of hitting a world record in the pole vault, although he finished second in the event to Dick Railsback of the Southern California Striders. Both vaulters cleared 17 feet, which tied the meet record, but Railsback was declared winner because he had fewer misses.

However, in their attempts to clear 17 7¾, Isaksson came closest, just nudging the bar on his last leap.

Bruce Simpson, a promising vaulter from University of Toronto, dropped out after clearing the bar at 16 feet.

Debbie Brill of Haney, B.C., who has cleared six feet on seven different occasions this season, won the high jump in a disappointing 5-10.

"I had the strength, but my running fell completely dead," she said.

Brenda Steffanson of Nanaimo, B.C., and Debbie van Kiekebelt of Toronto tied for second place with 5-8, while Barbara Inkpen of England was fourth. Miss Inkpen also cleared the bar at 5-8, but officials, who originally had placed her second, dropped her to fourth.

Mamie Rawlins, 29-year-old Chicago civil servant, won her speciality, the 50-yard hurdles, in 6.6, a tenth of a second off the world mark, then joked about her competitors.

"This is my race and everybody's after me, but they're so busy watching me, they can't hurdle."

Miss Rawlins held the world record in the event at 6.6 until Chi Cheng of the Republic of China took it away from her at last year's meet here, with a time of 6.5.

Kerry O'Brien of Australia received a long ovation from fans for his decisive win in the three-mile event. O'Brien finished in 13:18.8, far outpacing a field of seven, including Frank Shorter of the U.S. who placed second in 13:35.8.

Ferguson Sinks Golden Seals

Penguins Stay Hot With 2-2 Tie

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Star Writer

Early in January, Red Kelly suggested his Pittsburgh Penguins would have difficulty making the National Hockey League playoffs this season because Chicago Black Hawks would replace one of four expansion teams who made the West Division playoffs last year.

The Black Hawks are making a runaway of the division race, as expected, and defending champion St. Louis Blues are a solid second, leaving the other two playoff berths wide open.

At the time of Kelly's comment, the Penguins were in fifth place, six points behind Minnesota North Stars and Philadelphia Flyers and keeping just ahead of Los Angeles Kings and California Golden Seals.

The club's financial picture wasn't bright either; a problem of the operation likely to be felt at the player level.

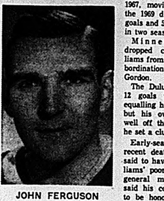
The Penguins, who finished second last year, lost their next game but since have rebounded to win seven and tie two of their next 11, the latest a 2-2 tie at St. Louis Friday night when hard-luck Ron Schock swatted in Dunc McCallum's rebound with less than three minutes left in the game.

In the only other game, veteran John Ferguson produced a 3-2 victory for Montreal Canadiens over California Golden Seals with two third-period goals that broke a 1-1 tie.

The Penguin tie moved them into a fourth-place tie with Minnesota, two points behind Philadelphia. Montreal strengthened its hold on third in the East, moving eight points ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs who have played the same number of games.

Following a scoreless first period at Oakland, California's Gary Croteau and Henri Richard exchanged goals in the second period, paving the way for Ferguson's 7th and 8th of the season that moved Montreal into a 3-1 lead. Goalie Phil Myre drew an assist on Ferguson's first goal.

Schock is one of two brothers developed by the Boston Bruin organization no longer with the Stanley Cup champions.



JOHN FERGUSON

Dan, five years Ron's junior, was delivered to Philadelphia Flyers in late January as part of a deal that sent centre Mike Walton to Boston via the Flyers.

One of the NHL's original "bonus babies" in the early 1960s, Ron's promising pro career ground to a near halt through a series of injuries.

After an outstanding junior preparation with Niagara Falls Flyers, the Chapleau, Ont.-born player turned pro with Kingston of the old Eastern Pro League in 1962, moved to Minneapolis of the Central League the following season and didn't catch a regular berth with the Bruins until 1964.

With the coming of expansion, he was claimed by St. Louis in 1967, moving to Pittsburgh in the 1969 draft after scoring 21 goals and 57 points for the Blues in two seasons.

Minnesota, meanwhile, dropped centre Tommy Williams from their roster for insubordination toward coach Jack Gordon.

The Duluth-born veteran had 12 goals this season, almost equalling his 15 goals last year, but his over-all production is well off the 1969-70 pace when he set a club-record 52 assists.

Early-season injuries and the recent death of his wife were said to have contributed to Williams' poor play this year and general manager Wren Blair said his contract will continue to be honored until the North Stars can negotiate a trade.

Harry Howell, a 19-year veteran of the NHL, was purchased by Los Angeles Kings from California. Howell, who spent 17 years with New York Rangers, won the Norris Trophy as the league's outstanding defenceman in 1966-67.

The Hamilton, Ont., native recovered from a spinal fusion operation after the 1968-69 season to bolster California's defence last year.

Olympics Not Golden

LONDON (CP) — The British government no longer appears to take the view that the country's Olympic Games team is worth its weight in gold.

Top sports officials report that the £400,000 plan to train all young athletes is in ruins. And with only 17 months to go before the Games open in Munich, things look bleak for the British representation.

The trouble is that organizing bodies cannot plan this year's crucial build-up because they do not know the amount of money, if any, they will be allocated by the government's department of the environment.

Under the present system, sporting bodies foot their own bills—for training sessions and travel abroad to international competitions—then apply to the government for a percentage of the outlay.

But the £100,000 allocated annually for Olympic training is not being fully used as the grants are made retroactively.

"This is a hopelessly inefficient way of organizing a bid to restore our sagging prestige," wrote John Goodbody in The Evening News.

"Bodies should receive a certain grant annually to spend or Olympic training."

Arthur Gold, secretary of the British Amateur Athletics Board—track and field—said he believed that "the uncertainty concerning aid has undoubtedly hindered preparation for the Olympics" in this country.

The Amateur Rowing Association is in the same boat, says secretary Freddie Page.

"Rowing has reached a full-stop," he said. "We cannot proceed any farther with any confidence because of lack of information about finance."

Some grants have already been awarded, to the Amateur Boxing Association, for instance, but secretary Bill Lovett described it as "minimal."

"We spent £1,000 on Olympic training this year and only had £470 from the government."

Similar wails can be heard from the judo, gymnastics and field-hockey camps. Robin Struthers, treasurer of the British Olympic Hockey Board, saw the government's unwillingness to award full grants as inevitable. "It's because we are an amateur sporting country."

Only £2,000 in grants were awarded in 1969 to the amateur associations—track and field and judo receiving nothing. Asked what happened to the remainder of the £100,000, a spokesman for the department of the environment said: "It appears that the governing bodies have not applied for the money to which they are entitled."

So 1971 looks like being a year of individual dedication and enterprise on the British Olympics scene if anyone from this country hopes to strike gold in Munich.

Rangers Punch Jr. Habs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Seventh-place Kitchener Rangers pulled the only surprise punch Friday night as they edged third-place Montreal Junior Canadiens 4-3 in Ontario Hockey Association Junior A play.

In other games, Toronto Marlboros blasted last-place Niagara Falls Flyers 6-1, Ottawa 67s scored a 7-5 victory over St. Catharines Black Hawks and Oshawa Generals fought to a 4-4 tie with London Knights.

In Kitchener, Ted Scharf, Bill Barber, Larry Robinson and Jerry Byers all scored once for the Rangers.

Richard Martin, Michel Latreille and Robert Lalonde replied for the Habs.

The win was Kitchener's 16th of the season.

In Niagara Falls, the Marlboros strengthened their hold on fifth place with the win.

Steve Shutt led Toronto with a pair of goals, including the winner at 7:17 of the second period.

Other Toronto scorers were Dave Gardner, Joe Noris, Steve Vickers and John Harris.

Randy Holt scored the only marker for the Flyers.

Niagara Falls came on strong in the opening period, outshooting the Marlboros 21-13, but then slowed down in the second and third periods to be outshot 15-3 and 15-7.

In Ottawa, Murray Wilson and Peter Gaw each scored a pair of goals to lead the 67s to victory. Blake Dunlop, Ron Bobbette and Bryan McSheffrey scored the others.

For the Hawks, Clyde Simon accounted for two goals while team-mates Jeff Jacques, Pierre Guite and Bob MacMillan scored once each.

The win moves the 67s to within four points of league-leading Peterborough Petes. St. Catharines remains in fourth place.

In London, Dennis Ververgaert scored with just 10 seconds remaining in the game to give the Knights their tie with Oshawa.

It was Ververgaert's third goal of the night and was scored when London was a man short. Steve Addley scored the other London goal.

For Oshawa, Dean Sheremeta scored twice while Pete Sullivan and Terry O'Reilly added single markers.

The next game in the series is scheduled for today, Toronto playing host to London.

On Sunday, Toronto will be at St. Catharines, Kitchener at Ottawa and Hamilton at Oshawa.

Americans Cut Finest Figures

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — A strawberry blonde who grew up with the unlikely name of JoJo because she couldn't pronounce her given name, and a history student with thick, gold-rimmed glasses today are the new North American figure skating pairs champions.

Alicia Jo Starbuck and Ken Shelley of Los Angeles staged one of their finest free-skating performances Friay night to clinch the pairs title over Mark and Melissa Militano of New York City and Toronto's Val and Sandra Bezic.

John Misha Petkevich of Great Falls, Mont., despite being beaten in the free skating by Canadian champion Toller Cranston, took the gold medal in men's singles on the strength of his earlier first place in the compulsory figures.

In the only other class skated Friday night, the United States couples retained the top three places after the set-pattern dances.

Miss Starbuck and Shelley, both 19; who have been skating together since they were nine years old, said they now are looking forward to grabbing "any medal we can get" in the world championships Feb. 23-28 at Lyon, France.

Miss Starbuck said they have skated better than they did Friday.

"It was one of our best performances, but we couldn't make it tops because of the letdown after the American nationals just last week at Buffalo.

"There's always a big letdown after a national championship and it's difficult getting back up for something like this so soon after."

Miss Starbuck, who studies art and drama at the same university with Shelley, says they divide their time about equally between studying and skating.

She spends some of her time taking ballet lessons as well, and while she's dancing, Shelley practises his singles figures.

Shelley, the only competitor here who skates in two classes, pulled himself up with a strong free-skating performance to take third in the men's singles behind Cranston.

He pushed Gord McKellen of Lake Placid, N.Y., back to fourth spot with Ron Shaver of Hamilton fifth and Paul Bonenfant of Vancouver last.

The Bezics, who had placed a close third to the Militanos in compulsory figures, failed to gain ground with their free-skating.

"But what the heck," said 17-year-old Val. "We were sixth two years ago and now we're third.

"Give us two more years and we'll be first. We're both young and we've got plenty of time yet."

His sister, Sandra, is 14. The Militanos are 16 and 15 years old.

Cranston won a standing ovation from the crowd of 4,126 with his strong free-skating performance which included a faultless triple-lutz jump.

Petkevich, who missed on his attempt at a triple salchow jump, turned away shaking his head after Cranston, skating last, brought the crowd to its feet.

But both Cranston and Hamilton's Ron Shaver said they thought they had performed better at the Canadian championships two weeks ago in Winnipeg.

Shaver, sixth in the compulsory figures Thursday, also pulled himself up with his free-skating, dropping Bonenfant to last spot.

The Vancouver skater appeared nervous and twice nearly fell attempting simple jumps before finally taking a spill.

The rankings in dance class remained unchanged from those set Thursday after the compulsory dances. The three U.S. teams, all coached by Ron Ludington, easily outclassed the Canadians and numerous skating officials from both sides of the border spoke of the American champion couple as being "in a class by themselves."

Jim Slaky and Judy Schwomeyer from Wilmington, Del., are the U.S. champions and the lead they built up after the compulsory and set-pattern dances, which count toward two-thirds of the total mark, make them almost certain winners of the title which will be declared following the free-skating today.

The finals of the dance follow the free-skating in women's singles competition where Karen Magnussen of Vancouver, leading after the figures Friday, was favored to win the title from U.S. champion Janet Lynn.

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York State Athletic Commission announced Friday the revocation of David Feld's licence as a boxing referee. Feld had been suspended since Sept. 17, 1970, two days after he was forcibly ejected from Madison Square Garden prior to the Floyd Patterson—Charlie Green bout. Feld originally had been scheduled to referee the Patterson—Green fight, but th commission said he refused a change of assignment to the semi-final bout. Feld was ejected when he tried to enter the ring for the main fight.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP-CP) — Although Muhammad Ali fights Joe Frazier for the world heavyweight boxing championship March 8 at New York City, the World Boxing Association still does not recognize the former champ in its latest ring listings. The WBA, which lists George Foreman as the No. 1 contender to Frazier's title, stripped Ali of his title when he refused induction into military service. The WBA lists George Chuvalo of Toronto, Canadian champion, No. 8 among the heavyweights, Canadian welterweight champion Donato Paduano of Montreal was ranked No. 10 in the world, and Edmonton's Al Ford was No. 7 among the lightweights.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference Friday announced the signing of 22-year-old fullback Don Abbey. Abbey, who stands six feet, three inches and weighs 240 pounds, was the No. 1 running back at Penn State in 1969. He sat out the 1970 season to study medicine.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lou Brock, 31, four-time National League base-stealing champion, has signed his contract for the 1971 season, St. Louis Cardinals announced Friday. Brock, who set a modern major-league record by stealing 50 or more bases for a sixth straight season last year, hit .304 in 1970 and was successful on 51 of 66 steal attempts.

BOSTON (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski, Boston Red Sox outfielder, said Friday he will become baseball's highest-paid player when negotiations for a new contract are completed with general manager Dick O'Connell of the American League club. In a telephone interview, Yastrzemski said he wants "a multiple contract, one that will run for more than two years." Reports have put his salary last season at about $130,000.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Rico Carty, 1970 National League batting champion whose career has been filled with injuries and illness, returned to an Atlanta hospital Friday for treatment of pleurisy. Braves' officials said doctors report Carty probably will be in hospital for two days. Carty, who hit .368 last season, spent three weeks in the same hospital in December following surgery on broken bones in his knee.

Dorow Seeks Simple Solution

HAMILTON (CP) — Hiring of Al Dorow as head coach of Hamilton Tiger-Cats Friday could signal a return to simplicity in the team's playbook.

Dorow will handle the offensive backs and receivers himself while he is on the hunt for a line coach and defensive secondary coach.

"Some teams that I've known in the past have been too complex," said Dorow, following his unveiling as head coach. "There is a lot to say for simplicity though. . . . The simpler you make it, the easier it is for the players.

"With more experienced people you can become more complex and this team has a lot of experience. I intend to take a long look at the age factor here."

Ticats have five players who are 34 or over and eight over 30.

Four Rinks Still In Contention For Ontario Curling Championship

GUELPH (CP) — Claude Rosborough, a 43-year-old flower-maker who needs a belly pad when he curls, says Jim Waite of St. Thomas is the man to beat in the Ontario curling championship.

Rosborough, who grows flowers at his home in Newmarket and sells them to retailers in Toronto, should know—Waite beat him 8-5 in the seventh round of the provincial finals Friday and is one of four rinks still in contention.

"All those guys shot better than 80 per cent," said Rosborough. "We had a good game but there is no way you're going to beat that."

Rosborough, who lies flat on his stomach after delivering a rock, was the oldest skip at the championship.

OTHERS FAVORED

Although he picks Waite, the favorites are still Bruce Munro or Bob Charlebois of Toronto. In the background is John Winford of Ottawa.

In the only other game in the seventh round of the double-elimination championship, Charlebois scored one on the 10th end, stole two in the 11th and another one in the 12th to beat Ted Clarke of Toronto 7-4.

Today, Winford meets Munro and Charlebois plays Waite in semi-final games at 1 p.m. The winners of those two games meet at 7 p.m. with the victor representing Ontario in the Canadian championships in Quebec City March 1-5. A Northern Ontario rink will be named later.

Rosborough lost despite making three double knock-outs in the first five ends.

To accommodate an overflow crowd watching the games at the Guelph Curling Club, extra seats have been placed parallel to the ices in play and closed-circuit television is being shown throughout the inside area. Attendance for some rounds has exceeded 1,200.

Munro has a special cheering section. More than 50 persons from his home town of Hanover chartered a bus to watch him as long as he plays. They have been here for four days.

Alfie Phillips Jr. was upset in the sixth round, earlier Friday, by Winford.

After the 9-7 loss, Ron Manning, the second on the Phillips' rink, said "nobody wanted the win more than Alfie" who won the Ontario and Canadian titles in 1967.

Phillips, visibly upset, missed consistently under heavy pressure from the young Winford rink.

Winford, a 25-year-old Grade 8 school teacher, said the win over Phillips gave him a psychological lift for today's finals.

In the other six-round game, Munro stopped Charlebois' victory stretch at five with a 9-6 win. Before that, Charlebois was the only undefeated rink.

Clyde Quits 'Ring Career'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Queen's University goalie Clyde Harris may swear off getting involved in fights after what happened to him in an Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association Eastern Division hockey game with Laval Rouge et Or Friday.

Harris was one of four Queen's players tossed out after a brawl that erupted with 88 seconds left to play and the Golden Gaels leading 5-3.

Lavol took advantage of his replacement, Norm Douglas, to score twice in the last minute and salvage a 5-5 tie.

In Friday's other O-QAA games, University of Toronto Blues whipped University of Western Ontario Mustangs 8-3, University of Waterloo Warriors came from behind to defeat McMaster Marlins 7-5, and University of Montreal Carabins edged University of Ottawa Gee Gees 5-4.

The Kingston brawl produced four game misconducts, two misconducts and three fighting majors.

Rene Rioux had two goals and Pierre Lachance, Jacques Michaud and Louis Vandal one each for Laval.

Peter Kennedy had a pair of goals for the Gaels, and Stan Galt, Frank Coffey and Mike Lynch scored one each.

Terry Peterman scored three times for Toronto, who remained in a tie for first place with Waterloo. However, the Blues have lost three games and the Warriors only one.

Defenceman Dave McDowall added two goals and single tallies came from John Wright, Kaz Lysionek, and Gord Davies.

Dick Oudekirk, Bob Jeffery and Ray Lisk scored for the last-place Mustangs.

At McMaster, the Marlins were ahead 2-0 after first period and 5-4 after the second but were unable to hang on for the win.

Dave Farago and John Hall scored twice each for the Warriors, with single goals going to Doug Simpson, Greg Sethton, and Bob Bauer.

Pete Popek, Phil Hardy, Ken Ofield, Mike Sheehan, and Charlie Evans scored for McMaster.

Pierre Hebert, Carol Bellemare, Pierre Fontaine, Jacques Blain and Michel Venne scored for Montreal in their game at Montreal.

Maurice Menard led Ottawa with two goals. Gilles Piotte and Bob Aube scored one goal each.

Newest Track Event

TORONTO (CP) — A new event appeared on the high school program at the Telegram-Maple Leaf Games indoor track and field meet Friday—but it wasn't planned.

The event started out as the two-mile run but ended up in the results as the "two miles less one lap."

I happened when an official, holding up lap cards, got two of them stuck together.

Larry Brown of Elliot Lake, Ont., did the usual distance in 8:56.1, just edging out Brian Maxwell of Toronto and Jackie Dufresne of North Bay.

The only meet record came in the only event for girls when the 4x½-lap relay team from Ancaster high school lowered their own previous mark to 38.5 from 38.8.

Results include:

1,000 yards: 1. Michael Brett, St. Catharines Dennis Morris; 2. Gatis Roze, Scarborough W. A. Porter; 3. Pete Cauwembergs, Welland secondary school. Time 2:22.4.

Girls 4 X ½ relay: 1. Ancaster high school; 2. Toronto Winston Churchill; 3. Burlington Nelson high school. Time—38.5. Meet Record.

440 yards: 1. Dave Howes, Port Credit; 2. Dave Smith, Orillia CVI; 3. Peter Butryn, Denis Morris. Time—52.7.

High jump: 1. Frank Curtis, Orillia DCT; 2. Carl Georgevski, Toronto Monarch Park; 3. Mike McVarish, Toronto Malvern CI.

Mile: 1. Paul Drysdale, Gravenhurst; 2. Bob Flynn, Thistletown; 3. Vic Del Ben, Sarnia St. Clair. Time—4:25.4.

50 yards: 1. John Henwood, Toronto Woburn; 2. Darryl Foster, Sarnia CITS; 3. Wayne Jerome, Hamilton Westdale; 4. Dave Sproat, Hamilton Barton. Time—5.4.

Bullets Sizzle and Fizzle En Route to Win Over Buffalo

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hot and cold was half the story for Baltimore Bullets in a battle of extremes at Buffalo.

The Bullets sizzled in the first quarter, fizzled in the second and finally held off the Braves 98-90 behind Fred Carter's career high 29 points Friday night to snap a three-game National Basketball Association losing string.

Elsewhere, Detroit Pistons upended New York Knicks 108-99, Boston Celtics tipped Cincinnati Royals 114-110, Chicago Bulls trimmed Philadelphia '76ers 114-102, Los Angeles Lakers pounded Milwaukee Bucks 116-93, San Diego Rockets beat Cleveland Cavaliers 116-105, Portland Trail Blazers outscored San Francisco Warriors 123-117 and Atlanta Hawks nipped Seattle SuperSonics in overtime 121-120.

Dave Bing and Jimmy Walker, Detroit's backcourt partners, clicked for 31 and 21 points, respectively, as the Pistons zipped to a 21-point lead in the first half and went on to hand the Knicks only their second setback in the last nine games.

Jo Jo White scored 26 points, and eight of Boston's last 12, in the victory over the Royals.

Elvin Hayes' 32 points helped San Diego snap a six-game losing streak and hand the Cavaliers their 50th setback in 61 games.

Listless Liqouri Still Manages Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Marty Liquori couldn't quite get up for his race at the 52nd annual Knights of Columbus track meet, but the Villanova ace won anyway.

Jan Johnson, however, had little trouble getting up—and the indoor world record holder in the pole vault shattered the only meet mark.

Liquori might not have been up Friday night but he was hard pressed by Brian McElroy, a team-mate of Liquori's at Villanova, before winning the 1,000-yard run in 2:08.8.

It was Liquori's 12th consecutive victory over Madison Square Garden's 11-lap banked oval.

Johnson of Alabama, who holds the world indoor mark of 17 feet seven inches set last year when he attended Kansas, bettered the meet mark of 16-6¾ set by Olympic champion Bob Seagren three years ago when he went over the bar at 16-8.

Johnson, voted the meets' outstanding performer, then bettered 17-¼ before failing three times at 17-8 in an attempt to lift his record.

Jim Green of Kentucky held off the fast-finishing Dr. Delano Meriwether in the 60 yard dash in 6.2.

WBA Fails to Recognize Clay

RICHMOND, Va. (AP-CP) — Although Muhammad Ali fights Joe Frazier for the world heavyweight boxing championship March 8 at New York City, the World Boxing Association still does not recognize the former champ in its latest ring listings.

The WBA, which lists George Foreman as the No. 1 contender to Frazier's title, stripped Ali of his title when he refused induction into military service.

The WBA lists George Chuvalo of Toronto, Canadian champion, No. 8 among the heavyweights, Canadian welterweight champion Donato Paduano of Montreal was ranked No. 10 in the world, and Edmonton's Al Ford was No. 7 among the lightweights.

Seaver Raps Reserve

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Tom Seaver, New York Mets' ace pitcher, says baseball should adopt a plan patterned after United States professional football's option to give baseball players "some control over their own destiny."

Seaver said baseball's reserve clause, which prohibits players from jumping from one team to another, prevents players from "ever reaching their full value on the open market."

He said the reserve clause also has contributed to a deterioration in the relationship between management and the players.

"There should be a plan devised that would permit a player at one point or other to exercise the option of remaining with a team or negotiating with another."

Pro football players can play out their option, taking a 10-per-cent cut in pay for a year for the right to negotiate with other teams.

Seaver, the highest-paid Met in history, signed a $90,000 contract for the 1971 season earlier this week.

Kearns Counts Winner

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The lowly Kansas City Blues trounced league-leading Omaha Knights 7-4 in one of three Central Hockey League games Friday night.

Dallas Black Hawks, in second place, were downed 9-3 on home ice by fifth-place Tulsa Oilers and Fort Worth Wings maintained their third-place edge over Oklahoma City Blazers, defeating them 8-3.

Kansas City went to town in the third period after twice spotting the Knights a goal advantage. Wendell Bennett, Ron Climie, Dick Proceviat, Curt Bennett, Norm Dennis, Tom Earl and Bill Bennett scored for the Blues. Steve Andrasick banged in two goals for Omaha and Gary Coalter and Andre Dupont had one each.

Jan Popiel and Doug Bringdley led the devastating Tulsa attack with two goals each and Ernie Moser, Cal Swenson, Rene Roberts, Jean Payette and Bob Liddington added tallies. Dallas took an early two-goal lead when Darryl Maggs and Michel Archambault scored in the first period but Tulsa took control of the ice until late in the third period when Kingston native Dennis Kearns managed to cut the winning margin to six goals.

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — John Jacobs, 25-year-old brother of PGA tour veteran Tommy Jacobs, shot a 64 to equal the tournament record and take the lead in the second round of the $25,000 United Air Lines-Ontario Open golf tournament Friday.

Jacobs had five birdies, including four on the back nine, and an eagle three on the 476-yard sixth hole of the par-71 course.

Two Oregon pros, Tim Berg from Eugene and Doug Olson of Medford, had 66's, both for a 36-hole total of 139.

Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver was in a three-way tie for fifth spot after shooting 70 for a 140 total.

The field was cut at 145 and 51 players qualified for the final two rounds.

'Third Line' Leads Mo-Hawks To 7-3 Decision Over Oakville

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

When a hockey team's so-called "third line" scores four goals, how can they be beaten?

Belleville Mo-Hawks' last-listed scoresheet trio of centre Dave Jones and wingers Ralph Plane and Les Colligan provided the winning margin in Friday night's 7-3 win over Oakville Oaks that vaulted the Mo-Hawks from sixth to fourth place in the eight-team OHA Senior A standings.

Right-winger Colligan was personal proof that the Mo-Hawks may be sluffing off the lack-lustre style of play that had seen them drop five of seven decisions before Friday night.

The Kingston Aces castoff, who relies more on effort than finesse, opened Friday's scoring by banging in his own rebound past Oaks' goalie Ludger Doucett with the game barely three minutes old.

The Mo-Hawks went on to outscore and outhustle their visitors in each period, but Colligan proved the goat on one of the three Oakville scoring plays when he handed Fraser Rice a second-period breakaway pass.

"I'll get that back," the determined winger vowed in the dressing room intermission, then proceeded to round out the game's scoring by finishing off a pretty Dave Jones' two-on-one set - up at 14.39 of the final period.

Colligan's redemption was typical of the Mo-Hawk domination of the Oaks, whom they were beating for only the second time since the 1968-69 season.

Defenceman Greg Marchen was another key performer for the Mo-Hawks, blasting two 30-footers past Doucet in the second period — his 10th and 11th goals of the season — and collecting four points on the night.

The other Mo-Hawk goal came on George Godson's second - period breakaway while the nifty centre was on a penalty - killing assignment.

In addition to Rice's middle-period breakaway, the Oaks got a pair of goals from winger Ken Knapton, who also proved to be the central victim of an unusually aggressive Mo-Hawk effort.

Midway through the final period Knapton made the mistake of dropping his gloves against the Mo-Hawk captain Ralph Plane. Each combatant was assessed a pair of minor penalties, but only Plane got his four minutes worth.

The duel highlighted one of the best Mo-Hawk periods of hockey this season, during which Plane and defencemen Marchen and Bob Wilson dished out bruising body-checks, and the hosts blasted 24 shots at Oakville goalie Doucet, backstop for the first Mo - Hawk entry five winters ago.

The win gave the Mo-Hawks a 2-2 split with the Oaks in their season's meetings, and left them with a 16-17 record, good enough to hold fourth-place a point ahead of the Oaks and idle Kingston Aces.

LES COLLIGAN
'I'll Get That Back'

The Mo - Hawks played without the services of centre Doug Senior and defence - man Lou Kazowski, both sidelined until the playoffs. Defenceman Mike Rexe also missed last night's game because of a flu bug.

Wellington intermediate recruit Greg Burkitt gave a good stand-in effort on the blueline, while Billy Armour, who missed Tuesday's loss in Kingston due to shift - work, pivoted for Senior between Al Ferguson and Lorne O'Donnell.

Burkitt was paired with Lionel Botly, who picked up two assists on the night and 20 percent of the 43 Mo-Hawk shots on goal.

Colligan, Jones, Plane and Godson each contributed three scoring points to the win, which impressed some 900 paid spectators.

Next Mo-Hawk action is a Sunday night visit with third-place Barrie Flyers. Kingston Aces are in town for a 9 p.m. Friday tilt.

Felling The Oaks

Oakville goalie Ludger Ducet makes a futile dive to prevent a score by playing-coach Dave Jones in the Mo-Hawks' OHA senior A win over the Oaks last night (top). The win by Belleville moved them into fourth place in the league standings. Part of the victory can be attributed to aggressive play such as that of Ralph Plane sending an Oakville forward flying through the goalmouth, while Oaks captain Frank Hincks and Mo-Hawk defenders Lionel Botly and Steve Rexe look on (bottom). The Belleville victory evened the record at 2-2 between the two clubs, who are currently locked in a battle with Kingston for fourth place.

Shaw Leads Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU (AP) — Tom Shaw, whose golf runs from hot to cold, took a one-stroke lead over Arnold Palmer and Dewitt Weaver Friday in the second round of the $200,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

Shaw snapped out of a year-long slump three weeks ago when he beat Palmer by two strokes for the title in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am. Since then, however, the 28-year-old hasn't made a cut, hasn't qualified for the final two rounds.

He used some phenomenal putting, including 55- and 60-foot monsters, to record a five-under-par 67 on the Walalae Country Club course for a 36-hole total of 135.

Palmer, who took a one-over six on the final hole, had a 69 for 136 and was tied at that figure with the husky Weaver, who had a 68. Defending champion Bruce Crampton followed at 138 after a pair of 69s.

Juveniles Play Key Junior B Role

Juvenile hockey players, or in some cases the lack of juvenile hockey players is having a definite bearing on the fortunes of the two local Eastern Ontario Junior B entries.

BRIAN O'COIN
Back In Action?

The Trenton Golden Hawks, hit with injuries and illness had hoped to pad their roster with a number of players from the junior ranks juvenile all stars. Because of the upcoming OMHA playdowns, the players were not available for the Hawk's Friday night game against Kingston, forcing cancellation of the contest.

The Trenton [illegible] may be forced to forfeit the contest as well as a [illegible] in Oshawa, or may get a chance to replay the contest at a later date.

Missing from the Trenton lineup with either injuries or illness are such regulars as Paul Lavender, Art Brunet, Rick Wright and Peter Pettingill. The team would have been able to muster only eight players for Friday's game.

Belleville Fairways, on the other hand are hoping to be able to utilize the services of Western Tire Juveniles Bill Bunnett and Mike Goegan in their Sunday night encounter with Kingston.

Both players saw regular duty in Tuesday's 4-2 loss to Peterborough, who clinched the league pennant. Goegan was particularly effective in a forechecking role, while Bennett was strong defensively and just missed a breakaway attempt when he was caught with a high stick after poking the puck loose from a Peterborough rearguard.

The Fairways are hoping to have two regular performers back for the contest in the form of defenceman Rick Holmes and centre Brian O'Coin. Holmes has provided steady defensive work in front of Ron Jury all season, while O'Coin is the third highest Belleville scorer to date.

Each performer has been in the lineup for only one of the Fairways' last four games.

Game time has been moved to 9 p.m. for Sunday's game with the Frontenacs. A Belleville win would clinch a playoff spot for the Fairways, while moving them to within four points of Kingston.

Nationalism Haunts Race

Randall's Worry Over Jobs Crosses Paths With PC Candidates

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The thorny issue of economic nationalism, with its opposition to foreign ownership of Canadian enterprises, haunts the provincial leadership race of the Progressive Conservative party.

Worry was expressed Friday by Stanley Randall, Ontario trade and development minister, who said he was concerned that the exponents of economic nationalism include most of the six leadership candidates.

"You're not going to find 700,000 jobs for the unemployed in this country without foreign investment," he said in an interview.

Economic nationalism concerned two candidates in speeches Friday.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch said at Niagara Falls that Ontario should call a national convention if necessary.

It would debate and establish clear and effective guidelines for Canada's economic and cultural self-determination.

And at Toronto, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough said that if chosen at the PC leadership convention in Toronto Feb. 10-12 he would not enforce controls on foreign investment.

He told a meeting of 150 supporters he would not apply any controls to American capital that he would not apply to Canadian business.

Through a policy of tax incentives, he said, his government would attempt to reverse the trend toward total American control of the Canadian economy by encouraging Canadians to invest in native enterprise.

Jobs also concerned another candidate, Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, who said at Belleville that too much attention has been paid to providing jobs by attracting new industry.

"Somewhere along the line, more attention should be given to existing industries," he told delegates from three Quinte-area ridings.

The government should give perhaps 15 loans to existing companies rather than one $5-million loan to one major company, he said.

Mr. Welch also told 650 supporters from the Niagara Peninsula at a $50-a-plate fund-raising dinner that there must be a new provincial tax policy which will consider the possibility of greater tax-sharing arrangements with municipalities. This would allow more unconditional grants to the municipalities for their local use.

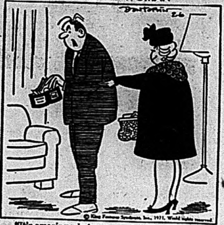
At Barrie, another candidate, Financial Affairs Minister A. B. R. Lawrence, promised that if he becomes premier he will shake up the civil service.

He told delegates from three Simcoe County ridings he wants a government that is "quicker on its feet, quicker to react, quicker to serve the people." He said he would impose a three-year limit on deputy ministers' portfolios and "switch them all around."

Today Education Minister William Davis, who was in Toronto and Galt Friday, was to go north to Timmins and Kapuskasing. Allan Lawrence was to attend a lunch at St. Catharines, A. B. R. Lawrence was due to head for Sarnia, Goderich and Kitchener and Mr. Welch to Niagara Falls.

The sixth candidate to succeed Premier John Roberts is Ottawa graduate student Robert Pharand. He entered the race only last week and is conducting a limited campaign, mostly by mail.

THE LITTLE WOMAN



© King Features Syndicate, Inc., 1971. World rights reserved.

"It's amazing what you can do without a gun."

There Have Been A Few Specials Debated

TORONTO (CP) — The candidates for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party generally have been in agreement on most of the major issues, but few specific policy proposals have been made.

On some issues this lack of specifics itself has been the result of policy, as when Education Minister William Davis declines to state "instant policies" and Provincial Secretary Robert Welch says policy is the job of the cabinet and caucus, not just one man.

These views are not held by Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Mines Minister Allan Lawrence or A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs. Robert Pharand, an Ottawa graduate student and latecomer to the campaign, has not yet made any major statements on the main issues.

Delegates who will choose a successor to retiring Premier John Robarts at a leadership convention Wednesday have heard proposals on a wide range of subjects.

TAXATION

Allan Lawrence: Education and welfare costs should be paid for out of federal and provincial revenues, leaving municipal property taxes to carry only services to property such as sewers, water supply and fire protection.

The property tax is inadequate and inequitable and must be reformed, as must present tax-rebate schemes which run up unacceptable administrative costs through first collecting taxes, then returning some of the money.

McKeough: Describes his department's five-year program of municipal tax re-assessment as "political dynamite" but an essential prerequisite to meaningful tax reform.

The province must give municipalities more financial responsibility and new sources of revenue, largely through increasing provincial grants.

All the candidates subscribe to the present government view that more equitable sharing of federal revenues is needed.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

A. B. R. Lawrence: Has suggested that the department of agriculture be expanded into a department of rural affairs and the Ontario Municipal Board be expanded to include responsibilities relating to land use policy and its implementation.

Welch: Suggests the regional approach to economic development as envisaged in the Toronto Centered Plan can be the key to solving the drain on farm communities—"the backbone of Ontario"—as people migrate to the cities because of economic reasons.

Generally, all the candidates suggest planning and financial aid from both the federal and provincial governments are needed for slow-growth areas such as eastern and Northern Ontario.

NORTHERN ONTARIO

Allan Lawrence: Suggests that if financial institutions are not prepared to leave more of their money in the north, the government should consider extending the services offered by the Ontario Savings Office to include business loans and housing mortgage money.

A. B. R. Lawrence: Has suggested a northern council of ministers composed of all MPPs from the north that would develop policies to prevent the occurrence of "northern rural slums."

Welch: Would consider locating the head office of the department of northern affairs in Northern Ontario.

The candidates are agreed that transportation is the key to northern development and all would work toward an integrated air, road and rail system to bring northern products closer to southern markets.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

Discussion of health costs has been markedly absent during the leadership campaign.

On the subject of welfare, the candidates generally are agreed on the necessity for programs which would encourage welfare recipients to work; perhaps by allowing them to earn money without losing their right to welfare.

Hire Canadian (If Possible)
Davis Urges College Heads

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister William Davis has written letters to the presidents of Ontario universities urging them to hire Canadian teachers in preference to foreign ones, it was revealed Friday.

Howard Petch, president of the University of Waterloo, said in an interview the education minister's letter was an invitation to violate the Ontario Human Rights Code.

"This is an anomaly," he said. "The universities are being pressured to hire Canadians above anyone else, and at the same time the law says we can't consider nationality" in hiring people.

The letter, dated Jan. 29, says there is "particular concern in some quarters" over "the relatively high proportion of American professors who have been appointed to positions in our universities and colleges."

The letter suggests "most citizens of Ontario would be reassured if they could feel that academic openings in our province were being offered, wherever possible, to qualified Canadian candidates."

Mr. Petch said he "generally tries to hire Canadians, but we don't want to get in trouble with the Human rights commission" by making Canadian citizenship a condition of employment.

The Human Rights Code forbids employers to hire on the basis of "race, color, creed, nationality, place of origin, or ancestry."

Mr. Davis, a candidate for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party, said at an all-candidates meeting in Hamilton Tuesday night that he would encourage university presidents to hire Canadians.

Railway Pensioners To Be Given Raise

OTTAWA (CP) — About 32,000 retired employees of the Canadian National Railways or their widows will begin receiving bigger pension cheques by April 1, the Commons was told Friday.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson said retired workers receiving benefits under the 1959 pension plan will get increases of two per cent for each year of retirement. Widows will receive similar increases.

The increases are retroactive to Jan. 1, 1971.

Pensioners enrolled in the company's 1935 plan, now receiving a flat $25, will get $50 a month if they retired before 1965.

Those who retired in 1966, 1967, 1968 and 1969 will get increases of $20, $15, $10 and $5 respectively.

Poor Need Bill's Protection
Turner Tells Parliament

OTTAWA (CP) — The poor and the uneducated need the protection of the government's bail and custody bill to prevent victimization by the widespread, if undeliberate, misuse of police powers, Justice Minister John Turner told the Commons Friday.

The bill practically wipes out the need for cash to get bail, and puts the onus on the Crown to convince a judge or magistrate that an accused person should not be set free until his trial.

Normally, a person would get bail after simply writing a promise to appear for his trial.

The measure would also force police to start applications for bail.

"I believe this is important because the average citizen does not really know what his rights may be, and the obligation under the bill is on the police, the law enforcement authorities, to institute he procedures for bail," Mr. Turner said.

The Commons gave he bill second reading and sent it to the justice committee for detailed study.

Earlier in the Commons, Transport Minister Don Jamieson announced that the Canadian National Railways will increase pensions for its retired employees. Retroactive to Jan. 1 this year, the increases will begin reaching pensioners by April 1.

Next Monday the House is to resume debate on second reading of the CNR financing bill.

Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Friday that he had "no goodies" up his sleeve to offer the provinces' unemployment fight at the federal-provincial conference opening in Ottawa next week.

But he said the government was working on plans to improve the summer-job picture for students this year.

Mr. Turner, speaking on second reading of the bail bill, said the new measure would make it clear to judges that anyone should get pre-trial release unless the prosecution showed that he would not appear for trial, or, "secondarily," he would endanger public safety.

The minister said that statistically, those who do not get bail before trial are much less likely to win acquittal, partly because they do not have a chance to prepare a defence.

The present system came down hardest on the poor.

"First of all, it is obvious that to demand of a poor person any significant amount of bail, either in cash or by way of other security, is tantamount to a requirement that he remain in custody until his trial."

"Second, a wealthy or influential person or a professional person who is accused is usually able to produce bail with little or no difficulty. Yet, there is no evidence so far as I can see that wealthy people are more prone to show up for their trial."

The only time cash would be required for bail under the new bill is when an accused lives more than 100 miles from the court, and the judge believes there may be some danger of his jumping bail.

The bill would also limit the power of the police to arrest, Mr. Turner said.

They could only arrest a suspect when they were sure that the public interest could not better be served by issuing a summons or a newly-created "appearance notice," which is something like a parking ticket.

The bill would oblige a magistrate justice of the peace to issue a summons except when a warrant—and arrest—is necessary in the public interest.

Under present law, a justice of the peace is left with "unfettered discretion" whether to use a summons or put the accused in jail with an arrest, Mr. Turner said.

Opposition spokesmen drew a contrast between the liberalized provisions of the bail bill and the severe clamps on legal rights imposed by the Public Order Act, enacted after the Quebec kidnap-murder crisis to replace the regulations under the War Measures Act.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker called it ironic that Mr. Turner's advanced ideas on bail reform "had to be put in cold storage" during the autumn crisis.

But Mr. Diefenbaker agreed that "too often poverty has been a passport to prison."

John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview) labelled the bill a "step forward" after the "long step backward" the government had taken during the Quebec crisis, with Mr. Turner defending the Public Order Act at that time.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) re-asserted Mr. Turner's statement that the new bill would require education of policemen to carry out the measures proposed.

It was necessary to have uniform bail and custody practices across the country.

Mr. Gilbert accused Mr. Turner of having "cold feet" because the minister removed a provision originally in the bill that would have held police liable for holding an accused in ways prohibited by the bill.

Mr. Gilbert said the minister had been pressured by police organizations since the measure was first introduced in the Commons last June.

Downtown Belleville Had Bright Lights

Dozens of marchers with bathroom-tissue oil-soaked torches made by the Jaycees dotted downtown Belleville for the 1971 Winter Carnival's torchlight parade. Although gusting winds kept the temperatures cool, hundreds lined downtown Front Street to get a glimpse of the colorful marchers. At the end of the parade, all torches were collected and extinguished.

Weather Subdues Carnival Opening

Old Man Winter played the 1971 Belleville Winter Carnival a disappointing trick last night as gusting winds and cool temperatures doubled up to discourage carnivalers from holding barrel - rolling and tug-of-war competitions and the snowmobile safari.

However, the frosty gentleman couldn't keep the crowds away from Front Street to watch the various clubs and organizations light up the downtown area with their torches.

Belleville's snow queen Debbie Kerr and princesses Debra Saltus and Donna Guilfoyle were accompanied by an assortment of clowns, ghosts, dog sled teams, candy distributors, majorettes, equestrians, and a host of torch-carrying marchers.

Parade master Col. Angus Duffy termed the torchlight event a "good parade; a good turnout . . . and a success."

Jack Trembley, Winter Carnival chairman, in announcing the cancellation of the two contests, promised that they would be held this morning. The snowmobile safari from Zwick's Island down the bay to the Belleville General Hospital, was postponed until tonight.

Members of the snowmobile club will put the snowmobiles through their paces for the entertainment of patients at the hospital.

Weather improved this morning, and events have begun on schedule with crowds already beginning to form downtown and at Zwick's, where a full day's events of dog races, snowmobile rides, air parachute drops, airplane rides and a host of events are scheduled.

Second highlight of last night's carnival events was the Senior OHA hockey game between the Belleville MoHawks and the Oakville Oaks. A total attendance of 900 watched Belleville take the visitors with a 7-3 victory.

High Winds Black Out West Hill

High winds which ripped off a tree limb on West Bridge Street caused a power blackout in the old West Hill district last night.

A public utilities spokesman said that power in the Dunbar, Octavia, Charlotte and Burton street areas was out for about one-and-a-half hours before repairs were made.

Two primary wires were burned off as a result of the short circuit, it was stated.

Otherwise only very minor electrical trouble was reported in the city as a result of yesterday's wind and ice.

Customers along the second concession of Sidney outside the city were blacked out for a short period.

Canada Manpower News

By J. R. STAVELEY

The local employment picture during the past week reflected the adverse effects of the recent period of cold weather. Construction projects now at a record high for the area showed a sharp decline in labor demand which no doubt can be attributed to the adverse weather conditions. Augmenting present and planned construction is the welcome news that an early March start will be made with the construction of the Mobil Plastics plant. This new plant will further strengthen and diversify the community's industrial complex.

During the past week vacant positions of interest to women and men were numerically equal. The large majority of the job vacancies were of a temporary nature and were the direct result of government programs. For instance about 75 local workers have been hired under the Ontario Seasonal Employment Program to cut and clear dead trees bordering the Macdonald — Cartier Freeway. These men started work Monday.

Under present conditions, the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre is an extremely busy place. During the week two manpower counsellors spent Wednesday in Bancroft counselling Bancroft and area clients. It is planned to provide this service to the residents of north Hastings county during the remaining winter months.

Reminiscent of past assistance, the services of the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre were utilized on Thursday of this week by a representative of a world known mining corporation that requires underground and above ground smelter workers. Any person interested in this type of permanent work is invited to contact M. Collins of the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre. Basically the requirements call for a net weight of 150 pounds for the underground work and 145 pounds for the aboveground work, be literate and able to pass the required medical examination. Previous mine experience is not necessary.

The present local labor market is not only limited but also selective and competitive. Although it is little consolation at the present time, the community is fortunate in having projects now under way that will require a large number of employees on both regular and part-time basis. Specifically, there are such areas of employment as shopping centres.

The Belleville and District Employment Committee requests that all employers and others with a labor requirement, whether of a regular, temporary or of a casual nature contact the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre, at 324 Church Street, Belleville, telephone 962-8681. Why wait for spring — Do It Now when workers in most occupations are available for employment.

Prisoners Quit Court After Fiery Exchanges

MONTREAL (CP) — The trial of five prominent Quebeccers on charges of seditious conspiracy, interrupted late Friday when two prisoners stormed angrily out of court and another left during an adjournment, is scheduled to resume Monday in Court of Queen's Bench.

In another courtroom, Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols adjourned until Monday the case of Paul Rose, 27-year-old school teacher charged with the October kidnapping and murder of Pierre Laporte, former Quebec labor minister.

Mr. Justice Nichols said he needed more time to consider a snafu Thursday arising from confusion over the words "impartial" and "partial" crucial in selection of a juror.

Police did not interfere with labor leader Michel Chartrand and author Pierre Vallieres, perhaps the best known of the accused, when they left the court and headed for a van that would take them back to jail.

Defence lawyer Bernard Mergler said that Jacques Larue-Langlois, the only one of the five to have been granted bail, left because he thought Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet had adjourned the proceedings until Monday.

The judge ordered a warrant issued for Larue-Langlois to ensure that he be kept under the court's jurisdiction.

Chartrand was enraged by Mr. Justice Ouimet's decision to clear the court of spectators. Chartrand also declared he would have nothing more to do with the trial.

Vallieres went with him.

It was a tumultuous day in the court. The judge himself left the courtroom earlier in the midst of a violent verbal attack by Chartrand on the Crown lawyers.

The Chartrand outburst started following a complaint by Crown prosecutor Gabriel Lapointe about the appearance at the witness stand of several persons from the audience during a 10-minute recess.

Mr. Lapointe asked that a list of all persons having any legal dealings with any of the accused be read into the court record.

"Mind your own business," Chartrand shouted, and continued in rapid-fire French to denounce the prosecutors.

"The police do their work well enough without those lousy people," he said. "Do you act as a sergeant-at-arms at the same price you charge for your other services?"

In earlier hearings, Chartrand referred to the prosecutors as "woodpeckers," "members of the Mafia" and a "bunch of bandits" who collected $300 a day for their services.

In the afternoon sitting, Vallieres said that since four of the accused had been denied bail they had a right to visitors at the adjournment.

When Vallieres digressed with a statement about Pierre Elliot Trudeau—saying the prime minister was causing a lot of people in Quebec to get fed up—Mr. Justice Ouimet cleared the courtroom.

There was some hooting from the spectators.

Lawyer Robert Lemieux author Charles Gagnon remained briefly after the departure of their co-accused, Lemieux saying he was ready to continue with the court proceedings.

But Mr. Justice Ouimet said it was impossible under the circumstances.

A police inspector then told reporters and lawyers who remained inside that the judge decided the trial would resume Monday when spectators would be allowed in.

Exchange Doctors Compare Work In Canadian And UK Cities

LONDON (CP) — A five-month exchange of practices between British and Canadian doctors, reported in the British Medical Journal, resulted in both parties finding to their surprise that the much-criticized British Health Service offers many advantages to family physicians.

The British doctor, G. N. Marsh, had heard mostly glowing accounts of financial and other satisfactions in Canadian practice, while G. P. Sweeny from Burlington had received a mostly gloomy picture of socialized medicine.

Writing in the current issue of the weekly magazine, published by the British Medical Association, the Canadian doctor says he "had to admit many aspects of the British health systme were indeed superior."

"It has been my impression that a group general practice in Great Britain can certainly afford the practising family doctor a stimulating and rewarding professional and social life."

In addition to the five doctors in his British group caring for 15,000 patients, there was a backup team of one health visitors, four nurses, one midwife, one mental welfare officer, a secretary and four receptionists. He worked in specially-designed rooms "much superior to the average general practitioner's surgery in Canada," and found this representative of various British centres he visited.

While he missed the admitting and treating privileges in general hospitals, which family doctors mostly lack in Britain, he found the institution of the midwife a help in sharing the workload of normal deliveries.

It was his impression that British doctors tended to write more and larger prescriptions than clinically necessary and that many workers requested sickness certificates for minor ailments. But Sweeny said there seemed less "neuroticism" about health and checkups than in Canada.

He found the government's increasing financial support for group practice a great incentive. The absence of the Canadian item-of-service payment system gave the doctor no urge to "fill his surgery with unnecessary repeat attendances or health examinations."

His over-all impression was that British general practice "is much better organize, both at the national and local level, than it is in Canada." He also was deeply struck by the "respect and esteem" in which the British patient holds his family doctor—a feature which the British exchange physician missed sharply during his five months in Ontario.

Dr. Marsh, in his account, said he learned a good deal from Canadian medical practice but "returned happily" to his British office feeling that the system here "has much to teach Canadian general practitioners about community medicine."

Much of Marsh's office time was spent on preventive medicine and the policy, followed by many practices in that part of Ontario, of having all child care up to age 20 carried out by the doctor, even when patients were in good health.

"I found this work to be clinically unproductive and accordingly tedious, and I would gladly have delegated much of the early pediatric work to a health visitor or nurse and abandoned much of the checkup work entailed during the first 20 years of life."

On the other hand, he formed the opinion that the Canadian worker tended to remain at his job with minor ailments and did not bother the doctor for certificates to stay home.

He found the Ontario home-care program "an excellent innovation." But he commented that the payment system in Canada led to a "temptation to over-service his patients and cater to their demands rather than their needs."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Kidneys Require Periodic Checks

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What is the difference between nephritis and nephrosis? My aunt has nephritis which has caused her feet to swell. She also has albumin in the urine. The young son of a friend of mine has what they call nephrosis He has swelling of the feet and of the face, too. — Mrs. N.

Comment: To understand the difference you will have to be patient while I give you a very short lesson in anatomy and physiology of the kidney The job of the kidneys is to filter out unnecessary and harmful substances. This is accomplished by the work of many filtering stations we call glomeruli. And the job of the tubules is to reabsorb essential substances.

Now, when an infection strikes the glomeruli (usually streptococci) they become inflamed, cannot work efficiently and much protein is lost as albumin in the urine. Pus cells and red blood cells are found, also. This is called glomerulonephritis. Blood pressure may rise, and uremia may complicate the condition If treated early with antibiotics and other medications, the acute phase is over. If, however, the infection is stubborn, the condition worsens with more ablumin spilled and resulting higher blood pressure and increased load on the heart.

Sometimes nephritis results from an infection which begins in its lower part called the pelvis of the kidney. Here it is called pyelonephritis and therefore, should be treated quickly and thoroughly to prevent further kidney damage Sometimes nephritis is due also to drugs, chemicals, or is a part of such conditions as collagen disease

On the other hand, nephrosis (inflammation of the tubules which lead from the glomeruli) may be an extension and complication of an earlier nephritis. This usually causes more pronounced swelling (edema) of the extremities and face. Much more albumin is lost in the urine.

There is a form of nephrosis found in young children which we call idiopathic (unknown cause). Here the edema becomes even more marked. Before antibiotics and cortisone there was little we could do for such patients. With these new medications they can be helped.

The kidneys are often the forgotten organs until a stone tears its way down to cause pain. But inflammation of the kidneys often begins silently, long before there is swelling, fever and other evidences of nephritis or nephrosis. This points up the need for periodic examinations of the kidneys as a part of the yearly checkup.

For Mrs. S.: If your 8-year-old grandchild is worried about other children making fun of her because she has a wart on the end of her nose, I agree with you that your son-in-law should get her to a dermatologist and not pass it off as a childish worry.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: X rays taken to determine extent of injuries suffered in an accident revealed severe osteoarthritis of the spine. My physician advised that this was the worst case he had seen in a person 48 years old. He said that nothing can be done: that it will probably cripple me within several years. He says it is useless to seek the advice of an arthritis specialist. I am in constant pain. — Mrs. L.

Comment: I'm glad you asked. I do not agree in principle that a consultation with a specialist is unnecessary and useless: especially when your doctor has himself said that "nothing can be done" and that you will probaly "be crippled within several years."

Besides you have your present problem of pain. If you ask again, I think he will agree to consultation.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 7

Your birthday today: Inner serenity in the face of intermittent external crisis will sustain you. Today's natives often do their best work in privacy or even isolation. Most have gifts of poetry.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Get together with your own people, come to agreement on group action. Older people are inclined to co-operate.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Where there's any errand to run, let somebody else attend to it if possible. Some of the most plausible stories you hear have little basis in reality.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You may retrieve something you've given up as lost. You must plan carefully what you're doing with your time and social activity.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Make your contribution to the traditions and welfare of your community. Take care of neglected errands and chores.

LEO (July 23—Aug. 22): People don't reject your feelings, but they are involved with their awareness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Mental chores, games, pastimes take up most of your attention. The news is mixed: some rather good, some depressing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): It may be annoying, but it's worth using your mental faculties to figure where you stand and what you want to do about it. If you've neglected tedious homework now is the time to get it done.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Get away from it all, possibly on a long journey.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): The door is wide open to you - - all sorts of activities, proposals, none of them fully understood or explained. Leave technical repairs for experts with proper tools.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You are ready to say things beyond what you could or would only a short time ago. An amusing story this evening has a delayed "bite" in it. Learn!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): In the relative peace of this Sunday, seek deeper guidance in meditation.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Younger people demand your attention. Find time for your favorite hobbies.

For February 8

Your birthday today: A great deal of your activity this year will be organizing, preparing for future ventures. Most of what you do may be classed as public service by many. There is no exact precedent for this year's conditions nor any guidebook for your personal progress. Today's natives can generally tell a tall tale with real humor. Many of them are writers.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You know something few others know. Now is the time to use it. Faraway places, even unexplored nearby areas, offer potentially profitable facts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You are unlikely to be satisfied with the work of anybody under your responsibility. Conservative handling of funds results in moderate returns.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Career and business promise swift improvement with rational perceptive initiative on your part. Quite a lot of talk is stirring around you, much of it helpful.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Disagreements on career matters can be setled if you keep your personal feelings and prejudices within reasonable bounds. Putting on a calm surface.

LEO (July 23—Aug. 22): Assuming too much only gets you into an embarrassing situation. Have a full day's schedule set early. The evening is sociable, with romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Common sense may not match the rule book today, and you can gain much from a minor adjustment. Add to your savings. Your mate has a nice surprise for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Business and pleasure seldom mix so agreeably as today. Use without making any fuss. Home life is better if you let matters take their course.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Let your intuition guide you. There are possible visits from people you seldom see, or who dwell in very distant places. Try for a new feature in entertainment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your spirits rise with news of progress among your own set. It's an excellent time for big purchases. Seek additional earnings if you feel the need.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Seek advice and co-operation. When you've made the most of an active day, rest a while, then share an evening with friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 19): Be up bright and early. Do not be surprised to get a monetary proposal today. Think carefully what you would be getting into.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Presenting a smooth surface is very helpful to your career progress. You still have to develop reasonably good work on a regular basis. Somebody nearby cares.

Rolls Royce Hopes Part May Be Saved

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Hopes of saving the Rolls-Royce engine for the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. trijet airbus were boosted today with reports that a financial formula to solve the crisis might be in the offering.

Informed sources here said the British government has indicated its readiness to meet some of the extra costs that would be involved in going ahead with the engine.

Lockheed Chairman Daniel Haughton arrived here Friday night from high-level talks on the problem in London and is believed to be ready to offer certain financial proposals.

These would presumably centre on how Lockheed might be able to raise further money from U.S. banks, possibly with government support.

British and American officials have been in consultation here on the Rolls-Lockheed crisis since it was announced in the British House of Commons Thursday that the British company had gone into receivership, mainly because of skyrocketing costs of the RB-211 engine.

Air Canada had ordered 10 of the buses.

In Toronto, Eric Nelson, managing director of Lockheed Aircraft Corp. of Canada, has initiated a move to have the Rolls-Royce engines built in a Canadian plant.

Nelson said Friday he has the support of "three or four" Canadian companies in the field and of government officials in his attempts to have the engines built in Canada.

Among the Canadian companies interested in taking over the RB-211 project are Orenda Ltd. of Malton, Ont., and Bristol Aerospace (1968) Ltd. of Winnipeg.

Nelson said facilities are potentially available in Canada to build the engines there and he is looking into the possibility of getting the men and tooling equipment to move to Canada from Britain.

Lockheed is exploring the possibility of changing to other engines—General Electric or Pratt and Whitney—but sources close to the discussions said such a changeover might delay the L-1011 for 12 to 18 months.

The sources believe Lockheed would prefer to stay with Rolls-Royce if at all possible rather than risk the delays and the doubts that would arise over the L-1011's viability if a change of engine were made at this late stage.

French Network Preaches Revolution Claims Delegate

QUEBEC (CP) — Delegates to the third annual convention to the Quebec branch of the federal Liberal party demanded Friday that State Secretary Gerard Pelletier clean separatists out of the French-language network of the CBC.

Mr. Pelletier, who is responsible for the administration of the Crown corporation, heard several delegates bitterly denounce the network for what they said was favoritism towards the separatist movement in news and public affairs broadcasts.

The three-day convention opened quietly, with only about 300 of the more than 1,000 expected delegates trudging through a snowstorm to the Chateau Frontenac hotel, the site of gathering.

However, once the opening formalities were concluded and the delegates split up into three workshops on the workings of the federal government, Mr. Pelletier was subjected to a storm of criticism directed against the CBC.

Some of the criticism came from Jean Chretien, minister of indian affairs and northern development, who is participating with Mr. Pelletier and Communications Minister Eric Kierans in one of the workshops.

"People who watch Radio-Canada (the French-language CBC network) are likely to know more about terrorism in Algeria and other places than about constructive happenings in their own country," Mr. Chretien said.

"In my two-and-a-half years in Ottawa, I have been given only five minutes on the French-language network, to explain the wonderful things Canada is doing in the North for its native peoples."

One delegate from the Gaspe region compared Radio-Canada with the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

"The network preaches revolution and Canadian disunity," he said angrily. "In some ways, Radio-Canada is worse than the FLQ.

"We and our sons and daughters are shown methods of revolt from Algeria. As a citizen, I can no longer accept that and I demand that the government do something to curb those people."

Many of the complaints from the audience of about 100 during the 90-minute session concerned a recent edition of Format 30, a public affairs program on the network, which dealt with terrorism in Algeria.

The delegates said this kind of program is typical of the network.

One delegate said separatist supporters working for Radio-Canada have kept separatists "in the public eye" and were responsible for an increase in the separatist vote in the Quebec general election to 23 per cent last year, from nine per cent in 1966.

"Why do separatists have perference over Liberals on Radio-Canada?" he asked.

"The freedom to do this must be stopped."

Mr. Pelletier replied that direct government control of the CBC would be more dangerous than any separatist influence within the network and said the Canadian-Radio Television Commission does an adequate job of policing broadcasting.

"The danger is too serious and the temptation too strong for such power ever to be placed in the hands of the minister responsible," he said.

"If the minister had the power to interfere directly in the operations of the public network, he would find it very difficult to hold back from influencing the flow of information in all areas, from using the network for government propaganda purposes."

In another workshop, Jean-Luc Pepin, minister of industry, trade and commerce and Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, told about 100 delegates that political activity in the public service cannot be tolerated.

Mr. Pepin said civil servants should be independent of party politics in order to serve the interests of the entire country.

Mr. Goyer said civil servants must maintain their "loyalty to the country" and not act on behalf of any political party.

"They cannot betray the country to advance their political ideal," he said.

Laos Is Invaded To Block Trail

Apollo Speeds Back to Earth

HOUSTON (AP) — Apollo 14 and its cargo of moon treasure plummeted today toward a Tuesday splashdown in the South Pacific, its crew expressing hope that the space program might help achieve peace and understanding on earth.

Alan Shepard, Edgar Mitchell and Stuart Roosa had little to do on their last full day in space. They monitored systems taking stellar navigation readings and rested for their homecoming.

They are to land at 4:04 p.m. EST Tuesday with their record cargo of 108 pounds of moon rocks and material. If they are on target, it will be Wednesday at the touchdown site. The recovery ship waits three miles west of the international dateline.

They are to appear on a final television program at 6:53 p.m. tonight, answering questions relayed from reporters at the space centre.

In a telecast to Mission Control Sunday night, they conducted scientific experiments and expressed thoughts on the space program and problems on earth.

The astronauts demonstrated manufacturing techniques which Shepard said "could benefit all peoples of the world."

It is hoped these techniques will be able to use the weightlessness of space to produce cast metals, medical vaccines and electronic crystals of purity and strength higher than possible on earth. With the television camera focused on the space laboratory, Roosa explained each of the four experiments, which demonstrated how weightlessness overcomes some of the manufacturing problems caused by the gravity of the earth.

Over a period of several hours, the spacemen processed 18 different easily melted metals on earth, but experts expect them to have cooled uniformly and thus have more strength than similar metals cast on earth.

Many scientists believe that orbiting space laboratories eventually could be used to manufacture such items as perfectly round ball bearings, precision optical lenses and superstrong materials.

Papa Doc's Daughter May Rule

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Francois Duvalier of Haiti has now named his 19-year-old son Jean-Claude as his successor but many Washington observers think that the real power will be wielded by a woman when the dictator's long and ruthless career comes to an end.

The woman, who will probably prefer to work behind the scenes, is Marie-Denise Dominique, the Haitian president's 30-year-old daughter. She is said by experts here to have a thirst for power and an aptitude for using it.

She is the wife of Max Dominique, a former army officer who now is Haiti's ambassador to France and whose own career reflects the nightmare quality of life in the world's oldest black republic and the home of the voodoo cult.

He was once condemned to death by his father-in-law for allegedly coveting the presidency but was later reprieved and named to one of Haiti's most important diplomatic posts.

Duvalier, 63-year-old former country doctor known to his people and worldwide as Papa Doc, named his son after holding power since 1957 with the help of the dreaded Ton-Ton Macoute, his secret police who have kept him in office by neutralizing the army and terrorizing the political opposition.

Buffalo Firemen Ordered To Wait for Police Guards

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Angered by the sniper wounding of a fireman, Buffalo's fire commissioner has ordered his men to delay answering alarms at night in a 13-block area of the inner city until police are on the scene.

"Firefighters are paid to fight fire but not to stop bullets or rocks," Commissioner Robert B. Howard said in issuing the order Sunday.

Howard said the directive would cover both alarms of fire and calls to the fire department rescue squad, which handles medical emergencies, during the hours of darkness.

The affected area is just east of the downtown area and is overwhelmingly black in racial makeup. Howard is the highest-ranking Negro in the city administration.

Situated within the area are four schools, two public housing projects with 1,353 apartments, three churches, a recreation centre and emergency hospital, among other structures. Many buildings have been razed for urban renewal.

Bourassa Faces Test In Chambly

MONTREAL (CP) — A byelection is being held in the provincial Chambly riding today to pick a member of the Quebec legislature to succeed Pierre Laporte, Quebec labor minister kidnapped and slain last October.

The byelection has shaped up as a battle between the governing Liberals and the separatist Parti Quebecois and is widely regarded as a test of Premier Robert Bourassa's government that took power last April. There are 50,000 eligible voters.

It is the first test at the polls for the Liberals since the kidnap crisis which led to the death of Mr. Laporte and the extraordinary measures used by the provincial and federal governments to combat Quebec terrorists.

Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer, is running for the Liberals.

Mr. Cournoyer who was also labor minister in the former Union Nationale government, does not have a seat in the legislature.

Drive Begins Sunday

SAIGON (CP) — Thousands of South Vietnamese troops swept into southern Laos today in an attempt to cut North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh trail, something six years of American bombing has failed to do. Six U.S. helicopters were reported lost in the first waves.

American helicopters and South Vietnamese armored cars took the troops across the border. The U.S. command pledged its full air and artillery support, but said no American ground combat forces or advisers would cross the border.

A communique said the 9,000 American troops who moved into the northwest corner of South Vietnam 10 days ago would act as a blocking force on the Vietnamese side of the border.

Almost simultaneously with the drive into Laos, North Vietnamese forces stepped up attacks throughout Indochina.

Eleven Americans were reported killed in half a dozen attacks in South Vietnam, three of them along the Laotian border.

Heavy fighting was reported within 10 miles of Phnom Penh, the capital of Cambodia.

In central Laos, Meo tribal troops repelled an attack by 35 North Vietnamese sappers on the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency's training centre for Meo tribesmen three miles from Sam Thong. But Laotian government sources reported that the Laotian army was evacuating its base at Sam Thong, which is just south of the Plain of Jars, in anticipation of a new dry season offensive by Communist forces.

The long-awaited attack on Hanoi's infiltration route into South Vietnam was launched in the half light of dawn two minutes behind schedule at 7:02 a.m. (6:02 p.m. EST Sunday).

South Vietnamese paratroops were ferried out of the former U.S. marine base at Khe Sanh aboard fleets of American helicopters.

The ground forces were believed to be striking toward the town of Tchepone about 20 miles inside Laos around which filter the myriad routes of the Ho Chi Minh trail.

The new move represented a widening of the war and was certain to cause political repercussions across the world.

Prince Souvanna Phouma, the premier of Laos, issued a protest against the South Vietnamese action but said the "primary responsibility" for the situation rests with North Vietnam. He called on "all foreign troops" to withdraw from Laotian territory.

The pro-Communist Pathet Lao denounced the action as an invasion. In a statement dated Saturday and released today, the Pathet Lao protested that U.S. and South Vietnamese troops were "carrying out a new and extremely serious adventure by invading Laos."

Eager for Action

There was no holding back for the 18 dog teams at Zwick's Island Saturday and Sunday. Eager huskies strained at their harness to start the 12-mile runs. Entries from the northern U.S., the Ottawa Valley and Montreal were brought in by the Arctic Dog Sled Association. Eight trophies were awarded, courtesy of the Belleville Real Estate Board.

New Premiers Join Constitutional Study

OTTAWA (CP) — Two new premiers, Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia and Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick, take their places at the table today when the sixth federal-provincial constitution conference opens in private session.

They took office, succeding G. I. Smith and Louis Robichaud respectively, after last September's conference decided to make a fresh attempt to find a formula for constitutional amendment in Canada.

Also attracting attention at this conference will be Premier John Robarts of Ontario, whose successor as premier will be chosen at the Progressive Conservative Provincial leadership convention in Toronto later this week.

Premier Robert Bourassa, the new man at last September's meeting, still holds the pivot position, however. As leader of the Quebec government, his voice carries the most weight in what is acceptable or unacceptable in constitutional reform.

An added item of the agenda is a discussion of unemployment. The western premiers in particular have expressed disenchantment with the constitutional talks, and want more bread-and-butter issues such as unemployment dealt with.

When the premiers last met in September it was agreed that Ottawa might have bilateral discussions with some of the provinces, particularly Quebec, to explore ways to cut through protracted discussions and find common ground.

While such talks with Quebec have been held, Premier Bourassa and Mr. Trudeau have said no definite agreement has been reached. Proposals have been discussed which will be put to today's conference .

Race Riots Rock City

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — National Guard troops patrolled the streets today as Negro and white leaders grappled with racial violence that led to two deaths during a weekend of sniper and police gunfire.

Gov. Bob Scott ordered several hundred guardsmen into the city late Sunday at the request of city officials, who declared a state of emergency and imposed an overnight curfew after local efforts to control the violence failed.

The exact number of guardsmen on duty was not disclosed. Forty-eight state highway patrolmen also were assigned to the city.

A white motorist and a Negro teen-ager were killed during the weekend and three other persons, including a police sergeant, were wounded by gunfire in violence blamed on unrest in New Hanover County's public schools.

There were three arrests for curfew violations Sunday night. Sporadic sniper fire continued.

Stevenson Mitchell, 19, was killed by police gunfire Saturday night. Harvey Edward Cumber, 57, was killed Sunday to what police said was a sniper bullet.

Wilmington, a coastal city of 50,000, had been hit by firebombings, rock-throwing and sniper gunfire since Wednesday night. About 30 per cent of the population is black.

Child Terrorists Horrify British

LONDON (CP) — Most of Britain turns a blind eye on the Ulster riots. There appears to be little sympathy, in England or Scotland, for either side in a struggle that has simmered and exploded for years.

But the appearance of children, some less than 10 years of age, in the latest outbreak of Belfast street fighting has aroused the anger of mainland newspapers.

The mass-circulation Daily Mirror describes the Ulster development as "the horror of the child terrorists."

Quake Leaves Rubble

Quake Hits Historic Italian Town

TUSCANIA, Italy (AP) — Historic Tuscania, one of the jewels among central Italy's tourist-attracting hill towns, lies in ruins in the wake of an earthquake.

Eighteen persons were killed and 120 injured by the earthquake, which extensively damaged art treasures.

A light aftershock rolled through the nearly deserted town Sunday night, collapsing one damaged building, but there were no additional injuries.

Four thousand persons searched for shelter and food after spending the night outside in bitter cold following Saturday night's tremors.

Soldiers recovered bodies from the rubble and rescued five persons trapped in the wreckage of their home for 20 hours. They were virtually unhurt.

The work went on cautiously as officials feared possible new quakes that might knock down tottering stone walls and ceilings in the desolated neighborhood.

Medicine, food, blood plasma, blankets and 1,000 soldiers and policemen flowed to the stricken town of 12,000 after the quake hit. A less severe tremor jolted the area more than three hours later.

The picturesque hilltop medieval quarter, with its 20-foot-high stone walls, Romanesque churches and towers, was a ruin.

The public works director of the Lazio region estimated that 500 buildings had been damaged in the historic centre, with 100 of those destroyed.

Weather Helps Carnival Windup

A turn in the weather Sunday made up for the bitter winds and cold temperatures that kept crowds thin on Saturday and Friday and forced cancellation of several Winter Carnival events.

More than 3,000 people were admitted into the crowded activity area at Zwick's Island to witness 18 dog teams tear across the Bay ice on a 12-mile track. This star attraction was backed up by a full list of activities which included sleigh rides for the youngsters, on-ice square dancing, skating races, airplane rides, snowmobile rides, a parachute drop, a bonfire, live broadcasting by CJBQ musical personalities, and the welcome aroma of hot chocolate, coffee and delicacies to warm the heart of any youngster.

The carnival was kicked off by the selection of 18-year-old Debbie Kerr as 1971 Belleville Winter Carnival Queen and princesses Debra Saltus, 18, and Donna Guilfoyle, 17, at Centennial School Auditorium Thursday night.

Crowds lined downtown Front Street to watch as the second annual Torchlight Parade lit up the night with floats, clowns, horses and marchers.

Although the tug-of-war and barrel rolling contests were cancelled, 900 hockey fans showed up at the Memorial Arena to watch Belleville Mo-Hawks stomp the Oakville Oaks 7-3.

Club Alouette provided hot pancakes for a record turnout of 330 adults and 94 youngsters, almost 300 more than last year.

The Royal Canadian Legion took the honors over three teams at the tug-of-war contest held at the Belleville Plaza while the Belleville Kinsmen came out ahead of seven teams in the barrel - rolling event, also at the plaza.

Moira Secondary captured first place honors for their Dinosaur snow sculpture, and tied with OSD for second place.

Prizes of $15 for first place $10 each for the tied second-place winners and $10 for Paul Barber of 32 Village Drive in the individual class were awarded.

The CJBQ - Intelligencer No - Stars went down to thrilling defeat in a 6-2 heat with the Kinsmen and Kin 20 Club at the Belleville Memorial Arena, Saturday.

More than 600 teens paid $1.50 to shimmy and shiver to the rock beat of Belleville's rock group Nation, and Toronto artists, Tribe.

Full capacity attendance was recorded at the Klondike Ball at the Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans Tartan Lounge and upstairs at the Canadian Legion Hall.

Cars were backed up along Dundas Street West on Sunday as crowds literally flocked onto Zwick's Island.

"Cars presented the only real problem at Zwick's" commented Winter Carnival Chairman Jack Trembley.

"We thought the extra bus would solve the problem but it didn't."

The Belleville Flying Club was flying, together with a parachute drop at 2 p.m. Both of these events were cancelled Saturday due to bad weather conditions.

"We're planning a bigger and better carnival next year," said Mr. Trembley.

"I'd like to see it go a week, starting off slow with broomball, basketball, hockey and other tournaments and building up to a real bangup weekend."

The Chamber of Commerce Carnival Chairman stated that an election to the 1972 committee is scheduled for some time in the next six weeks.

Helps Companions, Drowns in Bay

DESERONTO (Staff) — A 41-year-old Belleville man, Alfred Edward Uens of 187 Farley Ave., died Saturday night when the snowmobile he was driving went through the ice in Telegraph Narrows on the Bay of Quinte, 1½ miles west of here.

Mr. Uens, his wife, the former Barbara Phyllis Wilson, Donald File and his wife Peggy, 179 Haig Road, broke through the Bay surface at 7:30 p.m. Saturday while enroute to Deseronto's Winter Carnival for a broomball game between the Deseronto and the Point Anne fire departments.

Leo Maher, Point Anne fireman driving the third machine, closer to shore, immediately went to the rescue of the sinking vehicles, crawling along the surface to where Mr. Uens was helping his wife and the Files out of the water.

Mr. Maher dragged the trio to safety but was unable to save the drowning man.

A Belleville OPP spokesman praised the rescuer for his coolness and calm during the rescue.

"He deserves a lot of credit for what he did . . . he deserves a commendation."

Mrs. Uens and Mr. and Mrs. File were released from Belleville General Hospital following treatment Saturday night.

The body was recovered from the icy waters at 12.25 p.m. Sunday by OPP divers.

According to the OPP spokesman, this is the first such snowmobile death in the jurisdiction of the Belleville OPP detachment.

Mr. Uens, born in Flache, Sask., son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Eugene Uens, has resided in Belleville for the past 26 years, previously living in Point Anne and Shannonville.

Our darling one away.

Honored for Long Service

James F. Cox (centre) with his wife, seated at testimonial dinner given in his honor at Trenton on Saturday night by fellow citizens. O. W. Larry, at lectern acted as master of ceremonies.

James F. Cox Is Honored

TRENTON (Special) —The future of Trenton never looked brighter, according to James F. Cox, who was honored by the Trenton memorial public library board here on Saturday night after more than half a century of service in the interest of local citizens.

Mr. Cox, involved in the affairs of the community since World War I, looks for the move ahead to quicken as soon as economic expansion and employment in the country shows improvement. He considers the current slowdown a temporary measure—like a mountain climber stopping to catch his breath before starting upwards again. "The pause shouldn't be for long with population and everything else growing so fast," he said.

He added: "Trenton and the Quinte area are better off than most localities due to the stability provided by well-established industries and the Canadian Forces Base."

Mr. Cox was a business associate of the late Senator W. A. Fraser and served the town as president of the Board of Trade, which later became the Chamber of Commerce. He is a former chairman and member of the school board and chairman and member of the Library Board. Citizens who hosted the testimonial dinner for him at the Trenton Country Club observed: "his efforts have always been directed toward the adavncement of education, both adult and juvenile, the improvement of our public buildings and the general welfare of our citizens."

In appreciation for service with the Library Board, Mr. Cox, the Board's immediate past chairman was presented with an oil painting of the town library in the park behind the old post office. The scene is the work of local artist Mrs. John Garrett. His portrait in oils was presented to him by D. R. (Nick) Fraser and the James brothers Eben and Babe.

Later this week Mr. Cox will hang the library painting in the downtown library for public display.

The distinguished guests attending were Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP; Mayor Duncan McDonald of Trenton, Ex - Mayor K. J. Couch, W. A. Roedde with the department of education and Miss Anne Johnson, Trenton public library historian. O. W. Larry acted as master of ceremonies.

The 'Establishment'

The Establishment — now there is a descriptive of style and significance. It is relatively new to the language and of course it has to do (in the eyes of the dissident citizen) with money, power, position, government.

Nowadays anyone at odds with the government, the courts, the police and other facets of established order feels free to demonstrate, even kill, in the name of opposition to the tenets of a stable society which have evolved democratically, if painfully, over the centuries. However in seeking the destruction of our existing order, the aim of these dissidents is the setting up of their own establishment which would quickly negate the very freedom and opportunities every law-abiding citizen now enjoys.

The history of the last few years — the campus unrest, opposition to the war in Vietnam, the rise of such anarchist groups as the Yippies and Weathermen in the United States, the FLQ in Canada, the trouble in Ireland, riots in France, Germany and Japan — is ample evidence of these forces in society. Prime Minister Trudeau, or was it Quebec Premier Bourassa, in referring to the FLQ, spoke of the threat of a "parallel power". And that essentially is what is happening; there is this host of non-establishment people who seek power for themselves as well as converts in order that they ultimately will be the main power in the land. Essentially it is Communism at work, for these intrigues and activities all bear the stamp of Communist blueprints for subversion and takeover.

The arch symbol of Communism of course is the Soviet Union and it is succeeding in brainwashing millions around the world beyond its wildest dreams, although if these people knew the truth about life in the USSR they might change their tune.

The CBC's Moscow correspondent, Ab Douglas, said the other day that contact with the Soviet people is virtually impossible. Western newsmen live in compounds guarded by militia and are themselves followed wherever thy go. Only a week or so ago an Associated Press correspondent was roughed up by five men as he tried to talk with people in a Moscow street. The Soviets then are as unwilling as ever for real people-to-people contacts.

But to get back to their lackies (a word Communists like to use themselves) in the West who assail the Establishment, here is what one FLQ member now standing trial for murder in Montreal said in court last week. Addressing the judge he said: "I am here to serve my own ends, to hit out as card as I can at the Establishment for as long as I am here."

Such a display is typical of the arrogance of our times — and of something deeper, a malaise which if allowed to spread could have evil consequences for our society and times.

Trade Must Go On

Trade and commerce must go on, even crossing barriers of political ideology. For instance, South Africa, the land of apartheid, is Canada's fourth largest customer for fully-manufactured Canadian goods.

South Africa in turn recently signed an economic agreement with the Malagasy Republic (the former French territory of Madagascar off the southeast coast of Africa). The agreement provides for a South African government loan of $3,248 million to the republic whose population consists of many ethnic groups, including peoples of southeast Asian, Arab and African descent who speak a language of Malayan origin.

The loan will go toward extension of Malagasy's principal airport to take jets, development of a road network and supply of water and electricity. And unlike Canada's recent $4 million interest-free loan to Indonesia, repayable in 50 years, the South African loan is for 25 years at four per cent interest.

That South Africa interests will benefit in other ways also is evident. Foreign Minister Dr. Hilgard Muller was accompanied to the island 240 miles across the Mozambique Channel by a business mission planning to build a hotel and casino on Nossi-Be island off the northwest coast. They included the managing director of a South African hotel corporation and top executives of South African Breweries.

France Still Stalls on UK Entry Into ECM

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Initial skirmishing suggests Britain will find no swift or easy road into a Europe still occasionally clouded by Gaullist mists.

Questions are being asked in some British financial circles whether France's President Georges Pompidou, who earlier seemed willing to admit Britain to the European Common Market, may not after all "pull a de Gaulle" and veto Britain's entry as his predecessor did twice.

Balanced against this worry and suspicion is probably the more enduring speculation that the Pompidou administration is merely jockeying for position and playing for time.

Pompidou appears to have little to gain politically from destruction of Britain's third big bid to join the six-country community. He shows no ambition for international ascendency and seems more content to play a role within the European sphere.

With West Germany's thrust into the politics of Eastern Europe, speculation has grown that Pompidou would secretly welcome the admission of Britain to offset the political strength of his German neighbor.

But the tough position France maintains at the conference table is hardly inviting. The British government has acknowledged that the admission price will be steep. It wants to spread the cost over as long a period as possible so that the British economy can absorb the charges in easy stages.

The biggest struggle currently centres on the sharing of costs in financing the Common Market budget during a still-undefined transitional period.

Britain wants her contributions gradually increased over an eight-year period, with a small initial contribution of perhaps no more than about three per cent of the budget.

The Common Market appears to be leaning towards a five-year transition, with France demanding a big initial contribution to show that Britain is fully committed.

Undoubtedly the initial British offer is part of customary bargaining and Britain is likely to settle for a higher figure. But whether it is high enough to satisfy the Common Market France in particular—remains to be seen.

Today In History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 8, 1971 . . .

Mary Queen of Scots was executed 384 years ago today—in 1587—after 19 years in English prisons. Overthrown by revolution in Scotland, she had fled to England to Queen Elizabeth, her political and religious rival. Mary was eventually tried for conspiracy and condemned on evidence of the so-called Casket Letters, which were never satisfactorily explained. Elizabeth later bequeathed the English crown to James VI of Scotland, Mary's son.

1955—Marshal Nikolai Bulganin became premier of the Soviet Union, replacing Georgi Malenkov.

1947—More than 100 persons were trampled to death or burned at a masquerade ball at Icarislust Hale in West Germany.

1945—The Canadian 1st Army was attacked between Cleve and Boch.

1923—120 miners were killed at Dawson, N.M.

1910—The Boy Scouts of America were incorporated.

1836—Gas lights were installed in Philadelphia.

1791—The first U.S. bank was incorporated.

Commonwealth Realities

Orillia Packet and Times

The Commonwealth, as Queen Elizabeth noted in the course of a notably wise and thoughtful address last Christmas Day, is what we , who live in it, choose to make it. At this most critical moment in its history, it might be well for Canadians, who are themselves anxiously seeking to establish meaningful relationships with the world about them, to examine the realities of this peculiar organization.

The realities, of course, are buried behind a facade of hands-acros-the-sea inter-racial brotherhood, a sort of extension of the United Nations syndrome in which each nation, however great or small, purports to speak with an equal voice. It is this spurious equality, which makes no note of responsibility nor capacity of individual member nations, which invests Commonwealth proceedings with their air of unreality, a sort of Alice-in-Wonderland idyll played out oblivious of the harsh world of reality all about us. It is this hollow sham, the creation of such fatuous dream-spinners as our own Mitchell Sharp, which makes possible the blackmailing of a sophisticated European power such as Britain by backward barefoot tyrannies in central Africa which are, politically and culturally, a thousand years behind. The leverage and pressure by which these backward states wring concessions from their more advanced sister nations in the Commonwealth depend upon the exaggerated social conscience stemming from racial awareness and a consequent guilt complex, common today throughout the western world.

The reality of the Commonwealth relationship is a world away from this silly charade. In Australia, New Zealand, Canada and Great Britain English-speaking societies are established sharing a common heritage of law, language, literature and government, and sharing, above all, a concept of individual liberty which finds political expression in parliamentary institutions. These societies share, too, an advanced technology and standard of living and, together with their non-Commonwealth sister, the United States, they represent the dominant force behind western civilization. Sharing as they do, a common commitment to freedom, they can be relied upon, however reluctantly, to make common cause in its defence; a partnership sternly tested in two world wars.

In the long run, the test of Commonwealth relationship comes to this; in time of mortal peril, which Commonwealth countries would come to the aid of another? Who would aid Britain, say, faced with totalitarian obliteration? India, perhaps, or the Caribbean Islands? Certainly not Zambia, Tanzania, Ghana or Nigeria, all of whom are already committed to totalitarianism of one kind or another. Indeed, in all Africa, only those Commonwealth bogeys Rhodesia and South Africa could be relied upon to honor a hypothetical British alliance, and have the means to do so; which explains, more than all the speeches at the recent Commonwealth conference, Britain's new attitude to its African Commonwealth partners. It is an attitude based, at long last, on reality rather than myth, and it is one which we in Canada must one day emulate.

African Medical Progress

News from South Africa

Territorial authorities should encourage Bantu to qualify for work in hospitals so that hospitals in the homelands could be staffed by Bantu as soon as possible, the Deputy Minister of Bantu Administration and Education, Dr. P. G. J. Koornhof, said at Whiteriver.

The Deputy Minister, who was opening the new children's section of the Masana Mission Hospital at Whiteriver, said it was estimated that when the new hospital was completed it would have cost about $1,050,000.

The present hospital buildings were first opened in 1951. During that year 1,440 in-patients were treated. The number of inpatients has since risen to 6,740. At present 83 general nurses and 18 midwives are being trained at the hospital.

The hospital, which initially had a staff of four whites and 34 Bantu now has 24 whites and 318 Bantu.

Marijuana, The Law and The Public

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Because we all know how shy the Mafia is, I take it upon myself to thank all those who oppose the LeDain Commission. The big shots of the narcotics trade must be truly grateful to the government's and the narrowminded people's attitude toward marijuana. Just as rum-running made the Mafia rich when liquor was outlawed in the United States, so grass-running makes the new Mafia rich and powerful today in Canada.

The underworld drug business depends upon current Canadian policy, and those in the business have a real stake in perpetrating the present laws.

It is fantastic how people with only a police training have secured commanding positions in the formulations of narcotic policies while sound medical opinion (LeDain Commission?) based on careful research is cried down or ignored.

Here below is a partial list of those who believe change is needed, and because of this do not get front page reviews.

Dr. Joel Fort, a consultant on drug addiction to the World Health Organization lecturer in criminology at the University of California, and former staff member of the U.S. hospital for drug addicts in Lexington, Kentucky, has stated bluntly that "cannabis is a valuable pleasure-giving drug, probably much safer than alcohol." He went on to state that "physicians and social scientists have defaulted leadership and responsibility in dealing with the pleasure-giving drugs, and law-enforcement agencies and legislatures have far exceeded their legitimate areas of concern." (Fort, Joel, "Social and Legal Response to Pleasure Giving Drugs." New York, Atherton Press, 1964.)

Dr. S. J. Holmes, Director of Narcotic Addiction, Unit of Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation in Toronto, believes it is "fantastic and ridiculous" that a person caught with one marijuana cigarette can be sent to prison. "The situation is a disgrace to our civilization and merits much consideration." (Toronto Globe and Mail, Feb. 17, 1966,

"The laws (concerning marijuana) are now turning half the people on our campuses (and in our high schools) and a good portion of our leading citizens into criminals, and law breakers. It is like the Prohibition when the laws had nothing to do with the practices and beliefs of the people." (Rev. M. R. Moody, Judson Memorial Church, N.Y., Village Voice, March 31, 1966.)

I find it strange that a criminal black market flourishes solely because grass is illegal. I find it strange that grass is considered the height of corruption in the U.S. and Canada find it strange that grass has not been found to be addictive, or cause any detrimental side-effects or "tha hangover" of alcohol; strange that nobody can claim that alcohol (and tobacco), unlike grass, are not addictive or without detrimental effects.

Cannabis (plant from which drug is obtained) can only be innocent until proven guilty.

STUDENT AND CANNABIS SMOKER

EDITOR'S NOTE: Tests are still being conducted with volunteers in Canada and the United States to determine the effects of marijuana. It is known however, that reaction varies according to the strength and quality of the drug, and also the psychological makeup of the person using it. At least one case has been reported from Vietnam (where usage among the troops is said to be widespread) of a soldier under its influence killing several of his buddies. There is also a suggestion that the men alleged to have been involved in the My Lai massacre were under the influence of marijuana.

Separate Schools' Issue

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

May I add my thoughts to this perennial controversy — Separate School subsidization?

Upon reading "The H. Arbinger Society" 's letter last week I was very gratified to think that there are young people who are broadminded enough to be questioning the advisability of Separate schools. They are the generation who are going to be making the decisions and the sooner this fostering of religious intolerance is terminated, the better for everyone concerned.

The effects, suffering, etc., are all too evident in Spain, Ireland, South America, not to mention our own province of Quebec, and should not be ignored; but every effort should be made to rectify and correct the underlying causes of this discrimination. We shall never have peace until all discrimination, racial and religious, is banished.

Indo-China Moves Strain Nixon's Credibility

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP — The intensity of the Indochina war seems to be stampeding Richard Nixon toward Credibility Gap, that treacherous political precipice that tripped up Lyndon Johnson back when the conflict was just the Vietnam war.

The six-day news blackout on the frantic military manoeuvres along the Laotian an Cambodian borders, ordered by the United States defence department, has polarized opinion once again.

In the process Nixon seems to have lost the support of more of his most ardent and valued backers on war policy. Also, congressional and youthful doves are on the wing again, threatening all sorts of retribution.

Still, with events threatening to alter the situation on both the political and war fronts within he next few weeks, the early betting is that Nixon will manoeuvre better than did Johnson, driven from the White House over the war issue.

There are a number of reasons, observers suggest, for this belief—not the least of which is Nixon's cool talent for easing himself through such crises.

Another reason is that Nixon, despite the alarming developments in Indochina this week, has somehow changed the American public attitude toward the war itself.

Whether people have been partly anesthetized by White House, Pentagon and state department propaganda or whether they're simply bored with the long war is an open question.

But the fact remains that the leaders of critical opinion have been considerably undercut by Nixon policy and, barring some terrible turn of events on the war front, it seems unlikely they can regroup to light a fire under public opinion.

Obviously, Nixon war policy by comparison with that of Johnson has been a major factor. U.S. forces are being steadily reduced to an anticipated 280,000 by next spring from the high of 540,000, casualties are down and the South Vietnamese apparently are growing increasingly effective in prosecuting the war.

Many college anti-war organizations have been disbanded in the wake of cuts in the draft calls, and as the congressional election campaign last fall demonstrated, Americans have turned their thoughts largely to concern about unemployment and inflation.

In this atmosphere, the administration has escaped broad public indignation even after being caught in a whole series of deceptions about the war and the use of U.S. personnel in it.

Senator Robert C. Byrd (Dem. W.Va., assistant leaer in the Senate and a longtime supporter of U.S. policy, was moved to accuse the administration of "inexcusable bungling" and "creating an entirely unnecessary credibility gap."

What it boils down to, perhaps, is that Americans aren't so fired up against the war in general but detest having Americans fight in it.

What Nixon has to find is the tolerable level of involvement, many observers agree. And he's an expert in this type of pulse-taking.

For instance, when he talks of "full employment" he doesn't really mean full employment—and everybody knows it. He means a "politically acceptable" level of unemployment.

In the same sense, there probably is a "politically acceptable" level of war involvement. Some experts suggest there may be something like 50,000 Americans in Vietnam for another five or 10 years.

Thus "politically acceptable" means a level low enough to keep the unemployed and the anti-war protesters from street demonstrations and generally to prevent war and joblessness from being political issues dangerous for Nixon in the 1972 presidential year.

More Entries Sought For Cross-country Race

With entries already in from RMC and Queen's University at Kingston, from Peterborough, Brighton and Batawa, applications for registration in the cross-country ski race in connection with the Tweed winter carnival next Saturday are still being accepted.

Entries in the bantam, junior, intermediate and senior events are being accepted by the Tweed Chamber of Commerce.

Registrations in the bantam and junior classes (up to 18 years) are particularly welcome and invitations have been mailed out to all schools in the Quinte area.

Sponsors are still working on the 12-mile cross-country ski trail from Latta to Tweed. The trail is being marked with fluorescent orange flagging and a new track is being broken with each fresh snow. The trail distance for bantams is 2.5 miles and either six or 12 miles for seniors.

Hot refreshments at midpoint on the 12-mile trail will be available to all racers.

Starting time for the bantam racers will be 10 a.m. Saturday with juniors starting at 10.30 and intermediates and seniors at 12 noon.

Trophies will be provided for all classes, but at least three participants must be registered for each age group to qualify for the first place trophy. Six participants are required to qualify for first and second prize trophies.

Frankford Legion Marks 25 Years

FRANKFORD (Special) — Frankford branch 387 of the Royal Canadian Legion celebrated its 25th birthday Saturday with a banquet and dance in the new hall on Mill St.

The Frankford branch was organized in 1946 by veterans of two World Wars. Membership during the first year was 81 and had increased to 169 members by the close of 1970.

The 25-year history of the Frankford Legion branch has been one of continued progress.

The first meetings were held in the Frankford Community Hall but the organization moved to a small building now used as an office by the Frankford District Credit Union.

Land was purchased and a building commenced on King St. in 1950. Construction went along as finances permitted and in 1959 a terrazzo floor was completed. This was followed by completion of an upstairs room to help relieve the continuing pressure on space by the growing membership.

In 1967, more property was bought from the Percy Bell Estate, giving access to Mill St. and allowing building of a large addition that is greatly in demand by various village organizations for social functions, weddings, and banquets catered to by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

The cement block building is about 40 by 80 feet and well equipped. It is felt that it will fill the needs of the branch and the village for many years to come.

In its quarter-century of existence the branch has been devoted to the services of comrades in need and to the memory of fallen comrades and Remembrance and Decoration day services.

It has also taken a large and active part in the service needs of the village and area and has given help to fundraising projects for the Frankford arena, the Welfare Committee and minor softball and intermediate hockey teams.

LORDC Folder Is Published

A new full-color tourist brochure featuring the seven tourist areas of the region has been published by the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council from its Peterborough headquarters.

Fifty five thousand of the four-color pamphlets have been printed for distribution through travel shows, government travel bureaus, regional tourist councils and chambers of commerce.

The seven tourist regions covered are Highlands of Hastings, Land O' Lakes, Madawaska Valley, Quinte's Isle, Haliburton Highlands and Kawartha Lakes.

The brochures fold out to a large easy-to-read map of the entire region and feature color pictures of year-round tourist activities.

Recreation Committee Holds Expenses Down

CAMPBELLFORD (Special) — The town's recreation committee kept well within its 1970 budget and returned a sizable amount to help reduce the 1971 millrate, councillors learned at their last meeting.

About 1,000 children took part in activities, but this does not include those in minor hockey, which is self-supporting due to the efforts of the Campbellford Minor Hockey Association.

About 500 children were involved in the swimming program, including children from Seymour township.

William Carter, a member of the 1970 council, gave the recreation committee report to council. Miss Karen Leigh was engaged as director and co-ordinated the sports program.

Town council can continue to restrict the opening of gasoline stations, councillors were told. A previous directive had led them to believe they could not limit the number of new stations opening.

If the town followed the guidelines set out by the Retail Gasoline Operators' Association, it would limit the number of gas stations to four. There are already a dozen or more in operation.

The Retail Gasoline Operators' Association bulletin suggests that outlets be limited to one for each 7,500 population or one for every 535 passenger cars.

A leak of surface water, or a leak from the core wall of the canal is spilling water at an estimated 185 gallons a minute, council learned. If the estimate is correct it would cost the town about $3.350 a month extra for treatment of this amount of water in the sewage disposal plant. Council wants the leak stopped before the new sewage plant goes into operation.

The Chamber of Commerce asked for and received an increase in its annual grant from $100 to $200.

A licence was granted for the encroachment of a building on Front St. at the cost of $1 a year. A survey showed that the old Queen's Hotel building, about 100 years old, encroached on Front St. .13 of a foot on the southend and .3 of a foot on the northend.

ANAF News

Dominion President J. C. Lundberg returned Saturday after attending meetings in Vancouver and Calgary. In Vancouver he proudly watched as the British Columbia Command and officers of the Vancouver Unit presented the second three quarters of a million dollar Senior Citizens Housing Project, thereby completing their project of $1.5 million worth of this type of housing over the past three years.

These units of the Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans in Canada deserve a lot of credit and praise for their untiring efforts in planning and carrying to a successful conclusion such a worthwhile program on behalf of the senior citizens of the province. All other units across Canada salute them.

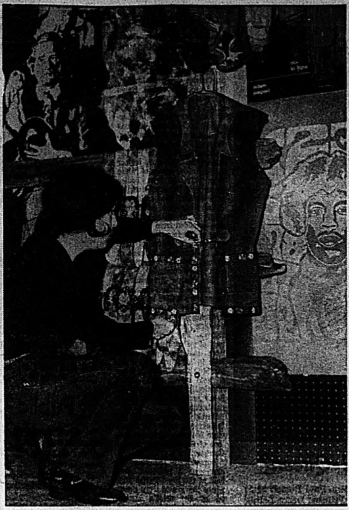
Comrade Jack also attended the meeting in Calgary where Professor C. Orton addressed the National Youth Committee. The professor, of the University of Calgary, gave an informative lecture on the preparation of various youth programs which should be of value in helping the many local Youth Committees across Canada in carrying out the wishes of the Dominion Command in their project of helping the youth of Canada.

Despite the unsuitable weather, quite a few turned out for the torchlight parade while a large crowd watched as the parade, led by the Veterans of Belleville combined color party with their colors fluttering in the gusts of wind and lit up spasmodically in the eerie lights of the torches, moved along the route with clowns escorting the lovely Carnival Queen and her bevy of beauteous attendants.

In the tug of war, postponed from Friday to Saturday morning, the Duke of Edinburgh Unit's brawny team succeeded in taking the Sales and Ad Club in two straight pulls. It was a different story when they met their rivals from the Legion. The first two heats proved to be a ding-dong battle with each club in turn winning a heat. The last heat was an epic battle with both sides fighting desperately but finally the Legion team gave a tremendous heave and were declared the winners. These arch rivals will meet again on March 20 in their postponed hockey match for the fur-lined trophy. Get tickets from either club and help support this very good cause as well as enjoying an evening of hockey and entertainment.

Cdes. Reg Featherstone, John Fisher, Jim Calnan and sick chairman "Kelly" Calnan spent Saurday afternoon visiting the comrades in the Kingston Hospitals and reported that they were surprised to see so many Belleville people there besides the veterans. Chairman "Kelly" hopes that similar visits can be arranged in the future as both the visitors and the visited really enjoyed meeting and talking with one another. All on the sick list are home: Cdes. R. Woods, E. Brockhurst, R. Craig and Jack Feeney, who is still waiting for a bed in BGH.

The Friday evening social this week will be entertained by the Marg Flett Trio in honor of St. Valentine's day. There will be prizes during the evening and there is no admission charge so come on down and enjoy a relaxing evening of fun and companionship.



Shop for the Curious

The young lady, known only as Tigger, is sorting over the leather garments and posters that are on display in Belleville's newest store. Pooh's Corner, located at the rear of Sam the Record Man, is destined to be a place for the curious.

New Shop Specializes In Posters, Leather

Pooh's Corner is the latest addition to the Belleville downtown community. The store is unique in the sense that it is located at the rear of yet another store. To reach this place of frivolity you must first walk through Sam the Record Man.

Pooh's Corner, affectionately named after the proprietor of the record shop, Clive Hitchon, can boast one of the largest poster collections in the area. These posters, which line most of the available wall space in the store, are the chief retail feature.

The subject areas that the posters cover are wide-ranging, with something for every taste and want.

Also in Pooh's corner is Belleville's first exclusive, made-to-measure, made-to-design leather shop.

The store, staffed and serviced by Mr. Hitchon, will be stocked by Ted Cairns.

The boast of the shop is that anything that can be drawn on paper, can also be produced by Mr. Cairns and his staff at Ted's Tack Shop in Stirling.

Cost for these articles will vary according to the amount of time, patience and leather needed.

Headbands, suede skirts, vests and even leather bras will be available and on display in the store called the Leather Bag.

Interior design of the shop is one of its more interesting features.

A mural, covering two hundred and forty square feet, was created by Miss Lindsey Hallam to capture the youthful mood of the shop.

Pooh's Corner, which opened Saturday morning, is expected by the owner to prove an exciting place to shop for young and old.

As the owner explained, "yes, we do have something different here."

Students' Films Exhibit Highlight

Film making is becoming as common as essay writing in modern schools.

The Ontario government is the latest agency to give such projects a boost, with an invitation to schools to produce 8 mm. color films for presentation at Ontario Place in Toronto.

The three-minute films portray the communities in which the young producers live, and will be seen at Ontario Place beginning late in May.

Among the 288 schools participating in the project are Spring Valley Elementary School in Brighton and Pinecrest Memorial Elementary School in Bloomfield.

Cost of producing each three-minute film is absorbed by the individual school.

The department of Trade and Development will select the suitable films for presentation in the Ontario Place exhibit.

The student-created exhibit will show many aspects of Ontario and its way of life through the eyes of young people, using a modern communication method with which today's youths everywhere is identifying.

At Ontario Place, in one of the five "pods" of the giant exhibition pavilion, the films will be on view in a self-contained exhibit that utilizes a multi-programmed, multi-selector projection system. The visitor selects the place of interest to him, presses a button and watches the color film made by the students of that locality.

The new Corolla Coupe.
It's practically beautiful.

A practical person buys a practical car simply because it's practical. The fact that the car may be ugly doesn't seem to bother him. But it bothered us. "Why can't a practical car be beautiful?" we asked. And then along came our Coupe.

The Coupe is every bit as practical as the ugliest practical car. Only it's not ugly it's beautiful. The steering wheel is simulated wood grain. The bucket seats are high-back and fully reclining. The floor is carpeted. The glass is tinted. The interior is padded. The ride is quiet.

From a practical point of view it gets up to 35 miles per gallon from a powerful 73 hp engine. It has front disc brakes and an electric rear window defroster. It's big enough for a small family, small enough to park easily and surprisingly sells for $2198*—with everything.

So now, a practical person can buy a practical car simply because it's beautiful.

Senior Citizens Enjoy Slides

Fllowing a short business meeting members of the Belleville Senior Citizens Club enjoyed viewing a number of pictures shown by Lee Ketcheson following a trip to England, Ireland and Scotland.

The meeting held at the Recreation Centre was opened by the presidnt Mrs. Kathleen Adams. Mrs. Lulu Adams provided piano accompaniment. A momen't silence was observed in memory of two former members Mrs. Shirley and Mrs. Drurie.

A number of new members were welcomed to the club and at this time Mr. and Mrs. Harry Taylor were congratulated on the occasion of their 51st wedding anniversary.

Mrs. K. Bowers read minutes of the last meeting and the treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Jackson, which showed a substantial balance on hand. Mrs. Gist on behalf of the sick and visiting committee gave her report and noted that Mrs. Lily Ross and Mrs. Mary Scott were in hospital. It was also noted that the election of officers is to be held in October and that officers will takee over the first of January as requested by head office.

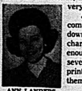
At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served by a committee including Mrs. E. Hanna, Mrs. I. Robinson and Mrs. F. McDonald.

The draw was won by Mrs. Elsie Jackson.

Ann Landers

Many Reasons For Few Friends

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You get many letters from people who complain because they are lonely. They wonder why they have so few friends, and the few friends they do have don't call very often.



ANN LANDERS

Just yesterday, a person I work with complained to me that no one likes her. I sat down and thought about the personality and character traits that I most dislike. Strangely enough, out of the ten traits, this person had seven. Here's the list and I hope you will print it, Ann. It might help some folks to see themselves as others see them:

1. A compulsion to show off knowledge.
2. Exaggerates to the point that it's the next thing to lying.
3. Moodiness. Friendly one day, unfriendly the next.
4. Bossiness. Must run everything.
5. Not reliable. Word is no good.
6. Chronic complainer. Negative attitude about many things. Inveterate crepe-hanger.
7. Nosy. Asks lots of questions that are none of her business.
8. Gossipy. Knows everything about everybody and tells it. Makes you wonder what she is saying about you.
9. Says things in anger then tries to smooth it over by buying a little gift.
10. Always fishing for compliments but never gives any.

Sign me — H-2 O TOWN, S.D.

DEAR WATERTOWN: I hope every person who reads this column will measure himself against the list. I did — and you hit me on Number 4.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Was it a Freudian slip or did the typesetters make a mistake? In the Sacramento Union the other day, the line read: "There is no substitute for love. It's not what comes "Gift-Warpped, but how we feel about people and how we treat them that counts."

That error should go down in history as a classic. The person who sends gifts because he cannot express love any other way is truly warped. And the child who is deluged with gifts will be warped, too, if he received no better evidence that he is loved.

My parents and I both came from wealthy families but we were not "gift-warped." They let us make our own way. When we were first married they did not rush out and buy us a home and expensive furniture. We had a small apartment which we furnished in second-hand Early Junk. We had great times in that little apartment. It was our castle.

Now our children are married and we are letting them make their own way. I can't tell you how difficult it is for us not to rush in and make life easier for them. But we know the true joys in life are the things we accomplish on our own. Our parents did not deny us that joy and we shall not deny it to our children. — YOUR FANS IN SACRAMENTO.

DEAR FANS: If I could give a prize for the best letter of the year yours would surely be a candidate. Thanks for writing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My sister and I are good bridge players. We married men who are tournament championship quality. Every Friday we get together for dinner and cards. It's gotten so I dread these evenings. The tension is terrible. My husband loses his temper and cusses me out if I make a mistake. My sister's husband is just as bad. He got so mad last Friday he slapped her. Is there a way we can get these guys to curb their tempers? — A AND P.

DEAR A AND P: Probably not. Throw in the deck — permanently.

Female Postman Enjoys Her Work

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Marie Thompson has been lugging a mail sack over a city route since September, 1970, and she's found dogs are no supporters of women's liberation.

"There's something about the uniform that brings out the beast in dogs," she said. "But I suppose it's one of the darker sides of a normally enjoyable job."

Mrs. Thompson, mother of five, has encountered some odd looks from people on her mail route.

"Even little children are surprised to see me delivering mail. I suppos it's because I'm doing a job that is normally associated with a man."

Before writing examinations last July, she drove a truck for the post office. She passed the exams with flying colors and immediately was accepted as a part-time postie.

Now she is considered "full-time part-time help", she said, working from 7:30 a.m. until 2 p.m. Soon she hopes to become strictly full-time, working one hour longer each day.

"The hours I spend on my job are the best part of my day. I thoroughly enjoy what I'm doing."

Mrs. Thompson hoped to lose weight by carrying a mail sack, but things haven't worked out that way.

"I weigh the same now as when I started the job, so all the exercise really hasn't done me one bit of good. I do think, though, that I'm in better physical shape now."

Her male co-workers are quick to come to the defence of "that lady postman."

"The postie who delivers mail to my home has even told me that most of the men are proud of the work I'm doing," she said.

WEDDING

PHILLIPS — BRENNAN

Rev. J. Ferguson officiated at the wedding ceermony in St. Charles Borromeo Church, Read, recently, when Helen Margaret Brennan daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Brennan of Read was united in marriage to Terrence Thomas Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Phillips of Read.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length bridal gown of white satin with the lace bodice featuring a brocaded neckline with wedding band collar and Juliet sleeves. A full length train edged with matching lace extended from the shoulders and a four-tier veil was caught to a cluster of daisies. She carried a cascade of yellow 'mums interspersed with yellow rosebuds.

Miss Sharon Brennan, sister of the bride, as maid of honor wore a floor length blue velvet gown in empire style featuring a high scalloped neckline and wrist length sleeves. She carried a bouquet of yellow carnations and wore matching yellow rosebuds in her hair. Another sister Miss Jane Brennan wore a gold velvet gown styled identically to the maid of honor and carried an identical bouquet.

Harold Enright attended the bridegroom, while the ushers were Lawrence Brennan, brother of the bride and Gerard Corrigan.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the Read Parish Hall where the guests were greeted by the bride's mother wearing a beige long sleeved dress with brown accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a gold crimplene dress with black accessories and a corsage of carnations.

For the honeymoon trip, the bride chose a blue crepe dress enhanced with long pleated sleeves with black patent accessories and a gardenia corsage.

Public Speaking Contest Plans Discussed

The annual Royal Canadian Legion public speaking contest was the main topic for discussion when the Col. Phay Wills Branch Ex-servicewomen held its recent meeting at the Legion Hall.

The matter was brought to the attention of members by the Branch president Mrs. Ina Rollins who noted that the competition at Branch level will take place in Belleville, Feb. 20 and 21. This event will be chaired by Dorothy Howes with the direction of Harold Vaughan, district public speaking and citizenship officer and is sponsored jointly by Legion Branches 99 and 587.

Mrs. Howes reported that she had mailed letters to all local schools outlining the details of the contest which offers attractive cash prizes and an opportunity to advance through the Legion zone, district and area to the Provincial level. Finals will be held in Elliott Lake in April. Travelling expenses will be paid by the home branch for contestant and one parent.

Elementary grade pupils will compete on the Saturday afternoon while the secondary school students will compete on Sunday afternoon.

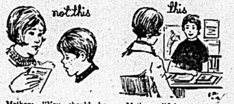
During the meeting the final arrangements were made for the color party representing the Ex-Servicewomen who marched in the Belleville Winter Carnival torchlight parade on Friday evening.

A St. Patrick's dance is planned for March 12 with Mrs. Rollins to be responsible for hiring a band.

Winner of the 50/50 draw at the conclusion of the meeting was "Kenny" Chambers.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "You should be able to get better grades than these. You have a high enough I.Q."

Son: "Aw, that teacher doesn't know anything. I'm lots smarter than she is."

Mother: "Johnny acts so sure of himself, but he's really unhappy about his school work. Perhaps you could suggest something we can do to help him. I don't think he understands the subject, but he is ashamed to ask questions."

The underachiever may act brash, but he is a child who thinks he cannot do better. Teachers and parents should co-operate to help him replace his bravado with real confidence.

Home And School News

BAYVIEW — HARRY J. CLARKE

Newly appointed officers of the Bayview - Harry J. Clarke Home and School Association were installed at a meeting held recently.

Membership chairman for Hastings County Home and School Council conducted the installation after which short business period followed. A number of parents expressed concern for the safety of the children in the school parking lot.

Vice - principal Gale Allen of Harry J. Clarke School introduced a color film entitled "LSD - Insight or Insanity" and suggested that parents should not use a scare approach with children but rather a factual one.

Guest speaker at the meeting was Police Chief Douglas Crosbie who discussed the local drug situation and stressed the importance of maintaining open communication lines within the family.

Mothers of kindergarten pupils from both schools provided refreshments for the coffee hour.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

THEN AND NOW — In many ways, the fashions of 1961 and those of today could be interchanged. The average skirt length is the same and fashions in both 1961 and 1971 feature easy shaping. At left is a 1961 fashion by Oleg Cassini in navy mohair, featuring a longer jacket. At right is a double woven cotton costume by Chapman for Spring '71 in a navy and white print. (CP Photo)

This Spring's New Fashions Comparable to Those in 1961

NEW YORK (CP) — Now that the 1970s decade has arrived, it's interesting to compare this spring's fashions with those of 10 years ago. In many ways they could be interchanged.

For one thing, the average skirt length is the same, just below the knee. But in 1961, skirts were reported as being the shortest in years and were starting on their upward climb towards the shortest in history. Spring, 1971, on the other hand, is lengthening the skirt and has consolidated the lowered hemline ushered in during the 1970s.

In spring, 1961, fashion expert Eleanor Lambert wrote in her New York roundup of the spring collections that "fashion is mobile cut, easy shaping, elongated bodice, bared throat, bared arms . . . the waistline set low or in the unbelted princesse line, also marked with loose sashes of leather or fabric."

This spring, the waistline is back to its natural place and is usually firmly belted or accented. Instead of the 1961 bared look, 1971 has returned to the cover-up, even for most late-day dresses.

Only the 1961 phrase, "easy shaping", is applicable this spring. This is due to the soft fabrics such as sheer cotton knits, matte jersey, crepe de chine and so on. The 1961 fabrics ran more to surface interest such as tissue tweeds and mesh-weave wool or lustrous grainy silks. These needed shaping to make them look soft and feminine.

This spring's colors are gay and vivid in clear tones. They were also bright and fresh in 1961. Both springs even noted that the new pure colors were chasing away the sombre colors of the previous season. But almost no black was shown in 1961 and this spring black dresses appeared, especially for late-day, in several trend-setting collections.

And in 1961 fashion was crazy about pink, even in coats. This spring no one color dominates, although the mauve spectrum is popular.

The growing importance of the costume look was noted in spring, 1961. However a dress with matching jacket or functional companion coat was still a new idea. Today we accept the costume concept, adding new variations to include a dress with a sleeveless coat or long vest.

In 1961 pant suits as such hadn't appeared. Pants were still part of sportswear and referred to as slacks. However culottes did make the jump from the sportswear category to evening. But they were never to become widely popular. Today the pants costume is so much a part of city life that it is regarded as a classic.

Hats were still important in the spring of 1961. Said the Millinery Institute of America: "Easy suits and coat costumes take sombreros, cavaliers, bretons and sailors for town and travel . . . short crop coats and full capey ones look elegant with a tower or cone-crowned hat of dramatic size." Indeed the top milliners gave first place to high crowns.

This spring hats are important again, after being out of favor for several years. They complement the longer skirts. Mostly they are large-brimmed, just as many were in 1961. This spring Christian Dior-New York, for example, is topping its longer (even ankle-length) silk printed dresses with huge dipping brims. With suits and coats, the 1971 hats are smller but always with a brim, shovel-front or side-upswept.

Shoes have probably shown the most dramatic change over the decade. Spring, 1961, was viewing the end of the pointed toe. Said the National Shoe Institute of Canada: "The nipped-off, tapered toe appeared tentatively last fall and appeared again for spring but didn't gain much following in Canada." But the trend was launched for the stub-toed, chunky-heeled shoes that were to oust the elongated toe.

This spring the cycle has started the return with more rounded toes and higher heels. However, during the decade, boots have taken such a strong hold that it will take a fashion upheaval to banish them.

Successful Living

Household Attire May Preserve Marriage

By DORIS CLARK

Next time you dress in the morning select, not the faded housecoat which "will do because you are just going to be around the house", but the crisp, fresh dress or pant suit that you got for Christmas. Protect it from messy chores with the cleanest, crispest apron you can find.

See what it does for your morale and the way you tackle what needs doing.

I'm not saying you need to be a fashion plate when you are washing dishes. But I do suggest a well-pressed, attractive home wardrobe; an occasional trip to the mirror; a clean-up and make-up once in a while to retain a good-looking and well-combed image all day long.

Am I asking too much in the name of preserving a super - marriage - in - the - making?

Dear Doris: My mother works in a night club every evening of the week and now my father says she is an alcoholic. I have seen her come home drunk more than once.

But I am on her side because my father never takes her out or backs her up in any kind of situation. He refused to tend a party which was important to her and the others wondered where her husband was.

She is well liked and I love her. I don't respect my father at all.

I am just 14. Should I try to talk with both parents? — Ashamed and Upset.

Dear Ashamed: You are caught in the middle — a predicament at 14! The problem is really between your parents.

Can you blame your father for not wanting to condone your mother's drinking by attending the party? Yet her alcoholism may be in response to his coldness.

The best thing you could do is get the two of them to a marriage counsellor and see whether a mismanaged marriage can be patched up. Don't try anything more than that yourself.

Dear Doris: I would like to obtain a small hymn book with the Doh - Ray - Mee's in it. Not a musical score, as I cannot read music. There is a piano here and I would love to play hymns if I could get a book.

We used to have them in our Band of Hope and Sunday School in Scotland, years ago. I have misplaced mine in moving. I enjoy your column and have been helped by it many times. — Janet-Seventy.

Dear Janet: Can you play your piano by picking out the Doh - Ray - Mee's? More power to you! If you are actually filling in the harmonies yourself, your gift should certainly be used.

What aging Scot or youthful descendant - who - saves - things is going to come up with the book Janet needs?

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Orange Cranberry Bread for Freezer

By MARY MOORE

A genuine excuse for a mid-morning snack was the necessity for me to taste Orange Cranberry Bread. My desk looks like a party in progress.

On reconsidering these fruit bread ingredients I think it is a fairly economical project because it makes two loaves; one to serve when you make them and one to freezerwrap and freeze. That will please our freezer owners.

ORANGE CRANBERRY BREAD (2 loaves)

2 cups raw cranberries cut in halves (see note below)
4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 cups granulated sugar
3 tsps. (1 tbsp.) baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
2 tsps salt
2 eggs beaten
1½ cups orange juice (use diluted fresh frozen)
½ cup melted shortening
2 tbsps. grated fresh orange rind
1 cup chopped walnuts

Wash and pick over cranberries and pat dry. Cut in halves and measure two cups. Set aside.

Place sifter over large mixing bowl and into it tip the sifted and measured flour, sugar, baking powder, soda and salt. In a smaller bowl beat eggs and add to them the orange juice, melted shortening and orange rind. Make a well in the centre of the dry ingredients then add the liquids and stir just util dampened. Fold in cranberries and nuts until just blended. Do not overstir. Turn into two greased and floured 9 x 5 x 3" loaf pans. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 80 min. or until when lightly touched with finger tip no impression remains. Stand pans on rack and let rest for 10 min. then turn out on racks to cool. Wrap and store one in refrigerator and freezerwrap or tie in double plastic bags and freeze the other.

I hope all of our fruit bread bakers have clipped and enjoyed the three fruit bread recipes I have given to you in the past three weeks.

NOTE: If it is impossible for you to buy raw cranberries in your area try substituting canned Montmorency cherries drained and dried or 1½ cups plumped Sultana raisins and ½ cup sliced red or green maraschino cherries or chopped unpeeled red apples.

Tale of A Tape

Old Flickers Are Made Steady

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The jerky old silent film goes in here and comes out there on tape—steady, tinted, and with actors' gestures at normal speed.

Such deflickered flickers were demonstrated recently by a company that hopes to resurrect Garbo, Chaney, Valentino and other silent classics for television.

Silents flickered, Joseph Bluth explained, because their 16-frames-a-second rate was visible to the naked eye. When talkies came in, movies went to 24 frames a second for improved sound. Silents shown on the faster equipment were speeded up and jerky.

Bluth is president of Technicolor's Vidtronics Division, where the new system was developed for Gold Key Entertainment, Inc., a sales representative for MGM.

A reel of silent film goes into a machine that passes it before a pulsing stroboscope light that transfers the images to tape, said Bluth, and: "The result is that everything is at normal, exact, original speed."

Music and sound effects also can be added.

Dialogue is still on old-fashioned printed titles. Off-camera narration is used occasionally where action has been condensed.

The demonstration film was The Big Parade, a three-hour 1925 film cut to two hours for TV and starring John Gilbert. Its music track was added in 1931.

Gold Key President Harold Goldman said that if sponsors are found for this first film, the next from MGM's library of 200 silents probably will be The Unholy Three with Lon Chaney and Victor McLaglen.

Others contemplated are Joan Crawford's first movie, Our Dancing Daughters; The Four Horsemen, with Rudolph Valentino, and Ben Hur, with Francis X. Bushman and Ramon Novarro.

"The question is whether audiences will accept this as an exciting thing to see," he said.

Power Failure Blanks New York TV Stations

NEW YORK (AP) — A transformer failure in a Consolidated Edison Co. power plant plunged blocks of midtown Manhattan into darkness for more than four hours Sunday night. Nine television stations were knocked off the air.

The blackout, which started at 7:12 p.m., stranded sightseers in the 86th and 102nd floor observatories of the Empire State Building, snarled traffic moving without signals and turned thousands of Sunday suppers into candlelit dinners.

First reports from Con Edison said the failure resulted from an explosion, but a spokesman said later that the trouble probably was due to two electrical short circuits "that sounded like explosions."

At its height, the blackout covered the area bounded roughly by the East River and Broadway between 30th and 51st streets. Of four distribution grids affected, two were restored by 10 p.m. and the others at 11:42 p.m.

Because of the grid patterns, half of Times Square went black while lights on the other half blazed on brightly.

The first two grids to go knocked out power to the Empire State Building where all but one of the local television stations have their transmitters.

WXTV, a Spanish-language sation on Channel 41, has its transmitter downtown. It stayed on the air and broadcast bulletins about the blackout in English.

Radio stations also stayed on the air, some using emergency power.

At the New York Daily News the presses stopped during printing of the first edition. Later the entire News building went dark.

The newspaper missed two editions but editors and rewritemen worked by candlelight until power was restored to have the story ready when the presses could roll.

The Sixth Avenue subway line was out between West 4th Street in Greenwich Village and 50th Street for about two hours.

Rough Night in Belfast

'Boys Having Fun' with Bombs

BELFAST (CP) — "Well," the lady in Falls Road said as another gelignite bomb went off, "I guess the boys are having a little fun."

It was a rough Sunday night in Northern Ireland with plenty of shooting in Belfast and other places. But no fatalities were reported.

I walked through the troubled Falls Road district early today and heard a few explosions and bullets whining around. No one was getting killed.

The police confirmed later that there were no overnight fatalities.

Crowds in the Falls Road were mainly standing around peacefully while British army troop-carriers waited to go into action.

"We are just playing a cat-and-mouse game," the commander of one carrier on the Roman Catholic road told me.

Two gelignite bombs were flung while I was in the area and several later.

All apparently exploded in the streets without causing casualties.

At the same time, civilian snipers and the army exchanged some gunfire and a few civilian passers-by on the sidewalks had close shaves.

All the snipers picked off by British marksmen—officially two, but possibly as many as 10—were adults, believed by British officials to be Irish nationalists egged on by radical factions of the outlawed Irish Republican Army. The IRA advocates the violent overthrow of the Protestant government in Northern Ireland to bring the six counties under the predominantly Catholic government of Dublin.

An exact count was not possible. Most of the dead and wounded were dragged away for secret treatment or burial to prevent reprisals against relatives.

The first fatality among the British troops sent to Northern Ireland in August, 1969, occurred during the weekend: a 20-year-old soldier cut down by machine-gun fire.

Eight soldiers and nine civilians were wounded, including two civilians and a soldier Sunday night. The soldier and one civilian were felled by gunfire as battling continued in Belfast and broke out in Londonderry, Ulster's second largest city.

Youngsters are fighting alongside their fathers and older brothers as Roman Catholic militants switched from rocks and bottles to shots and bombs.

A 14-year-old lost a hand in Belfast when a dynamite bomb exploded before he threw it at soldiers. Five of the dozens of persons arrested in Londonderry Sunday were under 12.

"How do you fight a 10-year-old even if he has a bomb in his hand?" a British soldier asked.

Two customs posts and an electrical substation were bombed near the border with the Republic. The army blamed them on an outlawed Protestant group, the Ulster Volunteers.

Six hundred reinforcements arrived from England during the night, bringing the total army force to 7,400 men. Two thousand Ulster national guardsmen have been mobilized to man roadblocks and guard key installations, and 2,000 others are on standby.

Israel Unlikely To Pull Troops From Suez Banks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel is expected to refuse to pull all its troops back from the Suez canal until its gets a peace agreement, but will leave the door open to a reduction of its forces along the front lines with Egypt.

Informed sources say Premier Golda Mier will outline that position Tuesday before the Knesset, the Israeli parliament, in response to the demand made last Thursday by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

States Walkouts Ended

TORONTO (CP) — A CBC spokesman said no slowdowns by television production workers have been reported today at any of the network's stations across Canada.

Contract talks between the publicly-owned network and the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing 1,650 television production employees, broke down Thursday.

Since then, the union has held walkouts, study sessions and union meetings which interrupted programming at several Canadian centres.

The CBC spokesman said there is no indication of further negotiations.

The first walkouts involved more than 700 workers Thursday in Toronto, Winnipeg and Ottawa. They later spread to other centres. St. John's workers stayed out for part of Saturday and workers in Vancouver held an "emergency union meeting" from late Saturday afternoon to Saturday midnight.

The walkouts have affected only local programming.

The main issues are wages, job security, bilingual premiums and the corporation's share in health and hospital insurance programs.

One Hurdle Left For Karen

KAREN MAGNUSSEN

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Karen Magnussen, having conquered one of her most-feared foes, has but one more to defeat in her bid for the world championship in women's singles figure skating.

And even before Karen defeated Janet Lynn of the United States for the North American title here Saturday, she was touted by many experts in attendance at the three-day competition as the next world champion.

The 18-year-old, three-time Canadian champion from North Vancouver, B.C., said before the continental contest that Austrian Beatrix Schuba was her other major competitor.

"But Beatrix is no free-skater," said Max Gould of Toronto, a former Canadian Figure Skating Association judge. "She's the world's best skater in figures, but she can't come close to Karen in free skating."

Miss Schuba confirmed the opinion when she fell once and nearly fell a second time in her free-skating performance in the European championships Saturday at Zurich, Switzerland.

The defending world champion again won the European title on the strength of her marks in compulsory figures which count for 50 per cent of the total marks.

Miss Magnussen beat Miss Lynn in both the figures Friday and the free-skating performance Saturday which earned the North Vancouver skater a standing ovation from the crowd of more than 4,000.

The pretty blonde, who won her first Canadian senior championship in 1968, was picked first by six of the seven judges and even earned a perfect mark of six from one judge for artistic impression in her free-skating program.

She won the free-skating competition despite having to follow Miss Lynn whose marks topped those of three earlier competitors.

"I like a fight," said Miss Magnussen. "I enjoy it when the going gets tough and I perform a lot better when I've got someone pushing me."

Miss Magnussen even had her opposition enthralled.

"I just love Karen's skating," said Miss Lynn, a 17-year-old skater from Rockford, Ill., who had taken the title over Miss Magnussen in the last North American championship two years ago.

"She does even better under pressure and I knew she would skate well."

Beyond the world championships Feb. 23-28 at Lyon, France, Miss Magnussen has only one other major goal.

"I want to win the title at the 1972 Olympics. Beyond that, I haven't made up my mind."

Miss Magnussen's title made up for a number of other disappointments the Canadian team suffered here.

A second-place silver in men's singles and a third-place bronze in pairs were the only other medals taken by Canada which was wiped out in the dance classes.

On top of that, team manager John McKay was forced to pull Ruth Hutchinson out of the women's free-skating competition after the Vancouver competitor accidentally punctured her right ankle with her skate blade during a practice session Saturday morning.

Jim Sladky and Judy Schwomeyer of Wilmington, Del., took the dance title, followed by Harvey and Ann Millier of Drexel, Pa., and John Johns and Mary Campbell of Lansing, Mich.

Canadian dance champions Barry Soper and Louise Lind of Vancouver finished fourth ahead of David Sutton of Guelph, Ont., and Mary Church of Toronto and Jim Holden and Brenda Sandys, both of Toronto.

The Vancouver dance couple go on to the world competitions along with the three women's singles competitors, men's champion Toller Cranston of Toronto and pairs champions Val and Sandra Bezic of Toronto.

Cranston finished second behind John Misha Petkevich of Great Falls, Mont., while the Bezics were third behind Ken Shelley and JoJo Starbuck of Los Angeles and Mark and Melissa Militano of New York City.

Poker-faced Skip Held Pat Consols' Hand

GUELPH (CP) — Ontario representatives at the Canadian curling championship March 1-5 in Quebec City will be a Toronto rink skipped by Bob Charlebois, a 23-year-old poker-faced chief metal apprentice.

Charlebois won the Ontario championship Saturday by winning 10-7 over another Toronto rink skipped by Bruce Munro, another 23-year-old.

However, in the final game it appeared that Charlebois was going to blow it.

With the score 8-3 after the seventh end Charlebois smiled for one of the few times in more than 100 ends of curling in the four-day championship at the Guelph Curling Rink.

He even passed chocolate bars and soda pop to members of his rink while Munro ordered some cigars, chomped nervously on his gum and tugged his sweater down.

The air of relaxation changed two ends later when Munro closed the score to 8-6 and showed promises of pulling a sensational comeback. After the third end, he had been behind 5-1.

But Charlebois regained his composure and counted two in the 10th. Munro got one back in the eleventh but ran out of rocks on the 12th and conceded.

"Yup, we almost blew it," said Charlebois, a lanky six-foot-three skip who moved to Toronto from Brandon, Man., in 1960.

"We're like that in just about every game," he said. "We take a big lead, go to sleep in the middle ends, and then really have to rally near the end."

Three of the eight games Charlebois won in the 18-rink, double-elimination championship featured three-rock counts in the 11th end.

His only loss in nine games was to Munro—9-6 in the sixth round.

All members of the winning rink are older than the skip.

The vice-skip is Rick Palmer, 28-year-old chartered accountant. Second Ray Lilly, 27, is a recreation director at Seneca College and lead Jim McGrath, 24, works in the invoice control department of a tire company.

Charlebois gained the finals by defeating Jim Waite of St. Thomas, 28, 7-4 in an earlier round Saturday.

Munro defeated John Winford, a 25-year-old public school teacher from Oshawa.

Swaps Berenson for Unger

Bowman Reclaims Job Behind Blues' Bench

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

After the National Hockey League all-star break general manager Scotty Bowman of St. Louis Blues said he was going out a winner after directing the West Division stars to a 2-1 win over the East.

He relinquished his coaching duties before the start of this season to Al Arbour but came out of retirement as a coach for the all-star game.

And now he is behind the St. Louis bench again.

The all-star victory snapped a long drought for Bowman in key games. His team had been winless in 12 straight Stanley Cup final games and two previous all-star games.

Second in the West, the Blues have won only five and tied three of the games since New Year's and Bowman announced Sunday he was reclaiming the coaching duties from Arbour.

The effects were immediate as the Blues drubbed Philadelphia Flyers 6-2. The victory at Philadelphia was St. Louis' first on the road in eight games.

In other Sunday games, Bobby Hull, who the previous night equalled a career mark for three-goal games in Chicago's 6-2 win over Minnesota North Stars, scored his 34th of the year in a 1-0 Black Hawk win over Pittsburgh Penguins; Toronto Maple Leafs held on for a 4-3 victory over Buffalo Sabres; Boston Bruins saw their 19-game win streak at home ended in a 4-4 tie with Minnesota, and Detroit Red Wings downed California Golden Seals 5-2.

In addition to the Chicago-Minnesota game Saturday, Los Angeles Kings thumped Montreal Canadiens 6-3, Toronto downed Philadelphia 4-2, New York Rangers edged Vancouver Canucks 5-4 and Boston edged Buffalo 4-3.

Bowman, watching his Blues during recent games, saw the writing on the wall and Saturday traded away captain Red Berenson and Tim Ecclestone to Detroit for centre Gary Unger and winger Wayne Connelly.

Sunday came the news Arbour had resigned and would return to active service within a week to 10 days to bolster the St. Louis defence.

Both men emphasized the change was temporary and that Arbour would be back as coach next year.

"I think I can help more now in a playing capacity," said Arbour, a 38-year-old native of Sudbury, Ont.

GARY UNGER

In trading off Berenson and Ecclestone, Bowman got rid of the NHL Players' Association president and St. Louis players' representative. Berenson and Ecclestone were the leading Blues' scorers.

Bowman said the thought of trading Berenson hadn't even entered his mind until he found that Unger, 23 and a potential superstar, was available in Detroit's housecleaning that has seen the Red Wings complete at least three other deals in recent weeks.

Detroit general manager Ned Harkness said that Unger "hasn't been doing anything" for the team this year. He had scored only 13 goals after leading the team with 42 last year.

Newcomer Fran Huck scored twice for the Blues against Philadelphia in a game that saw both benches clear when Flyers' Andre Lacroix high-sticked defenceman Barclay Plager in the second period.

At Boston, the North Stars opened a 3-0 lead in the first period, then were held together by veteran goalie Gump Worsley who faced a barrage of 67 Boston shots.

Third-period goals by Ken Hodge and Johnny Bucyk pulled the East Division leaders into the tie that saw them fall three games shy of the record for home victories set by a Bruin team during the 1929-30 season.

Howe scored twice for the Red Wings at Oakland as Detroit broke a five-game winless streak and moved into a tie with Buffalo for fifth in the East with 38 points each, 17 behind Toronto.

The Maple Leafs scored on their first two shots at Buffalo and took a 3-0 lead going in the first period before the Sabres got their game going. Defenceman Jim McKenny's unassisted goal early in the third was the winner.

Buffalo lost goalie Roger Crozier indefinitely with a back injury after only 58 seconds when Dave Keon took the Leafs' first shot then piled into Crozier along with two other players.

Crozier's replacement, Joe Daley, had a shaky start and the Leafs capitalized, George Armstrong scoring on the second Toronto shot of the period.

The Bruins were hard-pressed Saturday. They opened a 4-0 lead, Phil Esposito's 46th goal and two assists making him the first player ever to hit the 100-point mark twice before Buffalo responded with three third-period goals.

Ralph Backstrom, traded by Montreal to the Kings last week, scored twice against Canadiens' goalie Phil Myre

Gump Stops 63

BOSTON (AP) — Lorne (Gump) Worsley is a roly-poly goalie nearing 42 years of age. He hates flying, but he laughs at flying pucks as one of the finest at his trade in the National Hockey League.

"I'm ready to play another game—in about a week," Worsley joked Sunday night after a fantastic 63-save performance in helping Minnesota North Stars to a 4-4 tie with the mighty Boston Bruins.

The Gumper was able to laugh after stopping a blistering barrage that ended Boston's 19-game home winning streak, just three short of the NHL record fashioned by the Bruins in the 1929-30 season.

"These things happen," he said after Boston outshot the North Stars 67-32. "Don't forget, we're a West Division team and they're a powerhouse, the cream of the crop.

"It's no crime to tie the Boston Bruins in Boston Garden."

Worsley, a former star for New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens, was fantastic after Minnesota built a 3-0 first period lead and then held on against the Boston onslaught.

"He's tough when he gets hot," said Boston coach Tom Johnson, a Hall of Fame defenceman. "He had a great game.

"We certainly had enough scoring chances, but he stopped us."

Cesare Maniago was ripped for 57 shots in Minnesota's last visit to Boston, a 5-2 loss to the Bruins. Worsley took over the North Stars' club record for saves in the Garden, but doesn't want to add to it.

Asked whether he would like to challenge the NHL record of 83 shots on goal by the Bruins against Sam Lo-Presti of Chicago in 1941, Worsley replied:

"When that happens, I pack it up."

Ties Two Records, Then Hull Hurt

CHICAGO (AP) — Bobby Hull didn't waste time Sunday night in getting the 544th goal of his career or joining Chicago Black Hawks' growing injured list.

The Golden Jet scored No. 544

BOBBY HULL

and his 34th of the season at 11:17 of the first period to tie Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Montreal Canadiens as the second-highest goal producer in National Hockey League. Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings has 781 and is still going.

Midway in the second period, while the Hawks were killing off a penalty, Hull broke down the left side in an attempt to bypass Richard and score a short-handed goal.

Bobby missed and then lost his balance, crashing into the boards. The 32-year-old superstar appeared stunned and had to be helped off the ice. He did not return to action.

The Hawks managed to make Hull's goal stand up for a 1-0 victory over Pittsburgh Penguins.

Saturday, Hull equalled another Richard record by scoring three goals for the 26th time in his career as the Black Hawks tripped Minnesota North Stars 6-2.

Hull left the stadium before the game ended Sunday and Hawk coach Billy Reay said his star suffered a bruised muscle in the lower right back.

"He also hit his head and was stunned. The muscle will probably stiffen up tomorrow. He'll have it x-rayed and then we'll just have to wait and see how long he is out."

Hundred Habit

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

One-hundred-point seasons could become habit-forming for Phil Esposito.

The Boston Bruin centre became the first National Hockey Leaguer to score 100 points or more in a season during the 1968-69 season with a record 126, made up of 49 goals and 77 assists.

Saturday he again crashed the 100-point barrier, scoring his 46th goal and adding two assists for 101 points while staying 15 ahead of team-mate Bobby Orr in the individual scoring race.

Hawks' Guerin Not Sympathetic About Cincy Problems

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Richie Guerin isn't worried about Cincinnati Royals. The coach of Atlanta Hawks has enough problems of his own and the biggest one is the Royals.

The Hawks edged the Royals 121-118 Sunday night and pulled to within 3½ games of Cincinnati in the battle for the second and last playoff spot in the National Basketball Association's Central Division.

"Getting into the playoffs would make our season," said Guerin. "I suppose Johnny Green being out will hurt Cincy, but I'm not really worried about them. I'm worried about us winning. . . . "

Green, oldest player in the NBA at 37, scored 30 points before a pulled groin muscle forced him to the sidelines.

Elsewhere, Philadelphia 76ers handed New York Knicks their third straight setback 127-99, Boston Celtics downed Chicago Bulls 104-96, Baltimore Bullets shaded Detroit Pistons 108-105, Los Angeles Lakers trounced San Francisco Warriors 119-104, Portland Trail Blazers turned back Cleveland Cavaliers 112-103 and San Diego Rockets walloped Seattle SuperSonics 124-107.

Saturday night, it was Philadelphia 118, Cincinnati 109; Chicago 109, New York 102; Phoenix Suns 119, Cleveland 91; Los Angeles 115, San Francisco 108; Milwaukee Bucks 111, San Francisco 85.

Atlanta opened a 91-77 lead over Cincinnati late in the third period before Norm Van Lier and Green sparked a rally that edged the Royals to the front.

Philadelphia completed New York's lost weekend behind Archie Clark's 33 points and Billy Cunningham's 28.

John Havlicek and Jo Jo White paced a second-half comeback as Boston wiped out a 12-point halftime deficit and ended Chicago's six-game winning streak. Havlicek scored 11 of his 32 points in the third period and White dropped in 11 of his 24 in the final quarter.

Baltimore squandered most of a 13-point halftime lead but hung on to defeat Detroit with Earl Monroe scoring 25 points.

Elvin Hayes pumped in 23 of his 32 points in the second half as San Diego drubbed Seattle. Jerry West's 37 points and Wilt Chamberlain's 22 rebounds helped Los Angeles whip San Francisco and Geoff Petrie scored 12 of his 24 points in the third period to trigger Portland's victory over Cleveland.

Little Ones Hurt

HONOLULU (AP) — Arnold Palmer's head was up and the mobile face flashed the famous grin, but there were tight, weary lines of bitter frustration around the eyes.

"I have no confidence in my short game," the aging idol said. "I guess I'm scared of the short putts."

ARNOLD PALMER

Palmer again failed to get it going in the final round of the $200,000 Hawaiian Open golf tournament Sunday and finished four strokes back of winner Tom Shaw.

He was tied for first with Shaw and Dewitt Weaver going into the final round.

Shaw, who won the Bing Crosby just three weeks ago, rallied with birdies on two of the last three holes for a three-under-par 69 and a 273 total, 15 under par.

The victory, worth $40,000, pushed his earnings for the year to about $67,000.

Miller Barber, winner at Phoenix about two weeks ago, closed with a rush, taking birdies on the final two holes for a 68 and 274, good for second place and $22,000.

Weaver, still seeking his first victory in five years on the pro tour, slipped to third when he missed the green on the 17th. He had a 71 for 275 and $14,000

Palmer took a 73 for 277 and was tied for fourth at that figure with Lee Trevino and rookie Hubert Green.

Vollmer Pays Way

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Five-year tour veteran Fred Marti shot his fourth successive sub-par round Sunday, blistering the Ontario National golf course for a 13-under-par 271, to win the $25,000 United Air Lines-Ontario Open.

Marti's $5,000 first prize boosted his season winnings to $7,500 and qualified him for other major events on the Professional Golfers Association tour.

Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver shot a 69 for 284 and winnings of $287. One stroke behind him was Ken Fulton of Montreal with a 74 for the day and $274 in winnings.

The wrestling Mustangs whipped the McMaster Marauders 36-10 for an 8-2 win-loss record in dual meets with other universities. Due to a schedule mixup, McMaster's swim team arrived for its meet with Western with only 10 swimmers. Western came out the victor scoring 69 points to McMaster's 41.

Tom Manske of the Edmonton Olympic Club broke the Canadian record in the junior men's 3,000 metre walk. SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — Geoff Boycott, England's leading batsman, was ruled out of next Friday's seventh test against Australia when his left forearm was broken in the one-day limited overs cricket match between Marylebone Cricket Club and western Australia here today. Boycott was struck on the arm by the third ball of the match from test fast bowler Graham McKenzie. He pushed defensively at a delivery which pitched just short of a length. The ball kicked up viciously, flew over the shoulder of his bat and crashed against his forearm. The match was abandoned because of rain with Western Australia 24 for two off 5.4 overs in reply to MCC's 153 all out in 39.3 overs. Basil d'Oliveira was MCC's top-scorer with 54.

McNamara Stumps Hornets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gerry McNamara's goaltending helped second-place Orillia Terriers edge series-leading Galt Hornets 4-3 in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action Saturday.

But Galt took advantage of Oakville Oaks' mistakes to register a 3-2 victory Sunday and stay well ahead in the standings with 56 points to Orillia's 50.

Kingston Aces, after losing to Owen Sound Crescents 6-5 Saturday, buried the hapless Woodstock Athletics 12-4 Sunday and moved from sixth to fourth place in the eight-team series.

In another Sunday game, third-place Barrie Flyers smashed Belleville Mo-Hawks 9-2 behind John McMillan's four goals and three by Corby Adams, former Canadian Nationals player. Pat Monahan and Fern St. Onge scored once each for Barrie. Ralph Plane and Wayne McConnell got Belleville's only two goals.

At Galt Saturday, Terrier scorers were Bob Cunningham, Dave Nicholishen, Tom McCarthy and Gary Milroy.

The Hornets got two goals from Howie Dietrich and another from Ron Smith.

CORBY ADAMS

At Oakville, the Oaks blew a 2-0 lead in the first nine minutes of the third period and watched the Hornets slip past them on goals by Dietrich, Vance Millar and Bruce Reier. Frank Hincks and Ron Robinson scored for Oakville in a timid game.

Referee Walt Gardner gave Oakville's Ken Knapton a misconduct and game misconduct late in the third period. Until then, Oakville had received only three minor penalties and Galt four.

Owen Sound's Garrie Vaughan scored his fourth goal of the game at 3:34 of overtime on his home ice Saturday to put the Crescents ahead of Kingston Aces 6-5. Bill Abbott scored the other two goals for Owen Sound in the Crescents' first victory over the Aces in two seasons.

Kingston's scorers were Tom Thurlby, Pete Ford, Bill Rega, Terry O'Malley and Pat Driscoll.

At Kingston on Sunday, Driscoll and Eddie Long scored three times each, Charlie Convery twice and Ford, Rod Graham, Bob Clayton and Tom Smallman once each for the lopsided victory.

Marc Pezzin, Al Garner, MacWestgate and Gerry Harrigan managed the Woodstock goals.

Seeks Ski Solution

SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — Tsuneyoshi Takeda, Japanese member of the International Olympic Committee, pledged continued efforts Sunday to find a solution to the feud between IOC president Avery Brundage and the International Skiing Federation to help retain skiing contests in next year's Olympic Games here.

Takeda, a second cousin of Emperor Hirohito, said he will meet Switzerland's FIS president, Marc Hodler, here "in a few days," and then discuss the situation with Brundage.

He said this in connection with reports that Hodler recently hinted he would withdraw all skiing events from the 1972 Sapporo Winter Olympics if Brundage actually disqualifies several top Alpine skiers, accusing them of sham amateurism.

Halting Higgins

Fairways' defenceman Kevin Dockrill hands out a solid check to Kingston Frontenac forward Dave Higgins in an Eastern Ontario Junior B game played in Belleville Sunday. The play of the Fairway defence was one of the few bright spots in an otherwise dismal effort as the teams floundered to a 3-3 tie. The single point cinched third place for Kingston, while moving the Fairways closer to a play-off berth.

Crowd Threw Back Pucks

Fairways Flattered by Kingston Tie

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Sunday's 3-3 tie between the Belleville Fairways and Kingston Frontenacs should have gone a long way towards making everybody happy.

For Kingston, the tie assured them of third spot in the league standings.

Belleville on the other hand was able to move within a whisker of clinching the final play-off position in the six-team loop.

Meanwhile, the Belleville hockey fans were treated to the entertaining spectacle by two well - blanaced teams locked in a determined battle. Right? Not exactly.

All was not the sweetness and light that could be expected from the 3-3 outcome.

In the coaching department Kingston head man Ted Walton ended up with laryngitis. "He tried to yell at them" noted an informed Kingston source after the teams had stumbled through an inept second period, "but he just was not able to."

Belleville mentor Floyd Crawford wasn't doing any yelling after the contest — he wasn't in the building to yell, after the game's end.

The fans expressed what seemed to be the general sentiments of the crowd when two "souvenir" pucks were hoisted into the seats. They were thrown back onto the ice.

The 3-3 score flattered the home team, who appeared a trifle more inept than the floundering Frontenacs throughout the contest. Of the three Belleville goals, two were of the questionable variety.

Probably the lone player on the ice to give a top-rate performance was D'Arcy Walters, who was able to rise to the occasion on 32 of the 35 Belleville scoring attempts.

Kingston opened the scoring at 13.45 of the first period when Gord Rivoire batted a goalmouth pass from Dave Higgins behind Fairways netminder Ron Jury.

The one penalty incurred in the first 20 minutes was indicative of the lack of hitting throughout the contest.

Phil Treacy upped the count to 2-0 in the second frame, stealing the puck from John Mulvihill on a Belleville power play and walking in to deke Jury.

Danny Lupenette received credit for the initial Belleville tally when a point shot by Mulvihill bounced off a Kingston defenceman and then caromed into the net off Lupenette's leg.

The Frontenacs missed two excellent scoring chances in the second period when Dave Johnson's screened shot hit the goalpost and Treacy fired over the net in the final ten seconds of play.

Walters made a key save on Lupenette early in the third period smothering a shot on a partial breakaway by the speedy Belleville centre.

Rivoire counted his second goal of the game on a screened shot to up the Kingston lead to 3-1.

Brian O'Coin muscled his way in for a pair of third - period goals that salvaged the one - point effort for Belleville. On the first he batted the puck into the net after Walters had juggled a high shot by Joe Clarke and on the second he jammed the puck under the Kingston goalie after the Frontenac defence had been unable to dislodge him from in front of the net.

The defensive combination of Rick Holmes and Peter Ackerman was one of the few bright spots in the Belleville lineup.

The Fairways next encounter is Friday night in Trenton, where they could clinch a playoff berth. A win by the first - place Peterborough Lions in their game with Cobourg tonight would also ensure the Fairways of fourth place.

Mo-Hawks Better Over-all, But Much Worse in Spots

BARRIE (Special) — The odd thing about the 1970-71 edition of Belleville Mo-Hawks is that they are an improved club over last season, yet absorbing more lopsided defeats than last year's OHA Senior A entry.

Sunday, for instance, the Belleville seniors were routed 9-2 by Barrie Flyers, only seven days after the same Flyers had trimmed them 9-4.

The loss dropped the Mo-Hawks into a slim fifth-place sandwich, one point back of Kingston Aces, and one point ahead of Oakville Oaks.

John McMillan led Sunday's Barrie rampage with four goals. Former Canadian National Team member Corby Adams contributed three, while Pat Monahan and Fern St. Onge added sigles.

Ralph Plane's 14th goal of the season left the Flyers with a 2-1 edge after the opening 20 minutes.

WAYNE McCONNELL
Scores 15th

Wayne McConnell's 15th kept the Flyers' within 4 - 2 striking distance before they romped away with five unanswered last-period goals.

McMillan's fourth of the night at 2.56 of the final period, was the back-breaker.

"Up to then, the guys played fairly well. Then they just started to fly by us," said Mo-Hawk coach Dave Jones.

Backup goalie Bob Moon took over from Steve Rexe after McMillan gave the Flyers a 3-2 lead near the game's midway point. But Jones, who sat himself out with a bad cold, said the platooning move was not a spur-of-the-moment decision.

"We decided before the game, whatever happened, to have Steve and Bob split the game. I don't blame either of them for the score. Their fifth goal just took the steam out of us."

Jones' absence, along with that of Doug Senior, left George Godson and Billy Armour to do double duty centring the three Mo-Hawk forward lines. Mike Rexe's return after a flu bout gave the club four defencemen exclusive of Lou Kazowski who, like Senior, is not expected to return before play-offs.

Rexe, Ray Johnston and Ralph Plane drew three of the game's four minor penalties handed out by referee Blair Graham.

The loss meant that the Mo-Hawks and Kingston will battle for fourth place in Friday's 9 p.m. game in Belleville.

Hornets Take Flag

The Hornets buzzed to the Northern Electric Hockey league pennant Sunday, taking a 9-3 decision from the cellar-dwelling No-Stars in the final game of the regular season.

In the other contest the second place Dukes were held to a 4-4 tie by the Good Guys.

Charlie Reynolds fired three goals and helped on three others for the Hornets in their rout of the No Stars. Bill Goodfellow had two goals and two assists. Other scorers were Tiger Totten (2), Peter Kuening and Brian Allen.

Robbie McMurter tallied twice for the losers with Bob Brownlee rounding out the scoring.

Bob Baitley (2), Terry Casselman and Larry Roote tallied for the Good Guys in their 4-4 contest with the Dukes.

Bob Taylor paced the league runners - up with two goals. Tom Pierce and Rick Rosebush added a goal apiece.

Muldoon Holds Western Fort After Goegan Scores Winner

The Western Tire Juveniles parlayed some brilliant goaltending by Paul Muldoon and solid team play into a 4-3 victory over the Trenton Junior Ranks Juveniles in the opening game of their best - of - five OMHA play-down series.

The Belleville team scored three times in the second period to overcome a 3-1 Trenton lead and then Muldoon managed to hold the fort against the 1970 Ontario finalists as they stormed back in an attempt to tie the game in the final period.

RICK MEAGHER
Helps Juvenlles

Mike Goegan scored the winning goal with 15 seconds left in the second period, after tallies by Rick Meagher and Kevin Joudwa had pulled Belleville even. Sonny Farrell had scored in the first period for the winners.

In the other OMHA contest in Trenton Sunday, the home team scored after six minutes of overtime play to edge the Blake Kerr Imperial midgets 6-5.

Steve Keech scored the winning goal for Trenton who had trailed 1-0 after the first period. The teams were knotted 3-3 after 40 minutes of play and 5-5 at the end of regulation time.

Rob Foster had a pair of goals for the Imperials with the others going to Mike Watt, Brian Cousins and Andy Ricketts.

In playdown action Saturday Alan McIntosh tallied five goals to lead Trenton to a 7-0 win over the Belleville Kinsmen.

Peewee Question Remains

The city's Maurice Rollins Peewee All-Stars and Trenton were unable to establish a favorite for their upcoming OMHA play-down series from the results of their Sunday game, as the teams played to a 4-4 draw.

Tony Meagher and Paul Hayman looked after the Belleville scoring with two goals each.

Mulroney's Sunoco Novice B's mastered Cobourg with little trouble in a 5-1 Sunday decision.

Wayne Deighton led the way with a pair of goals, while Mark Crawford, Steve Mofina and Paul Chapman added the others.

Towers Food City Novices got a goal from Pat Willman to salvage a 1-1 tie with Kingston Lakeshore Sunday after dropping a 5-2 effort to Kingston Nationals the previous day.

Mike McDonald and David Harris tallied in Saturday's loss.

Mary Tries Harder

When you're number two in the snowmobile racing game you try harder.

At least it must have appeared that way to competitors in the Georgetown Jaycee competition this weekend as Belleville's Mary O'Neill took top women's honors at the meet to move into first place in the Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federations over-all standings.

The Arctic Cat racer walked off with four first place finishes in the second biggest competition held in the province this year.

The 292 class proved to be her best accounting for two of the wins, with the others coming in the 340 and 399 classes.

The over-all victory was good for $300 in prize money and four trophies.

Batawa Champs Chosen

Chris Pringle and Bennet Smets found themselves "going down hill" rapidly Saturday, and couldn't have been happier.

Pringle was the winner of the senior club championship at the Batawa ski club annual races held this weekend, while Smets was proclaimed junior club champ.

BRIGHTER SMILES

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — This wealthy city, home to some of movieland's most famous smiles, will have its water fluoridated beginning next spring. The city council has approved the treatment on a 3-2 vote, after heated debate.

Descendants of 1866 Immigrant Doomed by Genetic Disorder

Why, the family asked, did so many of their line become stricken in the prime of life with a lingering disease that always killed, generally by 40? Was there, somewhere, a bad seed, killing gene in the gift of life? There was, and ever will be until the fatal orgamism is either tamed or itself killed.

By DEE WEDEMEYER

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — No one is sure when it began for Judy Vink. Probably centuries ago in some forgotten ancestor, in his genes, the legacy of life.

Probably it was a mutation, a change in those genes, and life became doom to many of his descendants.

Slow, disabling, mysterious death, generally by 40 years of age.

And worse. It strikes only the members of a single family tree. They call it "the disease." It has been their curse for generations.

It began imperceptibly. A slight stumble, a speech slur. But the family knows. The disease—inevitable death, usually from lung complications.

Judy Vink's family noticed it about two years ago.

"She's got it," they said to themselves. When stairs become harder to climb, when a coffee cup became impossible to hold, Judy knew, too.

The disease had killed her father at age 33. It was killing two of her uncles.

"The children, that's the worst part," said Judy, 24, mother of three youngsters.

Henry Schut, from another branch of the family, has been luckier. He now is 60.

But he remembers. "There was not a single day in all my life that I didn't look at my footprints to see if I was going straight."

"Everytime he tripped, my heart would jump," said his wife, Hazel.

The family traces back to a Dutchman, Gerrit Jan Vandenberg. Four of his children came to the United States in 1866, settling in Iowa. Three of them were girls. They all got the disease.

One, Allie Vandenberg, married Hendrick Schut and had nine children. Seven of them got it.

In 1915, three sons of Allie Schut, who also had the malady, visited the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. The doctors could only say that the illness was hereditary.

Henry Schut was the son of one of those men. His father died when Henry was 14. A sister and brother of Henry's have succumbed to the illness. So have a number of cousins. Another brother is hopelessly ill with it.

Henry Schut made the disease his enemy.

He researched the family tree extensively. In the 1940s, he travelled through Iowa and Minnesota with a nurse gathering blood tests of the family. He persuaded his brother, John, to become a doctor to try to find a cure.
